FIRES.

The firemen were promptly on hand, but were only able to prevent the fire spreading to adjoining property. It is supposed to have been of incendiary origin. The barn was unoccupied. The insurance was small, so as to bad those overlooked by the above, to consider the fire much more serious than it actually was.

The police discovered a fire in the rear of Person & Co.'s stationery store, on Front Street, above the post office on Monday night, and had it extinguished before any serious damage was done.

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF PLAINFIELD.

In preparing the following sketch we are largely indebted for material to an excellent address written by Mr. G. R. Townley, City Clerk, which was published in 1876. Much of the material was gathered from the first settlers, however, and is published by us for the first time.

When in 1664 the above land now called New Jersey was first discovered by white men, the place was designated by the King of England as that land lies "bounding between the Delaware and the Hudson." In 1664 Governor Nicholson of Southtown granted into possession of the land on which Plainfield is now built.

In 1700 Plainfield consisted of a few log huts and wigwams.

Geologists say that the mountains and rocks on the Northwest of Plainfield afford positive proof-that thousands of years before the Mound Builders (as they themselves) came from the Continent and that glacier regions left their impressions footprints that ages afterwards mammoths, lizards, lizardine fishes and magnificent flowers existed on these fields for countless ages before the white man came.

In 1715 the first dwelling house was built.

In 1725 the first grist mill was erected, near what is now the Uptown pond, consisting of two stones, it was owned by the people of the "City Mills," owned by the French Brothers, and opposite The Plainfield Evening News office.

In 1730 the first school house was built, the location being at the present corner of North avenue and the road to Rahway, now Pease street. On corte years, with the exception of occasional wagons just coming into use, the only conveyance.

In 1734 the first bridge over Green brook was further utilized by another grist mill in the lower part of town.

During the Revolution skirmishing occurred here and in this vicinity, the summer of 1777 Washington is said to have visited the place and frequented the mountain heights to watch the movements of the enemies' troops. His headquarters, which he away of about four, had recently been moved from Morristown to a recently enlarged position near Bound Brook on the ridge overlooking and commanding the country around New Brunswick, where the British army encamped in the summer of 1776, under Gen. Lord Howe.

In 1781 the old Presbyterian Church was built, the location being at the present corner of North avenue and Second street.

In 1784 the first Baptist church was organized and erected a house of worship nearly on the site of the present edifice.

In 1785 the population was between 400 and 500.

In 1788, the First Presbyterian Church was built on the site of the present edifice, which was enlarged in 1842.

In 1828, Long's Hotel was established on the present site and has continued to this date a favorite resort for transient and permanent boarders. It is under the able management of Mr. Jos. B. Miller.

In 1829 a movement was made by a society of Friends, resulting in a new organization, who styled themselves the Orthodox Society the old organization being known as the Hicksite, a term of derision applied to them by the Orthodox. The latter society soon afterwards, about 1830, built a meeting house on Front street where the present building now stands, which was erected about four years ago. The new building is quite handsome and attractive and has a capacity of about 1,000 people.

In 1830, the M. E. Church organized a society and erected a meeting house near the present edifice.

In 1834, the Plainfield Academy, a frame building, was erected, and was built on the lands now adjoining the Presbyterian Church on the southwest, and the Plainfield Classical Institute was organized the following year, and the building, being burned down in 1840, on a lot opposite the Baptist Church. Both buildings are still standing, having been converted into private dwellings.

In 1835, the Plainfield Herald, the first newspaper, was established. Three sides were printed in New York and it is said to have been the largest paper in the State. It soon succumbed for want of patronage.

In 1839, the Plainfield Union, now the Central New Jersey Times, was started, still as then a weekly. The same year the first bank was chartered and the Second Baptist Church was organized.

In 1840, steam power was introduced on the new strap railroad extending through from Elizabethtown to Bound Brook and Somerville, as a substitute for the huge power to use for the two previous years.

In 1845, the population was about 1,500, but has more than doubled increased to 3,000, and the interval was marked by increasing business activity, including the erection of many new buildings and the opening of new streets.

In 1848, the first public school building was erected.

In 1850, the population was about 2,000, and during the next 25 years had increased to about 10,000 in 1875.

In 1854, the Madison House, a substantial four-story brick building, at the corner of the same location, was reopened located and well equipped for the accommodation of transient and family patrons. Its present lessee is Mr. Maurice Daly, under whose management it is well patronized.

In 1857, the Plainfield Gas Light Co. was organized, and its enterprise soon be judged not only by the quality of the light it furnishes, but also by its low rates charged, which are not more than three cents per light per month.

throughout, and cost $250,000. It is at present leased and managed by one of the most popular of hosts, Mr. S. V. Woodruff.

The state years the Muhlenberg Hospital was organized here.—Then also stabled the first town and Hose Foundry.

Among the hotels not already referred to are the Farmer's Hotel and the Somerset House, both long established and popular resorts. There is also Foote's Hotel, a large, fine place, the most recently started, having been but lately provided with modern accommodations and being well managed.

In June, 1871, there was begun Stillman Music Hall on Second street, a brick structure, on Front street. It is to be completed by Sept. 1, 1884, and is to cost about $30,000. When completed it will be one of the finest opera houses in the State. Mr. I. S. Melbourne has the contract for the carpentry.

Plainfield of 1884 is on the line of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, 24 miles south-westerly from New York city, and on the near line to Philadelphia, about 30 minutes ride shorter. It is pleasantly located on a gently sloping plain at an altitude of 100 feet above tide water. The underlying geological formation of this section of country is red sandstone and shale, which, when disintegrated, forms a soil composed of gravel and sand to a considerable depth, covered with a rich surface loam which affords a fertile soil and a quick healthy drainage. Plainfield has a population upwards of 10,000, including the villages of the north sides of Green Brook. It covers an area of 3 square miles or about 1,920 acres, as embraced in the territory included by Terrill avenue on the north; the city limits on the south and east, and extending from Mountain avenue on the northwest to the eastern limits of the city and township line.

The city proper is divided into four wards, and is governed by a Mayor and Common Council. The assessed valuation of personal property and real estate in the limits described (including North Plainfield) is $5,000,000, about one-fourth of the true value. There are about 1,600 legal voters in the corporate limits, and about 450 in the North Plainfield district mentioned.

The Fire Department, under the control of a board of managers, is a voluntary organization, consisting of 256 men, having three hand steam fire engines, one of which is in North Plainfield, each with hose carriage, one hook and ladder truck, and one hose company. The water supply is from 3,000 wells falling therewith and the two streams of Green brook and Cedar brook. The city is lighted with gas and gasoline. Several miles of the main thoroughfares are graded. The Terrill road, through the aid of artificial embankment, crossing the streets on substantial iron bridges.

There are three newspapers: The Evening News, (daily, Independent), The Central New Jersey Times (weekly, Republican), and The Granite Leaf (weekly, Democratic). There are three public halls: Van Doren Street Hall with a seating capacity of 900, Assembly Hall seating 300, and Lang's Hall, 400. There are two National banks with an aggregate capital of $250,000, one Savings Bank, and three Fire Insurance Companies.

The public and private educational advantages of both Plainfield and North Plainfield are of an excellent order and furnish first-class instruction to both sexes.

Thirteen fourteen churches having 3,300 members, as follows: 1 Presbyterian, 1 Episcopal, 1 Methodist Episcopal, 1 Congregational, 1 German Reformed, 1 Roman Catholic and 2 Society of Friends. Two of the largest buildings are stone, and the 1,200 others are principally frame.

Among the famous industries are the clothing manufactory of Schwabe, Baldwin, Twomey & Co., said to be among the first and largest in this line in the United States; the paper mill of Netherwood, Dalrymple & Co., erected by Mr. Potter, Jr., whose presses are of National reputation; the City Mills, a large and prosperous flour mill; the boundary already referred to; the extensive carriage factories under the late proprietorship of Mr. Moore, and several smaller manufactories, a steam marble mantle and the finishes of others of minor importance.

Large stocks are always carried in the summer season of the city, in which several hundred people will be employed in the manufacture of an article now and improved newspaper printing press, invented by Mr. Walter Scott, foreman of the famous Scott Printing Press Company.

The residences are generally of more enterprise than those of much larger cities, as will be shown by a scanning of the building catalogue of the Citizens' Directory, for the total number, the varied and tasteful designs of the times in the quality and price of their grade.

The hotels are among the finest in the State, and are well patronized by the summer boarders, who flock to the Watchung. The Park House, The City Hotel, Long's Hotel, Foote's Hotel, Somerset House and Fahnen's Hotel.

Since Plainfield was incorporated a city, the following gentlemen have filled the office of Mayor.

JOB MAIER, Republican, Mayor from 1869 to 1870.

JOHN H. EVANS, Democrat, Mayor from 1870 to 1872.

DR. CHARLES H. STILLMAN, Republican, Mayor from 1872 to 1874.

DR. JOHN C. SUTPHEN, Democrat, Mayor from 1874 to 1876.

JOB MAIER, Republican, Mayor (second term) from 1876 to 1878.

NATHAN HUBBEL, Democrat, Mayor from 1878 to 1880.

L. V. F. RANDOLPH, Republican, Mayor from 1880 to 1882.

Manufacturing are commercial interests; but whose its elegant residence property, and the interesting drives on level shaded streets, under continuous archways of maples and elms made delightful by the well kept, tasteful lawns. The drive on Netherwood heights affords a charming pleasure of endless variety over serpentine roadways, on an undulating surface covered with a natural growth of oaks and chestnuts, presenting an extensive and attractive view of dwellings and beautified grounds.

The Johnston Drive is a macadamized road along the brow of the Blue Ridge range, extending from the city limits through which Somerset Street passes to the picturesque and fine mountain retreat of Scotch Plains. Some of the highest points on the drive are 900 to 350 feet above the adjacent plain and through many of the choicest lands the eye can feast upon the magnificent valley, replete with quiet and rustic beauty. And, lastly, the ridge to Washington Rock is another attractive pleasure and well repays any one to visit the top of the rock. A long, steep mountain air, and extensive panoramic landscape. These things, with the natural advantages of location, have gained for Plainfield the reputation of being a sanitarium free from all epidemic or malaria, where many have checked the progress of physical decay and won back declining health by the genial influence of an exhilarating atmosphere, pure, wholesome water and unbounded hospitality. These circumstances in connection with the local improvements afforded, and the unsurpassed railroad facilities, have attracted a large percentage of New York business men and others who make Plainfield their home, and who daily traverse the city along the eighteen or twenty lines of travel from the great metropolis.

Fire Department Notes.

The brick stable being built in the rear of the house of Engine Co. No. 2, is about ready for occupancy. Arrangements are being made for the removal of the horses belonging to the engine, which are now boarded at Roberts' Livery Stables. The new brick stable of Engine Co. No. 1 is ready for their horses also. These have been kept in the private barn belonging to Mr. Charles Gressler.

Efforts are being made to secure a preliminary report from the committee appointed several months ago to purchase a steam truck and equipments to be attached to Engine Co. No. 1. In view of the work of the committee, being so nearly completed, the final report will probably be made at the following meeting after the horses have been placed in their new quarters.

The bi-Centennial and its Annual celebration of the New Brunswick Fire Department will be held on June 5, 6 and 7. The visiting Neptune Engine Co. No. 2, of that city have invited Plainfield Engine Co. No. 2, to be their guests on the occasion and participate.

Runaway.

John Sampson, the hand engineer, was driving up Pease street Saturday p. m., about nine o'clock, in a milky belonging to John W. Laing, when the horse took fright and ran away, throwing Mr. Sampson out and slightly injuring his hip. The milky was demolished.

—Chief of Police W. S. Cline, Jr., was the recipient in the parade Friday, of numerous compliments from friends and admirers along the line, which were called his fame as a marksman. He was not able to be present, however, to look forward to a good time ended with Tuesday's Band.

TEMPERANCE.

The Reform Club of Bound Brook has a large and enthusiastic meeting Wednesday evening at the town hall, conducted by a delegation of the Plainfield Reform Club, and the Plainfield Band (white), Judge Wadsworth presiding. The speakers were Mayor Maxson, Messrs. Robert Manning, Frank Dodge, E. Lamphear, and Judge Wadsworth.

Mayor W. B. Maxson and Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis a few days ago made addresses to a large audience in Masonic Hall New Brunswick, N. J., under the auspices of the Reform Club of that city. A gentleman from New Brunswick states that they had the ring of true metal about them.

The Reform Club have a number of very fine voices who make the air musical evenings in the vicinity of their headquarters in Front street.

The Baptist Church of New Brooklyn was well filled last Wednesday evening and work commenced by the delegation led by Mr. Wm. W. Pike. John H. Sayers, Thomas Price and Mr. Pike made addresses on the subject of temperance resulting in much enthusiasm and 40 signers to the pledge. This delegation have engagements for Mr. Bethel, Rimbeth and other places.

A Novel May Celebration.

The Sunday school of the Methodist Episcopal church indulged Saturday in a regular May Celebration after the pattern with which every one is familiar by hearsay but few have ever witnessed. The school assembled in the lecture room of the church at nine o'clock in the morning, and from there were transported in carriages by Vail's Grove on Fourth street, about opposite the Krona station. There they were plentifully supplied with swings, hammocks, croquet, balls and balls, foot-balls, and other helps for passing the time pleasantly. The event of the day, the crowning of the May Queen, occurred about three o'clock. In this the entire school participated, marching around the May Pole led by the Superintendent, Dr. Hurlbut, and the pastor, the Rev. Mr. Tuttle. Next a selection was made of the queen of the pole, Dr. Hurlbut [illegible] as May Queen, Miss Daisy Wendell, and seated her in a bower of flowers and roses. Miss Anthony in a neat speech then crowned her, and Miss Lily Steiner presented her the sceptre. Four small children representing stars paid their homage, followed by numerous others in various characters. The May Queen responded finely, her decorum and manner receiving equal praise from all present. Four young couples, after bowing to their Queen, took their places around the May Pole, and danced about it in various fantastic and pretty figures, twining and braiding long strips of ribbon attached thereto about the pole. With the dancing the May Pole part of the program was concluded. All the boys of the school wore red and white linen caps and rosettes, and the girls red and white sashes.

A string band furnished music during the day. The school returned home about six o'clock. The great success of the celebration was due in special to the Superintendent, Dr. Hurlbut, and to the chairman of the committee, Mr. Oscar Teale, and in general to the hearty manner in which their efforts were seconded by their co-workers.

Social Gathering of Odd Fellows.

A district meeting of Odd Fellows was held Monday evening last in the rooms of Plainfield Lodge No. 44, at which there was in attendance the Grand Master of the State, Mr. Grassman, of Hoboken; G. W. Hamsall, Jr., of South Trenton Lodge, No. 31; Dr. W. H. Isaacs of Camden, and other prominent officers. Speeches were made by the above named officers, and by P. G., John Bodine, and by P. G., Titsworth, both of Plainfield Lodge; P. G., Brown of Westfield Lodge; and also by P. G., W. H. Warner, of Apollo Lodge, No. 200, of Philadelphia; and by the N. G. of Somerville Lodge.

At about 10:30 o'clock the meeting adjourned to Bock's saloon, and the assemblage regaled themselves with the sumptuous feast provided by mine host Bock.

Some of the visitors remained over night at Lang's House, while others departed on the evening trains, all well pleased with the affair.

Church Sociable.

The Church Social, held in the Seventh Day Baptist Church on Wednesday evening the 28th inst., was the last one of the series, and perhaps the thought stimulated all present to put on their choicest, and also to appreciate the program which had been prepared for the occasion.

The refreshments were all that could be desired, and the reputation of this society for making their friends forget the cares of the world during the social hour was well established. The committee on entertainment performed their duties to entire satisfaction. All who took part won the praises of the audience and the rendering was universal.

—A more beautiful suburb than surrounds Plainfield would be difficult to find, or a more charming city than Plainfield.

—The contests for the yellow ribbons at the High School are going on actively as ever this year.

Base Ball.

A game of base ball was played last week on the Crescents of Plainfield and the Commercials of Long Island, at the grounds of the former, near Bonnell's & Co.'s, old cloth factory Friday. The Crescents were defeated by the following score:

Commercials— 1 2 3 1 2 0 0 2 0. Total 11.
Crescents— 0 1 2 1 0 0 1 2 1. Total 8.

The game was called at 2:30 o'clock.

The defeat of the Crescents is attributed to the accident to their catcher, McMahon, who in the second inning was struck in the groin by the ball, the blow disabling him for a while and crippling him and the club the remainder of the game.

The play of the Crescents was on all sides considered good enough to have won the game but for this accident.

Experienced persons among the spectators were astonished at the rulings of the umpire, who was an individual from Brooklyn, N. Y., and considered them very unfair to the Crescents.

The Commercials are the champion club of Long Island.

There was a large number of spectators present, probably 500 persons, who manifested much interest throughout the game.

During the progress of the game, while John Murray was at the bat, the ball broke making such a noise that it startled a horse attached to a two-seat rockaway, belonging to Michael Sweeney. The horse started on a gallop, making a circuit of the field, without doing any damage, but causing some excitement among the spectators until he was stopped.

The episode drew attention for a while from the game, and caused the play to be stopped also.

Last Saturday afternoon the Crescents went to Elizabeth to play their first game of the season with the Elizabeth Athletic Club.

The game was quite exciting throughout At the beginning of the ninth inning, the Crescents at the bat, the score was 6 to 5 their favor, when a misplay, gave four runs to the Elizabeths, and advantage which enabled them to win the game.

SALUTATORY.

THE PLAINFIELD EVENING NEWS appears to-day for the first time. What it is, may be set down to the enterprise of the publisher. What it shall be hereafter will be largely due, of course, to the degree of support accorded it by the reading public of this beautiful city. We believe that THE NEWS will meet the "long felt want." Why not? There seems to be room for it. Its columns will be devoted largely to the dissemination of news—home news particularly, and the advancement of local interests generally. All the local news possible to obtain shall be collected, and printed, with due regard always to propriety. Nothing improper in statement or vile in suggestion shall be permitted.

It shall speak boldly on all live topics, but never willfully exceed the limits prescribed and observed in respectable journalism. It will be, in brief, the people's newspaper—or nothing. There is not a man so poor, or a woman so helpless, to whom it will not be a friend.

By special arrangement with the American Press Association we shall have the latest telegraphic news to the hour of going to press, as well as the latest general news and the other features which appear to-day and will continue hereafter, together with such improvements still as may become expedient. Enterprise costs, but we believe in the end, that it pays.

We will endeavor to be at all times just, and make the NEWS worthy of the influence which a daily paper must necessarily have, so lasted as it is to be, and starting, as it does, with thousands of readers.

Politically the NEWS will be independent, but will not be neutral.

We start out modestly, because we mean to succeed. We will enlarge and improve as soon as we feel that public support justifies it. Yet we are confident that, even in its present form, THE NEWS will be considered a very interesting local newspaper. It begins its career hopefully because it means to be a progressive, straightforward, and enterprising—honest in its purposes, outspoken in its opinions, and reliable in its statements. As such we believe it will deserve the sympathy and be accorded the patronage of every resident in this vicinity. While its expressed opinions will of necessity be its own, it will always try to correctly interpret the people's sentiments on all questions of public concern.

Enough has been said, however. THE NEWS prefers to be accepted for what it is, rather than on the strength of what it promises to be. As such it is offered to the public of Plainfield and vicinity.

ABOUT ADVERTISING.

Prosperous business men know that much of their success is due to judicious advertising, and that, in a city such as Plainfield, there are no better mediums than the local papers. This rule applies equally well to all cities of like character. All business men know that it is essential to advertise their goods. Some o it one way, some do it another. When a man places his name over the door of the building in which he happens to be located, he advertises. Most of our business people advertise when they desire to do so; and this is as much as can reasonably be expected of them.

We desire to have the city make faster progress. This can best be accomplished by inducing our people to spend their money where they live. Our leading, dry goods, shoe, millinery, jewelry, drug and grocery stores are capable of supplying everybody in Plainfield. The more advertising, the greater the amount of business. Those people who disdain to advertise at all; who rely solely on the number of years they have lived in our city, are of the class who have fallen behind the age. Such people say: "I never advertise—everybody knows me. Why, my dear sir, I have lived here all my life—was born and brought up here."

They are advanced in years, and sweetly unconscious of having fallen utterly out of the race. They smoke their pipes serenely in peace, and are seldom disturbed. But, so long as they are satisfied, and happy, who in his heart can censure them? In their day they were propably abreast of the times. But their day is not ours. There was a day of stage coaches, while ours is one of steam and electricity. The merchant who quits advertising just as his neighbors are about to do more than ever, will soon find himself drifting to the rear. So long, however, as he is content, THE NEWS has naught but respect for his wishes. When he wakes up he will advertise—if not in THE NEWS, in one of our contemporaries. But, so long as he will do what he can to improve his own business, and thereby increase the general prosperity, we shall never find fault with what, after all, is but a matter of choice. If he is a good, earnest citizen, who desires to get his share of the trade, the public will soon find it out.

Advertisements have been showered upon us about as rapidly as we have thus far been able to attend to them, and several have been omitted to appear later, when we will get over the rush consequent upon starting, among people who have apparently become so set as to get started. It does no good to have every business in Plainfield represented for our mutual profit and that of the public generally.

REMEMBERING THE BRAVE DEAD.

Decoration Day was observed Friday in this locality in much the same manner that it was observed throughout this great country. The memory of the brave soldiers who died during the struggle was permeated with appropriate exercises under the management of their no less brave comrades who survived. Friday was but the culmination of the ceremonies, begun Sunday week in a memorial service, the attendance at which exceeded anything in large and handsome Methodist Church in which the services was held. Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., attending in a body, and the Rev. Mr. Goodrich, pastor-elect of the Congregational Church, preaching a sermon from the text, "I have fought a good fight," in which in eloquent terms he paid a glowing tribute to the memory of the illustrious dead and the equally illustrious living.

The ceremonies Friday consisted of an observance of the occasion of visiting the graves by a general holiday. The day was bright and pleasant, slightly chilly, the groves and dwellings on the thoroughfares through which the line of march extended being generally decorated with bunting, and the streets being enlivened by an unusual number of persons, some merely spectators, others active participants.

The graves of soldiers were visited at the several cemeteries in this city and North Plainfield and flowers reverently planted in the mounds by the loving hands of loyal kindred and friends.

The procession paraded in the following order:

Platoon of Police.
Marshall and Aids.
Mayor, Clergymen, Common Council, Board of Education and City Officers
In Carriages.
Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R.
Disabled Soldiers and Sailors in Carriages.
Flower Wagon.
Girls representing States of the Union.
Plainfield Sonsgerland.
St. Mary's T. A. B. Society.
Drum Corps.
Fire Commissioners in Carriages.
Chief and Assistants of Fire Department.
Fire Department Organizations.
Reform Club.
Delegations from the Turn-Verein and other Societies.
Comrades W. W. Cornell and J. W. Codington, Assistant Marshals. City Officials and other invited guests assembled at the Council Chamber at 1:30 o'clock p. m., and were assigned conveyances by Assistant Marshal Cornell.

Following is the line of march: Park avenue to Fifth street, through Fifth, Richmond, Front, Somerset, Emily, Grove, Central avenue, Fifth, Liberty, Seventh, Crescent avenue to City Park.

Devotional exercises were held in the City Park, and included remarks by the Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, of the Seventh Day Baptist Church of this city, and others.

After services in the Park, the organizations formed and continued the line of march, passing along Park avenue, Second street, Watchung avenue, Front street to Park avenue, when they were dismissed and the ceremonies brought to an end, to be as reverently repeated in succeeding years.

To Subscribers and Others.

Mr. James Clawson, who has charge of the subscription department of this paper, began operations a week ago last Wednesday by canvassing Green Brook, and returned home with such success that he has averaged over 100 subscribers per day. As it would not be possible, in the brief time allowed, for him to reach all the people of Plainfield and North Plainfield, we have arranged to have the first number of the NEWS left at every residence, that all may have an opportunity to begin with us. Those who may not wish the paper continued will confer a favor by informing the carrier as he calls with the second number Tuesday evening. We believe the people of Plainfield want, and will support a good local daily paper and are determined to give them an opportunity to show that we, although an alleged stranger, know them better than our weekly neighbors. The spirit and enterprise of this community is shown everywhere in and about the city, in its streets, buildings, drives and public improvements generally, so clearly that "the wayfaring man though a fool need not err therein." At least we think so, and the reception given our Mr. Clawson confirms us in the opinion that a weekly paper will such a community? Bah!

He's Struck a Bonanza.

Mr. Thos. W. Morrison, a practical printer of New York, and well some journalistic experience, received while connected with the Evening Post, a proposition for latest addition to the editorial fraternity of this city. He will publish the DAILY EVENING NEWS of Plainfield, the first number of which is expected to appear within a week or ten days. The last number of the Somerset County Democrat announces that a stranger should have discovered what a needy field the city and its people do not see "what a daily paper will pay!"—Courier-Journal, and not.

So do.

—Our advices from Plainfield are to the effect that Mr. Morrison is receiving subscribers to his paper at the rate of 100 per day. Whether this be true or not, receiving assurances of support from his former patrons will advertise in his paper. Plainfield has two good weekly newspapers, and a large, healthy daily will be welcomed by the citizens of that place, and will undoubtedly increase the number of New York Sun readers there. This is not humbug, but the result of a canvass made by a citizen of Plainfield.—Somerset Democrat.

We will invest his money and the experience of years in the enterprise, and will win success by deserving it. We will publish in Plainfield the PLAINFIELD EVENING NEWS, will make its appearance next Saturday week. Our advices from Plainfield are to the effect that in by years of industry to accumulate the necessary capital, and by a long experience in the business, we are the manner to do it with.—Home Review, New Brunswick, Middlesex.

SUNDAY IN CHICAGO.

The Leaders and Delegates on Hand and Hard at Work.

Friends of All the Candidates in a Hospital Mood—An Estimate of the First Ballot—What Some of the Big Men Say.

CHICAGO, June 2.—Probably within the next twenty-four hours the question of the choice of a delegate to the Republican National convention will be reverberating through the rafters of the exposition building. But possibly they won't. The board of trade, Judge Chetlain, especially urged, and the question whether this week's convention is to be or not to be is one with which the board can, if it chooses, have considerable to do. It is understood that so far as the fact that it has been decided to place in the convention hall from which it might look upon the proceedings.

The Republican hope of the building stands is the property of the city, and the continuance of it by the exposition managers is purely a matter of suffrage.

It is stated on good authority that Lawyer John L. Stafford will go into Judge Drummond's court and ask that the injunction now pending against the occupancy of the lake front be immediately enforced. In order to this effect is granted, it will close the building and oust the convention. The Republican committee is fully advised of the conditions of affairs and will have counsel on hand to resist any application of the kind.

It is thought that the wise councils of Mayor Harrison will act as a check to the aldermen carrying their ill feeling to the extreme limit.

Speculations of Leading Politicians.

CHICAGO, June 3.—Mr. Roosevelt says: "The following New York delegates are already certain for Edmunds: George W. Curtis, Joseph H. Choate, Elihu Root, Andrew Carnegie, John L. Gilbert, Edward H. Packard, Theodore Roosevelt, John A. King, alternate for John R. Crane, E. H. Abbey, D. D. Bayard, Cook, Jr., Samuel D. Babcock, Hamilton Fish, Jr., Thomas Cornell and Duncan Ballantine."

In Michigan, Congressman Horr says, there is but a single Arthur delegate. The delegation is about equally divided between Blaine and Edmunds, but he says they could be voted solidly for either if the matter, after their arrival, became convinced that Blaine is the most available candidate.

Mr. Keyes, a delegate from Madison, says that Arthur will only have two votes in all the Wisconsin delegation, while the remainder will be divided between Blaine and Edmunds.

Senator Benjamin H. Harrison, of the Indiana delegation, will not admit that he is a candidate, and says that if he were he should not be here. He says he is for Blaine and will do his best to carry out the Twenty-three Indiana delegates who now favor the presentation of his own name to the convention.

Mr. D. S. Brown, one of the principal proprietors of The Rochester Democrat and Chronicle, says: "I feel so strongly in favor of Blaine that I am willing to say flatly all I can to help it along. If he fails in receiving the nomination I shall support the Democratic candidate. The New York delegation will be found solid for Blaine. We give Blaine 39 votes, Arthur 20 votes and the rest scattering, with Edmunds at the head of the scatterers. In Ohio and Indiana the people want Blaine, and in Connecticut, Massachusetts and New Jersey, also West Virginia. If all this can be believed Blaine is the strongest Republican who could possibly be put up. Front street to Park avenue, Second street to Park avenue, when they were dismissed and the ceremonies brought to an end, to be as reverently repeated in succeeding years.

Ex-Governor Jones, who acted as an Edmunds meeting Sunday night, and insisted that Edmund's candidacy was as real as that of Blaine or Arthur. "But I must say," said Mr. Cushing, "that I consider Blaine the strong candidacy. If his candidacy be out of the question, we should find a man representing his ideas, and more available in the convention. Edmunds could carry New York state against anybody whom the Democrats might name."

"I am in favor of the nomination of Blaine because the country will realize in a very few years that there is something immensely vital in his foreign policy," says Mr. Nathaniel Paige, of Washington.

A Guess on the First Ballot.

CHICAGO, June 2.—A special to the United Press says: "The wire pulling is at its height. Considerable have been made in the hotels, and the several headquarters present busy scenes. Of course no prediction can be made with any degree of reliability.

"There is a strong undercurrent setting against the nomination of a dark horse, and the drift of prognostication is that one of the four principals must be chosen. There is also a belief that on the first vote of the convention, and three days are generally conceded to be sufficient time in which to settle the question, Edmunds may come to claim ninety-three votes that will stick to him till the last hope expires. The following figures are given in a detailed estimate of the first ballot, published by The Chicago Sunday Herald, which was prepared with great care, and is believed from an impartial stand point to represent the situation as accurately as possible at this time: Blaine, 336; Arthur, 309; Edmunds, 78.

Logan is given 56, Sherman the 57 from Ohio, while Hawley is given 30 and the remaining votes. There are 820 delegates, 411 being necessary for a choice.

Collector Robertson, of New York, says that Blaine will receive 380 votes on the first ballot.

Sunday Scenes at the Hotels.

CHICAGO, June 2.—At the hotels during Sunday there was more confusion and excitement than on any previous day. Sunday seems to be the favorite day for the arrival of visitors, took possession of the spacious ladies' ordinary, and here at least a couple of thousand people could be found any hour of the day.

WORK OF DYNAMITERS.

The English Government and People Getting Excited and Anxious.

What the Newspapers Have to Say—The American Government to be Asked to Arrest Hoose—The Pope on the Situation.

LONDON, June 2.—The result of investigations by the London police have made it almost certain that the Nelson monument in Trafalgar square was the main objective point of the miscreants who planned the explosions of last Friday night. The police now announce the theory that the dynamiters aimed to concentrate public excitement about the square in order to obtain a clear field for operations elsewhere. The conspirators, according to this theory, expected that the explosions in the popular and populous locality of Trafalgar square would cause an immense rush of people from St. James Park, Spring Garden and the other resorts in that vicinity, and calculated that the explosion in Scotland yard would still further divert the attention of the police and public, increase the panic, and leave the dynamiters free to make attacks upon the government buildings, Downing street and upon the houses of parliament.

The general feeling of the public regarding these outrages is no longer so much out of temper as of fear and disgust. On every side are heard the most emphatic denunciations of the American authorities for allowing the dynamite propaganda to be so openly carried on in their midst, and many American cities. Hearty anathemas are heaped upon the head of O'Donovan Rossa, who is believed here to be an active dynamite conspirator. A letter has been read in the London press which the United States officials describe him to be.—A portion of the London press mean to insist upon Rossa's arrest by the American authorities.

An interview was held between the Prince of Wales and Premier Ferry, in Paris, on the subject of the recent dynamite outrages which is strongly regarded as having been planned and executed by Fenians, using France as a base of operations. The Prince of Wales' reception in Paris was, it is alleged by well informed persons, not at all to the cause which should be pursued by the French authorities relative to the matter. The Prince expressed himself as being entirely satisfied with the statements made by M. Ferry.

Press Comments.

PARIS, June 2.—In Republique Francaise is moved by the dynamite explosions in London to say that on reflection it believes that O'Donovan Rossa's crowd cannot be longer tolerated, and that the hound and his mess, generally pack should be stamped out at once and forever.

BERLIN, June 2.—The press of this city, in view of the explosions in London, unanimously express sympathy with the powers shall adopt Prince Bismarck's proposal for a mutual understanding in regard to Socialists, Anarchists and Dynamiters.

VIENNA, June 2.—The Vienna press devotes considerable editorial space to the London explosions, and views with alarm the departure of a large quantity of dynamite from New York for Austria, bringing, it is said, a large quantity of dynamite. The papers unanimously urge the government to forbids the importation of explosives, except in quantities only by the government, and to prescribe a severe penalty for any infraction of this law.

The Pope Speaks.

ROME, June 2.—A letter from the Pope was read in all the Catholic churches yesterday, denouncing the authors of the London explosions, and warning Catholics to hold themselves aloof from secret societies under the pain of excommunication. The letter also assails the Pope's attack on Free Masonry, and entreats Catholics to beware of its insidiousness.

Still Sore on the Locker Matter.

LONDON, June 2.—A feeling of keen sorrow still exists in Berlin over the Herbert-Locker incident. It is now given out by persons who have close relations with the imperial chancellor's office that it will probably be a long time before a successor is appointed to Herr Eisenbacker, the recalled German minister at Washington. It is also intimated that Count Von Arnim, certainly remain vacant until the American government has appointed a successor to Minister Sargent at the German court, and that the changes of the new German ambassador will depend solely upon whether Prince Bismarck has pens to like or dislike the representative who may be sent to Berlin from the States.

A Widow Here Meets Death.

BALTIMORE, June 2.—Among the victims of the Tivoli disaster, Christopher Doyle, aged 38, who, on July 20th last, when the ill-fated pier at the noted summer resort precipitated over 200 persons into the water, by his heroic and individual efforts saved the lives of fifteen persons, was drowned Sunday in Curtis creek. His body came out in a yawl, with a party of friends. The yawl overturned, and all but one of the party into the water. Mr. Doyle swam after it and in making his way to shore was completely exhausted. Drugs were procured and the body recovered.

PASTOR DALLY'S DOWNFALL.

History of Annie Stewart's Threats to Expose Him.

SUNNY CITY, June 2.—The scandal that has for the sudden retirement of the Rev. Jerome H. Dally from the pastorate of the Sunny City Methodist Episcopal church was the absorbing topic of conversation here Sunday. Mr. Dally had filled the pulpit of Trinity since last March.

Annie Stewart, the woman with whom he has confessed that he committed improper relations, went to his house to-day, and after could night in last November, while he was absent from home. She was a perfect stranger to him. She told him that she was very sick and was homeless and destitute and threatened. If she could not get shelter, she would die and forgive him. They then entered and remained in the house all night. He says, and often got intoxicated.

On last Thursday week, driven to desperation by the woman's story, he excited her, and in answer to her screams threats of exposure, told her that he did not care what she might do to injure him. After she had gone to the presbytery and made her confession of his crime to the authorities of the church and then resigning his charge.

PATERSON, N. J., June 2.—The Rev. J. Dally, the deposed Methodist minister of Paterson. A relative of Annie Stewart's last night that Annie was a virtuous woman, until she went to live with Dally, and that the clergyman was the cause of her ruin. About two weeks since Dally brought her to Paterson and tried to get her a home with this relative, but the relative refused to receive her on account of her intemperate habits. This appears to have been Dally's last attempt to save himself from exposure. The families here Miss Stewart lived before going to Dally's gave her a good reputation, except as to occasional spells of drunkenness.

Dally was considered in Paterson a fine theological scholar, and one of the most strictly orthodox and upright clergymen in the city.

A PRISONER IN AN ASYLUM.

The Divorced Wife of a Well Known Citizen in a Magdalen Home.

NEW YORK, June 2.—Mrs. Fannie Stewart, a handsome pretty married woman, who is well connected and has relatives living in this city, has for three months been an inmate of the Magdalen Asylum for Fallen Women on Fifth avenue between Madison and Fifth avenues. She is 35 years of age, of very prepossessing appearance, a pronounced brunette, with black eyes and hair.

Mrs. Stewart at one time moved in high social circles, but her mode of life became such that her relatives withdrew from her society. Her husband, Mr. Isaac Dally Stewart, son of ex-President of the Excise Board James L. Stewart, obtained a divorce from her.

Mrs. Stewart has written to a friend, explaining her situation, in the following strain:

I am at the Magdalen asylum, No. 7, between Madison and Fifth avenues, on Eighty-eighth street. I am not the least prisoner—all is locked. Whoever put me here did it for my good, and I hope I get out. I will never bring her false imprisonment. I was not a prisoner when I came here. I am sick, and do not see whether—my heart is broken. I see no one, all letters are examined before I get them. Send a six cent letter up here and tell him to take me out.

FANNIE STEWART.

The gentleman who received the letter consulted an attorney and instructed him to investigate the matter. The lawyer called at the asylum and had an interview with one of the matrons, who admitted that Mrs. Stewart was in the institution, having been incarcerated at the request of an old and intimate friend of the family. It appears, as the matron expressed it, "she had been leading a fast life," and that she had applied to this gentleman to aid her. The matron thought that Mrs. Stewart would be let out as she would, in all probability, drift back to her old life. The attorney was not permitted to see Mrs. Stewart unless he first obtained a written order from a justice of the peace. It is understood that a writ of habeas corpus will be sworn out and the case of Mrs. Stewart's imprisonment judiciously inquired into.

AN ATTACK ON MAHONE.

Charges Published Against Him and Other Leaders of His Faction.

RICHMOND, June 2.—The Campaign this morning publishes a long and sensational series of charges of a grave nature against the Mahone leaders, and especially affecting Mahone himself. It charges that a year ago the Planters' and Merchants' bank, of Petersburg, Mahone's home, suspended. The Campaign's article gives the history of the organization of the bank, and of its failure, and charges that the concern was fixed to give privileges to the Mahonites, and allow them to borrow the money deposited by the people, which was used by the bank for the use of Gov. Cameron, who himself is charged with getting $20,000 out of the bank on questionable collateral. When Mahone got into power he put the State treasury in the bank to change the state depositories.

Among the banks deposited in was the Planters' and Merchants' of Petersburg. This bank, it is charged, was run by the Mahonites, and the state funds were used without security. When the crash in New York came, the bank failed. The article in question says the Campaign in the form of a legal paper prepared by leading lawyers of the state, who were employed by state the question as to whether or not the management of Mahone, Cameron, and other leaders of the Mahone party. Capt. Page McCarty, editor of the Campaign, is the author of the publication is to force Mahone, Cameron, Wise and Riddleberger into court, where the truth or falsity of the allegations could be established. It is understood that he intended them to institute libel suits against The Campaign. He said that this was not the first time that The Campaign had made the charges in relation to Mahone into court, but that the charges published were the most positive that had ever been made against Mahone, Cameron, Wise and Riddleberger, and would force the Mahone leaders into the courts.

CRIME AND CRIMINALS.

A Philadelphia Prison Overseer Brutally Beaten to Death.

Kentucky's Lawless Element—An Editor's Handy Pistol—Bloodhounds Tracking Convicts, Chloroforming an Audience.

PHILADELPHIA, June 2.—The Eastern penitentiary was the scene of a horrible tragedy on Saturday. Overseer Michael A. Doran was murdered by convict Dwight Joseph Taylor. It was one of Doran's duties to see that each prisoner under his charge was allowed a few minutes' exercise every morning in the yard attached to his cell. As the overseer was going from cell to cell as usual, letting some prisoner out and locking others up, Taylor had already taken his exercise, and the overseer was soon to order the prisoner's cell about 8:30 o'clock for the purpose of returning him to his cell.

Doran, when found, lay insensible near the yard door, his white face covered with blood. The man's head was beaten into an unrecognizable mass, his brains were running out, and particles of the skull were scattered upon the brick pavement.

The circumstances indicated that Taylor had him in wait behind the yard door, knocked Doran insensible with a hidden and then tackled him with the iron bar which Doran himself had carried. The coroner indicated Taylor to make a statement. It was that Doran approached him and Taylor struck him, but failed. Taylor then knocked Doran down with his fist and beat him into insensibility with the iron bar which fell from the overseer's hand. The bar was continued in scouring a cell door. Taylor declared that Doran had at various times refused him medicine. The prisoner's manner indicated that he was insane.

The sheriff and a posse are pursuing them. At the same place, George Delph, a blind boss, struck Neal Beatly, a colored man. Beatly drew a pistol and shot Delph in the breast, inflicting a very serious wound.

An Audience Chloroformed.

LONDON, Ont., June 2.—While Prof. Eleringe, a physiologist, was delivering a lecture at Dunlop, a few miles south of here, on Sunday evening, Noah Mitchell and some other roughs who infest the village poured some chloroform and other drugs through the ventilators into the school room where the lecture was being given, and the large crowd present soon became asphyxiated from the effects of the noxious gases. Some of them came near dying from suffocation. A three-year-old girl, it is thought, cannot recover, while the others are under the care of physicians. Mitchell and two companions of the trick have been arrested, and it is said many death will probably be lynched.

"Little Rufe" Wanted in Georgia.

NEW YORK, June 2.—Rufus Minor alias "Little Rufe," one of the most notorious bank robbers in the country, was arrested a few days ago by detectives attached to Inspector Byrnes's staff, on a charge of being implicated with a gang of confidence thieves in stealing $2,700 from the Commercial bank of Augusta, Ga., in March last, is still confined in one of the cells at police headquarters. The prisoner is also accused of robbing Wilson, Clinton & Company, bankers, of Baltimore, of $12,000 worth of railroad bonds. Capt. N. B. ONLY THREE SAVED.

Terrible Loss of Life by the Wreck of the Steamer Metropolis.

SAVANNAH, Ga., June 2.—A terrible tale of disaster and suffering is told by three survivors who reached this port as the only rescued of the steamer Metropolis, Capt. Chester Maine, which sank fifty miles off the coast of Georgia on Wednesday. The report was to the effect that a severe storm was encountered on Wednesday morning, and about [illegible] the vessel struck some unknown object which caused a hole in her bows and [illegible] rapidly. After forty-eight hours' [illegible] in her season, and drawing life [illegible] threatened to slaughter his companions [illegible] their bodies. He eventually leaped [illegible] and was drowned.

Two hours later one of the sailors, overcome by weakness, released his hold and was [illegible] into the sea and lost. His brother, [illegible] followed his example a few minutes later. The storm showed no signs of [illegible], and the men were broaching the [illegible] of one of their number for food, [illegible] and [illegible] when horrified at [illegible] and made ready to attempt their rescue. Owing to the danger of running down craft, three hours were consumed by the [illegible] of the men. Fifteen were finally [illegible] to the raft, and the remaining sailors and the mate tried to save themselves. [illegible] three men succeeded, but the mate was [illegible] and [illegible] with the ten and [illegible] drowned. The following are lost: [illegible] Fred. Small, Mate Albert Grant and [illegible] Engineer Frank Isaac Robinson. Those saved are Cook Isaac Fernandez, Boston, and Seaman Schipio Guilliard, of Norwich, Ct., and Peter Cuyler, of Fort Lyon, N. C.

JOHN C. ENO ARRESTED.

The Fugitive Bank President Captured on a Steamer at Quebec.

QUEBEC, June 2.—John C. Eno, the missing New York banker, was arrested Saturday [illegible] on the steamer Vancouver [illegible] as the vessel was leaving for Liverpool [illegible], with a companion, who was dressed as a priest, took passage on the Vancouver at Montreal and came down here on board the ship on Thursday, which is a most unusual thing for travelers to do, as Quebec is invariably the port of debarkation. Both [illegible] appeared to have plenty of [illegible] to understand how to enjoy it [illegible] habits of thegentlemen [illegible] situation. They were about [illegible] Friday and fell under the notice [illegible] detectives, who obtained a [illegible] of Eno, and found that it tallied [illegible] appearance of one of the gentlemen. [illegible] friend was not found on the Vancouver, nor was he on the steamer Sardinian, which was [illegible] down before she sailed through the [illegible]. It is thought that he has [illegible] New York. Eno at present is [illegible] detectives at the Central station [illegible] Montreal. THE WEEK IN CONGRESS.

How the Convention is Likely to Interfere with Legislation.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—It is [illegible] whether there will be a quorum in the [illegible] next week. A large number of members have gone to Chicago to attend the convention. A most unfortunate [illegible] is that important [illegible] before the House [illegible] should be [illegible] the consideration of the Utah bill, in which Hoar takes a deep interest will go [illegible]. The undisputed case on the [illegible] will probably be reached [illegible] unusual, but its [illegible] should be settled [illegible] roll call ensue there will be trouble. [illegible] important measure likely to be [illegible] Hoar has an amendment [illegible] to institute Union soldiers in the [illegible] Senatorial eyes on both sides of the chamber are fixed on Chicago and other matters of pith and moment may suffer from the [illegible] of the [illegible].

The House is not likely to do anything during the week to detract public attention from Chicago. Each Republican representative of the Chicago delegation is [illegible] with a Democrat on all questions. As a result but little business of importance will be transacted.

Friday [illegible] another to be the only day for business. That being private bill day some bills may be disposed of without the question of a quorum being raised. On Tuesday [illegible] Thursday [illegible] done during the week by unanimous consent. There is no special order Saturday, and an adjournment from Friday to Monday is probable.

SEVEN COWBOYS DROWNED.

A Fatal Cloudburst on a Colorado Cattle Trail.

DENVER, Col., June 2.—A cattle round-up camp on Frenchmans Creek on the Nebraska and Colorado line was destroyed by a flood on Thursday. Eleven cowboys belonging to Colorado and Nebraska outfits were drowned. The flood was caused by a cloudburst, which occurred on a small flat at the head of the Cheyenne Indian reservation, the water coming with such force that it swept everything in its path. Horses, wagons, even camping outfits were all carried down the stream with such force that but few escaped. The names of the cowboys are Tom Wilbur, [illegible], Fred Bodley, Robert Fenton, Patrick Lyons, John Smith, L. Nethercutt, William [illegible], William J. Felton and C. Hall. [illegible] the last four have been recovered.

A Page from the Primer of Fashion.
[Punch.]

Par-haps You Just-a gins that this Young Lady belongs to a Dime Mu-se-um, and has a World-ful Frame as an Ant-e-lope-ful Wonder!

Well, so. You are a-way Off; she is simply at-tired in the Height of Fashion, and her Dress-Ma-ker is Re-spon-si-ble for her Ob-serv-a-tory Shoul-ders. That is All.

Now Do You Feel Bet-ter?

Mean Observation.
[Arkansaw Traveler.]

A man is never so much impressed with his wife's power of observation as when he goes home drunk and attempts to play sober.

The other night when Mr. Harvey Blades, a well-known citizen of Arkansaw, went home, he took off his shoes, and in the dawning stage of intoxication when a man stops and minutely examines the most unimportant objects, paused to contemplate them. After sitting down with studied gravity, Mr. Harvey Blades noticed a feather lying on the floor. He debated for a while whether or not it would be an illustration of sobriety to remove it, and remembering that he had often seen his wife pick feathers from the carpet after beating jammed the pillows to make the bed look full, he rose, took the feather unassisted if a moment, raised a window and threw it out. This performance did not entirely satisfy him, for in his mind there was lurking a suspicion that his wife might fancy him to be drunk. In looking around for another task to discharged the mission ticket. His knew that to bring fresh water, beyond a doubt, would settle the question of his sobriety, so he took up the bucket and went out to the well. Finding everything dark and finding the "moss-covered bucket," but deciding that it must be at the bottom of the well, he began to turn the windlass. For fifteen minutes he turned the crank. "Deuced well I ever saw," he mused, and continued to grind. After a while his wife came out and said:

"Harvey, what in the name of common sense are you doing?"

"Try'n ter draw bucket water. Deuced well ever saw. Grindin' for hour; bucket not up yet."

"Why, don't you know that we had the well cleaned out and that the bucket has been at the house? Come on away. You are as drunk as a fool."

"Keenes' observation [ever saw," said the gentleman to himself. "Never saw thing like it."

A Few Points on Sleeping.
[Burlington Hawkeye.]

Baron Reichenbach declares that sleeping with the head toward the east and the feet west is tantamount to committing suicide. Well. If the baron ever noticed a boy sleep with his head bearing southward, he'd soon see his feet north and the other bearing northeast. So far as the knee, and then bending due west, the left arm south by west to the elbow and thence northwest and the right arm east northeast, he would see all the theories about north and south sleeping. Is there any creature healthier than a boy, sleeping in whatever? Such a boy awakes all right with a tousled head and a sunny thought or two to the dog, then authord, and learn to take things slow and easy without reference to the points of the compass.

Two Thin.
[Texas Siftings.]

"It is astonishing how much Sam Colly at the breakfast table, how extensive most in this world."

"To what extensive do you refer, Mr. Colly?" asked the widow Pingleck, who was pouring out the coffee.

"Well, you, for instance, are very stout, and the coffee is so very thin," and he stirred up the mixture, and smiled in a sickly sort of way.

"It's not as thin as your excuses for not paying your board regularly."

Sam has not said "coffee" since.

Social Assertion.
[Philadelphia Call.]

"What a fresh complexion Miss B. has," said a gentleman to a young lady at a party.

"Yes," replied the lady, who was a rival of Miss B.'s, "it is quite early in the evening yet; you wait and it won't last three to days."

THERE OF A KIND.

Three gallant old sailors came west to the land, And gathered at Saratoga to wet the whistle. While their canvas gleamed bright in the golden glare,
And sparkling wine shells around the hall.

They smiled at the maidens scattered around,
But were only met with a stony stare;
For women won't smile on a man without a cent,
And whose head is bare as a grandma mat.

Three rich maiden ladies were down to the ball,
And whenever they moved they had a swing;
While their joints all creaked like a rusty hinge,
And their cup of sweetness was turned to vinegar.

When the late girls gazed at their shrivelled forms,
As they dried to instate youthful pranks,
They shook their heads and declined with thanks,
For they hated the sound of a new-dried squall.

Three aristocratic bachelors went to the ball;
They were cross as a bear with a bunged-up eye,
And acted as if they had been ill-fed,
Or had tried to sit down on a spike-tipped fence.

They glared at the girls with a ghastly smile,
But the maidens refused to smile at or "chin"
The trusty old clergy, who concealed within
Their bosoms a stainless heart and tail.

Three jolly young bachelors went to the ball,
They were as frisky as colts at play;
So debonair, cheerful, smiling and gay,
They showed they had plenty of "chaw" within.

Three maidens with liquid and love-lit eyes
Beckoned the youths with their glances and sighs,
And sat blushing new dream of Paradise.
Three bridal veils, three orange blossoms, The Fall,
And that's the result of the Bachelors' Ball.

TEACHING A DOG TO READ.

Details of Sir John Lubbock's Course of Canine Instruction.
[New York Sun.]

Sir John Lubbock, the distinguished physicist, as we have long ago explained, is trying to teach his dog to converse.

It seems from a letter which Sir John sends to the last number of Nature, that Van, the dog, is making very satisfactory progress in his studies. He is, indeed, displaying much aptitude for learning that his master intends soon to put him into arithmetic.

The method of instruction adopted is a very simple one. Sir John prints on pieces of card-board, about ten inches long by three inches broad, such words as "food," "bone," "water," "out," etc. A number of these cards are placed on the floor side by side, so that the dog has several cards to select from, each bearing a different word. Van has now learned to distinguish between those cards, and to regard the bringing of a card as a request.

For instance, "When he is hungry he will bring a 'food' card time after time," says Sir John Lubbock, "until he has had enough, and then he lays down quietly for a nap. Whenever he is thirsty, or, as we have said, the word without any suggestion from his master; and brings it with perfect gravity. When he is fairly satisfied on the subject, he signifies as much by picking up the 'out' card and running triumphantly with it before me to the front door. If through inadvertence he brings me the card for breakfast he does not want, when the corresponding object is shown to him he seizes the card, takes it back again, and fetches the right one." Sir John Lubbock considers that this ability to associate that the dog is using not only the eyes but also to associate the word and the object."

Van has made this progress in conversation, too, despite many interruptions in the course of the lessons, due to the necessary frequent absences from home and inability to give more than a little attention to the dog's tuition. As it is, in the opinion of Sir John Lubbock, the method of instruction is proved that "this method of instruction opens out a means by which dogs and other animals may be enabled to communicate with us more readily than has hitherto been."

Sir John Lubbock, indeed, repeats his request that others will co-operate in this work of teaching animals, for, as he says, he only wants to extend the course. "I am now considering," he writes, "the best mode of testing Van in very simple arithmetic." Here, too, he is probably, as will likewise be successful, and we await with interest the reports of Van's progress in learning to cipher.

A National Wheat-for-It.
[Washington Republican.]

"My daughter came home from school yesterday," said a disturbed to the reporter of The Republican, "and asked me what kind of a government existed in the District of Columbia. She goes to the Jefferson school, and her teacher had asked the question of the whole roomful of half-grown girls. Not one of them could answer, and the teacher told them to find out before the next day. That's the way my girl came to ask the question. When I tried to answer her I was badly puzzled. It isn't either a monarchy, a republic, or a democracy. It has neither czar, emperor, king, nor president, but appears to be an institution with three heads to the body.

"The name of the girl's school reminded me that Jefferson said: 'Governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed,' but that proposition didn't do, for we never consented to any such thing. It certainly wasn't a government of the people, for the people, and by the people,' for as a matter of fact the people have almighty little to do with it. My girl called it 'a way a monarchy, either absolute or limited, and I pointed out the absence of royal families to prove that it wasn't. Then I was at a loss to tell the teacher that this district was a small protectorate of the United States, chiefly used as a city of refuge for surplus statesmen that were slightly run down at the best at home."

A Blind Man's Touch.
[Punch.]

They were in the grocery store, said Brown seeing a blind man about to enter, "Were you aware how delicate the touch of a blind man is? I was once [paralyzed by one of one arm, she makes mamma by bringing the oil, of course in extraordinary quantities. Let me illustrate by this gentleman. I'll take a pound of sugar and let him feel of it, and you see how quickly he'll tell what it is." The blind man having entered, he was put to the test. He put his thumb and finger into the sugar, and after a moment's reflection said: "That is sand." Everybody laughed but the grocer. He made three several attempts at thanking, and then went into the back shop and kicked his dog.

Locals.

—Miss Josie Clarkson of North Plainfield, entertained a number of her young friends at a birthday party on Saturday last.

—The residence of Mr. Wesley Johnson at Seventh street and Peace place presents a fine appearance owing to the artistic touches of the Clarkson Bros.

—The Plainfield town clock is on a strike. To-day it struck three at one o'clock. It strikes like Sullivan the pugilist, when least expected. It should be reformed.

—The Scott Press Works on South avenue between Richmond and Berkman streets, are being rapidly pushed forward, the walls of the ground floor being nearly finished.

—As the weather becomes hotter, the ice cream dealers become harsher. Compton's ice cream will cool the hottest and refresh. He tells his own story in another column.

—The Local Circle of the Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle held a very enjoyable meeting at the residence of Mr. A. J. Perrine on Fourth street Monday evening.

—The closing exercises of the Warren Mission Industrial school will be held in the Chapel, North Plainfield, Saturday afternoon, June 7th, at three o'clock. All friends of the school are cordially invited to attend.

—The two weekly editors were in serious consultation on a street corner this morning. One said, not on the corner, he thought the daily would be a success and do well—the other said he thought it would be short-lived. Perzactly.

—Dixon's ice cream garden is to be illuminated this evening. At his place hereafter Iwand coffee and cold meats are to be kept, and also temperance drinks, such as ice cold soda, sarsaparilla and root beer. Read Dixon's advertisement.

—A number of advertisers have secured space in the NEWS and are being inserted from day to day as fast as we can get them into type. Watch for them. They all have pretty stories to tell, and mean business every time. We require their help to keep a good local daily, and they require our help to let the people of Plainfield know where they can get bargains. We feel that, from good will toward this enterprise, the NEWS readers will give their preference to our advertising patronage. We believe all agree that we are supplying the best local daily ever supplied in Plainfield, and expect to do far better, as we get things in thorough working order, and steam power. At present the sheer grit of our assistants enables us to keep things going until our engine arrives.

Reform Club Notes.

The meeting of the Reform Club held on Sunday evening was largely attended, all the seats being filled and the aisles crowded. About twenty signers to the pledge were secured.

The entire number of pledge signers is now stated to have reached four thousand, and the Reform Club numbers about eight hundred members.

Nearly the entire amount necessary to buy the old S end street and Central avenue has been paid in, but $400 more being wanted, and $830 has been paid in to the furnishing fund.

An interesting meeting was held in the club rooms last evening.

A meeting will be held in the Warren Mission Chapel on Friday evening. There will be sixteen speakers, and the five minute rule will be rigidly enforced. The two meetings already held at the Mission have been very enthusiastic, and a good time is anticipated on Friday evening.

The regular business meeting of the club will be held to-morrow evening in the lecture room of the Trinity Reformed Church.

The meeting on Sunday evening will be held in the Trinity Reformed Church. The pastor, the Rev. S. V. V. Raymond will deliver a special sermon on the occasion.

The Fair Grounds Sold.

The fair grounds on Park avenue just beyond the city limits belonging to the Union and Middlesex Counties' Mutual Agricultural Association were sold yesterday at New Brunswick under foreclosure of mortgage, as noted in our issue of yesterday. There was but one bid on it, that of Wesley Johnson, of this city, who bought in the property for a syndicate composed of John L. Reilly, Nathan Robbins, O. T. Waring and himself. The price paid was $5,050. A promissory gentleman of this city who went over to New Brunswick for the express purpose of buying the property arrived just as the sale was adjourned. He would have raised the price several thousand dollars. The syndicate were also willing, it is said, to pay $6000, if necessary, to secure control of the property. The price paid represents but a small fraction of the real value.

Suit for Damages.

We learn that Elias Forkner, who was arrested for complicity in the robbery at the store of Paxton & Buckelew, of Jamesburg, intends to bring a suit for damages against Mr. Paxton for false imprisonment, he having made the complaint. The warrant was issued by Justice Lucas and served by Constable Mount. On a hearing Justice Lucas discharged Forkner for want of evidence.

A New Public School at Jamesburg.

The new public school at Jamesburg will be built by Magee & Dawson, and will cost $2,500. Work has been completed on the foundation and the building will be completed in about eight weeks.

ONE OF MANY.

To the Editor of THE EVENING NEWS:

Plainfield, June 3, 1884.

Dear Sir:—I received No. 1, Vol. 1, of THE EVENING NEWS last evening. Permit me herewith to congratulate you upon its appearance. It is worthy to be placed in the archives of Plainfield's history, as being one of the most interesting daily papers of the State.

It is a source of gratification to the common city of Plainfield, to know that they can take up their own daily paper and become soon lined with foreign news, occurring upon the same day of its respective issues. That we no longer need take up the leading papers of the great metropolis, and read what is going on in London, Berlin, Rome, Paris and other important cities.

The PLAINFIELD EVENING NEWS furnishes us with the latest dispatches of what is going on in the other Hemisphere.

Its solicitor has the ring in it, and judging from its first number, it will bear witness to the fact that its columns will be filled to the interests of Plainfield, and its neighboring towns across the brook, free from bias and personal abuse. Its course of conduct is to be commended. Politically its motto seems to be, "With malice toward none and charity for all," housed in its opinions, and leading in all respects to its future enterprises. As a guide to strangers as I visitors to our city it is a valuable hand. Look with these rules before it. I do not see why our citizens should not give it their hearty support. It takes a stride towards elevating and enlightening our community, and whatever it is disseminated, will carry news, which comes fresh.

I have no doubt but that you will meet with great success in your new undertaking, and double not but in a short space of time, commendations will come from various papers of the State, bringing with them their sympathy, their congratulations and hearty co-operation with this welcome sheet.

Respectfully,
JOHN ELSICH.

FORBIDDEN FRUIT.

Where first from hand of God, was he,
A perfect man,
And woman as well perfection she—
God made no ban.

They walked the garden, hand in hand,
And knew no guile;
And of the fruits of Eden's land,
They ate the while.

Save fruit of tree, of knowledge, called
The tree of life,
To eat, or touch, they were forestalled,
Or cease to grief.

But curious Eve, more knowledge craved,
Like daughters now—
An apple took, the law she braved
Then coaxed her beau.

They were then, they could not keep,
But straightway wept,
Her lord and master, Adam to seek
On evil bent.

She took and ate, enough was not,
For her to know,
But Adam, he, in common lot,
Must have a show.

One half the fruit, she shared with him;
He ate and then
His eyes they were no longer dim
As they had been.

God called to Adam—where art thou?
"I was afraid
(He said) and hid myself just now,
Fearing upbraid."

Say, hast thou eaten, of the tree
That I forbid?
The coward said she, thou gavest me,
Thus, did me bid.

Then they cried'd, all nature sighed—
Earth felt the wound
Sickness and death, henceforth abide,
Where man is found.

Suits for Assault and Battery.

Quite a large crowd collected before Justice Nash yesterday afternoon, who was holding court in the law office of Jackson & Coddington, on Park avenue. The cases on the docket were three suits for assault and battery. The first case was that of Perry Powers against Michael Sweeney, Jr. The complainant in support of his position had a black eye on hand. The justice reserved his decision until the other cases, which were counter suits, should be tried. The other cases were then called. Those were Michael Sweeney, Jr. vs. Perry Powers and wife. When the evidence in all the cases were in, plaintiffs and defendants, and defendants and plaintiffs shook hands all around and concluded to withdraw the charges, each party paying his own costs. The lawyers were ex-Judge Scudder, and Jackson & Coddington.

Y. M. C. A. Reception.

The ladies of the Auxiliary of the Young Men's Christian Association gave a reception last evening in the rooms of the association to the young men of the city. The ladies had prepared a fine program for the evening which was successfully carried out. Miss Emma McGee rendered a piano solo which was highly praised, as did also Miss Flora Randolph and Miss Cummis Yates. Mrs. Freeman sang several delightful solos, and a quartette composed of Messrs. Anderson, Tyler, Runyon and Ryder rendered some fine music. Mr. R. R. Mauger, the president of the Association, was the speech maker of the occasion, and made good use of his position. The remainder of the evening was pleasantly passed in social converse, and in the partaking of the excellent refreshments served by the ladies.

Personal.

Mr. Jesse Lawson, of this city, is an alternate on the general delegation to the Chicago Republican Convention now in session.

The Rev. Mr. Marston, for a number of years pastor of the Congregational Church of this city and for whom many past & present ladies have worked a bed or two quilts, has accepted a call to the pastorate of the First Presbyterian Church of Orange, N. J. Mr. Marston and his family will leave for their former place of residence in the week.

Republican Convention.

Chicago, June 4, 2:45 p. m.

There is an immense crowd in the Convention Hall to-day, and the streets for three blocks are almost impassable.

The Convention was called to order at 11:25 this morning.

A resolution was offered pledging the delegates to support the nominee of the Convention. A very exciting discussion followed. Geo. William Curtis strongly opposed it. The resolution was finally withdrawn.

Ex-Senator Henderson was elected permanent chairman.

The Convention has adjourned to seven o'clock this evening.

The balloting will probably not be begun until to-morrow.

An Accident.

Willie Demens, a son of George Demens was playing opposite his father's place of business on Somerset street this morning when he fell from a picket fence, driving one of the pickets through his side. The wound inflicted was luckily not of a serious nature. Dr. T. R. Tomlinson was called in, and the boy is doing as well as could be expected.

War on the Pencil Thief.

[R. J. Burdette.]

We lost the last pencil we had in this world, not ten minutes ago, by the hands of the pencil thief. A man who makes a business of stealing ought to be burned at the stake, boiled in oil, beheaded at the block, hung, drawn and quartered, and buried without benefit of clergy, at the solemn hour of midnight, in the dark of the moon, at a lonely place in an awful forest where two roads meet, with a lead pencil thrust through his heart. Here we are, robbed by a soulless villain, not at least a pencil to our back, and it may be half a day before we meet a man from whose confiding hands we can lift a pencil to make good the one we lost.

Boston May Now Rejoice.

[Chicago Current.]

John Morley, in his portrait to an English edition of Emerson's works, concludes a critical estimate of the philosopher by declaring that he regards "among the most permanent and inspiring of those who, by word and example, rebuke our desultoriness, pacify our eyes, awaken us from the deadening slumbers of convention and conformity, examine the penetrating logic of vanity, and lift men up from low thoughts and sullen words of ballrooms and insolvency."

Wounded in Rushes.

[Merchant Traveler.]

A merchant traveler at dinner requested the waiter to bring him a piece of rare beef, and when it came it was very tough. "If you will be good enough to step behind," he looked at the waiter and said, "I'll wait on myself." The waiter complied with the request, and the merchant traveler had a delicious meal.

CHICAGO CONVENTION

John R. Lynch, a Colored Mississippian, Chosen to Preside.

HOT CONTEST AT THE START

Arrangement of the Delegates—A Scene of Striking Brilliancy.

SPEECH OF THE CHAIRMAN.

The First Work of the Convention Over—Scenes During the Chairmanship Contest—The Vote by States—The Convention Hall, The Approaches and Surroundings—Will there be a Fight on the Permanent Chairmanship? The Headquarters at Night—Delegates at Sea as to the Final Result—Blaine at Home Talks of a Dark Horse—What Conkling has to Say—Full Proceedings.

CHICAGO, June 4.—The meeting of the national Republican convention has been marked by less enthusiasm, fits and spurts than has characterized any similar gathering that has taken place since the first delegate to the hall by twos and threes instead of marching with upright form and noble mien as of yore, and a solitary Ben Tarpin held by the crack bands of Philadelphia, New York and Cincinnati. Even the national bosses which on former occasions was shared by the crack bands of Philadelphia, New York and Cincinnati, held by Ben Tarpin, were inclined to be conservative in the matter of their plaudits upon the occasions when the enthusiasm rose to what would be rendered on such an occasion as a normal pitch.

No time was lost by Senator Sabin in getting the convention to order, for his gavel fell at 12 o'clock. The prayer of the Rev. Dr. Bristol, a young-looking man with a red mustache and garments of a pronounced peculiar cut, was calm and patriotic. When he beseeched the Almighty that the coming campaign be conducted with decency, two loud "Amens" came from that corner of the third gallery where Paul Strohach and ex-Minister Washburne were sitting in close proximity.

When the reverend gentlemen raised his hand his prayer was stopped. Secretary Hoar, like a true-blue Congregationalist, reverently bowing his head. When the clergyman referred to Plymouth Rock he was evidently thinking of the third gallery, where Paul Strohach and ex-Minister Washburne were sitting in close proximity.

When the reverend gentleman raised his hand his prayer was stopped. Secretary Hoar, like a true-blue Congregationalist, reverently bowing his head. When the clergyman referred to Plymouth Rock he was evidently thinking of the third gallery, where Paul Strohach and ex-Minister Washburne were sitting in close proximity.

When the prayer was concluded, applause followed on one side of the room, followed by laughter on the other.

Senator Sabin, upon his rising, in a clear tone of voice, keeping his eyes upon the manuscript of his speech, which lay on the desk before him:

Delegates of the convention: On behalf of the national Republican committee, permit me to welcome you to Chicago. (Applause.) It is a fitting custom for the party to assemble in the city which, already known as the city of conventions, is among the most cherished of all the spots of our country. Here, in the year 1860, was born, in the birthplace of Republican victory. On this battle-field of labor and of triumph, where we gathered to-day, we shall not forget the great leader who led our hosts to victory. Abraham Lincoln. Here were gathered in the most three gifted men of the country, who at that long trouble by elevating to the first place in the nation the three leaders of the great contending hosts, Grant. (Loud applause.) Here was afterward nominated the American James A. Garfield. (Applause.)

Every deliberation of Republican force on this historic ground has been followed by signal victory, and we have reason to believe that the present session of our line of battle shall foster our forces over every position of the enemy. Indeed, no sooner was the inauguration of the Republican party made than the constitution and laws of the land are the subjects of the most beneficent legislation. It is well ordered, that by general consent time has now arrived for the party to review its past history, for the completion of new lines of operation. Having confidence in the intelligence and patriotism of all brave comrades, the party is about to set its forces in order, and take counsel as to the direction and the means of the next campaign. (Applause.)

In the comparative fall of party strife which distinguishes the present from former years, I believe there is discernible an increasing disposition to look to the principles and measures of the party rather than to the men who are the representatives of the principles committed to them for the maintenance of the administration of the government. On this consideration I am grounded a hope that the voice of the people (applause) may be heard in the present campaign, and in according the work you are summoned to perform, so that the result may be such as to win the most lasting and individual support of every lover of those principles which are dear to the hearts of freedmen of conquest and won triumph. (Applause.)

When we consider the memories of the past, as intensely interesting as they are, and the issues of the future, which the people of Chicago have so generously undertaken to discuss, we may well look upon the deep-seated concern among all people to know what will be the character of the work to be committed to the discernment of patriotic statesmen in the international platform we frame, you cannot expect me to anticipate the work of the body. The Republican masses extend not a most hearty welcome to the men who are to be your leaders in your efforts will result in such an exposition of Republican principles as will challenge the admiration of the people and win triumph. (Applause.)

Mr. Lodge moved the appointment of the following delegates to the committee on credentials, and of the following delegates to the committee on rules, and of John R. Lynch, of Mississippi. He said:

Mr. Chairman: In accordance with the vote of the national committee, and in accordance with precedent, I have the honor to present the names of delegates at large from the several States, as selected by the several delegations. With the view of introducing as little delay as possible, I have the honor to present the names of the delegates from the State of New York. It is certainly most desirable that we should proceed to the business of this Convention as speedily as possible. The Republicans of the South, if I may be permitted to present the case of a people who have fallen under the ban of proscription, have a right to look to the Republicans of the North for the consideration and sympathy, for the encouragement and support which they have a right to expect from their brethren. I have the honor to present the name of Hon. John R. Lynch, of Mississippi, and I ask, sir, that when the vote is taken upon the question it be taken by States.

The cheering which instantly followed was terrific, and there was not a single discountenancing hiss, nay not even a murmur of disapprobation. Scarcely had Lodge resumed his seat when Silas Dutcher rose in the aisle from among the New York delegation to second the nomination. For the next half hour or more there was nothing but talk. John M. Thurston, of Nebraska, in supporting Clayton, declared that the latter must be entitled to recognition, if only for the fact that the white man had made it possible for the colored man to sit on the floor.

Mr. Prentice, of Missouri, pleaded tenderly with the convention not to put a stigma on a one-armed veteran, and Mr. South Carolina demanded recognition for Lynch, as a man who dared, in the face of shot-guns, to go to the polls in the interest of the Republican party. Mr. Curtis, of New York, was received with considerable cheering, made an appeal for adherence to the old and established usages of his party, and Mr. Lodge, upon which assumed a chair and followed in the same line. Loud calls were made for a vote. A delegate from Pennsylvania demanded a call of states. Ben Tarpin Rehl, of Kansas, that all of individual delegates was the proper mode of procedure. The delegate persisted, but was howled down.

Mr. Breckinridge, of Arkansas, followed, and the discussion promised to be strung out to an interminable length, when Mr. Shirk, of Alabama, moved the previous question, and Mr. Sabin put the motion.

Over two hours were occupied in calling the roll. As prominent and distinguished members of the party were called by their names and stated their preferences they were rewarded with cheers from the adherents of the particular candidate whom they favored. When the name of John R. Lynch was reached the excitement was as great as at the rising of Lodge. Stepping out in the aisle the little senator announced in a piping voice that his choice was "John R. Lynch."

"Louder!" cried the secretary.

"John R. Lynch," shouted Theodore Roosevelt. Instantly there was a furore of applause, and Curtis, Roscoe Conkling, Tabb, Keyes of Madison, Wis., and half a dozen colored delegates crowded around to grasp the hand of the little man. When the roll-call was half over it was seen that Lynch was largely in the lead, and although toward the end Pennsylvania came to the aid of Clayton with forty votes, Illinois with forty-two, Virginia with twelve each, and Wisconsin with ten, the rally was seen to be too late. Lynch had carried the day. The secretary announced the vote 452 to 286, and the crowd had shouted itself hoarse, and there was not much enthusiasm over the announcement. Clayton, pale and trembling, arose in his box in the aisle covered his eyes with his hand, and was apparently the most devout person in the building. Ben Tarpin held on the platform with a firm hand at his ear, intently listening to the prayer. Chauncey Filley was back of him, sucking the head of his cane.

When the prayer was concluded, applause followed on one side of the room, followed by laughter on the other.

Senator Sabin, upon as follows, in a clear tone of voice, keeping his eyes upon the manuscript of his speech, which lay on the desk before him:

Delegates of the convention: On behalf of the national Republican committee, permit me to welcome you to Chicago. (Applause.) It is a fitting custom for the party to assemble in the city which, already known as the city of conventions, is among the most cherished of all the spots of our country. Here, in the year 1860, was born, in the birthplace of Republican victory. On this battle-field of labor and of triumph, where we gathered to-day, we shall not forget the great leader who led our hosts to victory. Abraham Lincoln. Here were gathered in the most three gifted men of the country, who at that long trouble by elevating to the first place in the nation the three leaders of the great contending hosts, Grant. (Loud applause.) Here was afterward nominated the American James A. Garfield. (Applause.)

Every deliberation of Republican force on this historic ground has been followed by signal victory, and we have reason to believe that the present session of our line of battle shall foster our forces over every position of the enemy. Indeed, no sooner was the inauguration of the Republican party made than the constitution and laws of the land are the subjects of the most beneficent legislation. It is well ordered, that by general consent time has now arrived for the party to review its past history, for the completion of new lines of operation. Having confidence in the intelligence and patriotism of all brave comrades, the party is about to set its forces in order, and take counsel as to the direction and the means of the next campaign. (Applause.)

In the comparative fall of party strife which distinguishes the present from former years, I believe there is discernible an increasing disposition to look to the principles and measures of the party rather than to the men who are the representatives of the principles committed to them for the maintenance of the administration of the government. On this consideration I am grounded a hope that the voice of the people (applause) may be heard in the present campaign, and in according the work you are summoned to perform, so that the result may be such as to win the most lasting and individual support of every lover of those principles which are dear to the hearts of freedmen of conquest and won triumph. (Applause.)

When we consider the memories of the past, so intensely interesting as they are, and the issues of the future, which the people of Chicago have so generously undertaken to discuss, we may well look upon the deep-seated concern among all people to know what will be the character of the work to be committed to the discernment of patriotic statesmen in the international platform we frame, you cannot expect me to anticipate the work of the body. The Republican masses extend not a most hearty welcome to the men who are to be your leaders in your efforts will result in such an exposition of Republican principles as will challenge the admiration of the people and win triumph. (Applause.)

Mr. Chairman: I am entrusted by the committee on credentials, of which I am a member, with the duty of presenting to the Convention a report of the committee on credentials, and I am directed by the committee to present the report as a whole. I have the honor, sir, to present the report of the committee on credentials, and I ask for its adoption.

The report was then read by the secretary, as follows:

The committee on credentials, to which was referred the list of delegates at large from the several States, as selected by the several delegations, have had the same under consideration, and have instructed me to report that they have found no contested seats, and recommend that the list be adopted by the Convention.

Mr. Lodge moved the adoption of the report, and it was agreed to.

Mr. Chairman: In accordance with the vote of the national committee, and in accordance with precedent, I have the honor to present the names of delegates at large from the several States, as selected by the several delegations. With the view of introducing as little delay as possible, I have the honor to present the names of the delegates from the State of New York. It is certainly most desirable that we should proceed to the business of this Convention as speedily as possible. The Republicans of the South, if I may be permitted to present the case of a people who have fallen under the ban of proscription, have a right to look to the Republicans of the North for the consideration and sympathy, for the encouragement and support which they have a right to expect from their brethren. I have the honor to present the name of Hon. John R. Lynch, of Mississippi, and I ask, sir, that when the vote is taken upon the question it be taken by States.

The cheering which instantly followed was terrific, and there was not a single discountenancing hiss, nay not even a murmur of disapprobation. Scarcely had Lodge resumed his seat when Silas Dutcher rose in the aisle from among the New York delegation to second the nomination. For the next half hour or more there was nothing but talk. John M. Thurston, of Nebraska, in supporting Clayton, declared that the latter must be entitled to recognition, if only for the fact that the white man had made it possible for the colored man to sit on the floor.

Mr. Prentice, of Missouri, pleaded tenderly with the convention not to put a stigma on a one-armed veteran, and Mr. South Carolina demanded recognition for Lynch, as a man who dared, in the face of shot-guns, to go to the polls in the interest of the Republican party. Mr. Curtis, of New York, was received with considerable cheering, made an appeal for adherence to the old and established usages of his party, and Mr. Lodge, upon which assumed a chair and followed in the same line. Loud calls were made for a vote. A delegate from Pennsylvania demanded a call of states. Ben Tarpin Rehl, of Kansas, that all of individual delegates was the proper mode of procedure. The delegate persisted, but was howled down.

Mr. Breckinridge, of Arkansas, followed, and the discussion promised to be strung out to an interminable length, when Mr. Shirk, of Alabama, moved the previous question, and Mr. Sabin put the motion.

(Applause.)

In countenance, at the request of the national Republican committee, I have to propose to you as temporary chairman of the convention the Hon. Powell Clayton, of Arkansas.

After Chairman Sabin had read his speech with a clear and distinct delivery, he announced that he had been informed by the national committee to submit the name of Powell Clayton as temporary chairman. A death-like silence followed. The failing of a pin from the chandelier would have been heard on the reporter's stage below.

Presently amongst the stillness was pealed. Every eye was directed toward the Massachusetts delegation. Ballard Frisbee of Canton Lodge was seen to loom up from the middle of the delegation. There was a murmur. It swelled into a roar. Delegates, correspondents and visitors mounted their seats. The occupants of the distinguished strangers' gallery craned their necks, the ladies in it raised their fans. Cheer after cheer broke after cheer, and the hall shook and reverberated like the rumble of distant thunder. Frisbee, with his arms folded, stood like a true-blue Congregationalist, reverently bowing his head. When the clergyman referred to Plymouth Rock he was evidently thinking of the third gallery, where Paul Strohach and ex-Minister Washburne were sitting in close proximity.

When the reverend gentleman raised his hand his prayer was stopped. Secretary Hoar, like a true-blue Congregationalist, reverently bowing his head. When the clergyman referred to Plymouth Rock he was evidently thinking of the third gallery, where Paul Strohach and ex-Minister Washburne were sitting in close proximity.

The Extradition of Eno.

Although many have been happy over the thought that now John C. Eno, having been arrested, would be made to pay at least a small penalty for his transgression, it hardly seems probable that the authorities will be able to secure his extradition. It seems conceded that if he is surrendered it must be on some subordinate charge which comes within the limit of extraditable offenses.

In regard to the extradition the New York Herald says:

There appear to be but two possible courses open. If a case of forgery can be made out against him his extradition may be demanded. But it is doubtful whether this charge can be sustained. The only other chance of getting him back to this country is for the government at Washington to ask his surrender as a matter of international courtesy in furtherance of justice. There is no reason why this step should not be taken.

Concerning the extradition clause of the Treaty with Great Britain, the New York Tribune says:

The treaty with Great Britain needs modification in three respects. First, the list of crimes should be enlarged from seven to at least twenty, so as to include conspiracy to murder, burglary, counterfeiting, embezzlement, misappropriation of public or trust funds and obtaining money under false pretences. Secondly, political offenses should be carefully defined and expressly excluded in the law. Thirdly, there should be an explicit declaration that the fugitive surrendered can be tried and punished only for the crime for which his extradition has been asked. These three principles are embodied in the latest and most complete treaties negotiated by the United States Government.

Edsall's Establishment.

The attention of the readers of THE NEWS is directed to the announcement of Mr. Henry Edsall's business in the inducements he offers to supply them with goods at home. The "bargains" he offers from day to day and from week to week cannot be exceeded in their respective line by any New York house. Mr. Edsall's entire establishment is kept up in first-class style, and nothing but the best of goods are offered for sale or kept on hand. Mr. Edsall has been brought up in the dry goods business, and is thoroughly familiar with every branch of it. His wide experience enables him to compete favorably with the most enterprising business houses. His sales have been this year much larger in advance of those of last year. A visit to his place of business will well repay any one.

The New Brunswick Home News says it will support the Reform Club of that city, in the good honest fight it is going to make to enforce the law against liquor sellers who show an disposition to obtain license.

The Elizabeth Herald says: Congressman Kean is for Arthur first, last and all the time, and says: Will he support Blaine if Chicago indorses him, or, like the New York Times, refuse to help the "Tattooed Man?"

IN CONVENTION HALL.

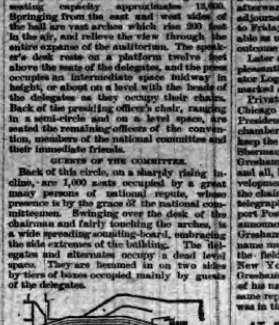
Arrangement of Delegates—A Scene of Striking Brilliancy.

CHICAGO, June 4.—Some minutes before 10 o'clock the hall was thronged with early arrivals to the convention. They were mainly strangers who came early in order to avoid the rush. The delegates, who had secured tickets of admission found no difficulty in effecting entrance to that portion of the auditorium set apart for them, but the gallery ticket-holders experienced a little more difficulty in getting to their seats. The committee on arrangements had provided for 16,000 applications for tickets to the convention.

In all probability the hall is the most complete and the best fitted for seating a great political body than can be found in the country. It is in one sense temporary, having been constructed within the walls of the Exposition building, situated on the east line of the city on the shores of Lake Michigan. Its seating capacity approximates 12,000. Springing from the east and west sides of the hall are vast arches which rise 200 feet in the air, and relieve the view through the entire expanse of the auditorium. The speakers' desk juts out a little more than midway above the seats of the delegates, and the press occupies an intermediate space midway in height, or about on a level with the heads of the delegates as they occupy their chairs. Back of the presiding officer's chair, ranging in a semi-circle and on a level space, are seated the nominating officers of the convention, members of the national committee and their immediate friends.

OTHERS OF THE COMMITTEE.

Back of this circle, on a sharply rising incline, are 1,000 and more occupied by a great many persons of national repute, whose presence is by the grace of the national committeemen. Swinging over the desk of the chairman and fairly touching the arches is a wide spreading sounding-board, embracing the side extremes of the building. The display in the auditorium of bunting is of small space. They are beamed in on two sides by tiers of boxes occupied mainly by guests of the delegates.



The section of the hall occupied by the working body of the convention is broken by pillars, from which depend the edges of white Roman standards, studded with blue silk banners imprinted in gold with the names of the states and territories. Beginning in the left corner of the stage, in the state of Alabama, and back through the first tier of seats follow Arkansas, California, Connecticut, and down through the line of states in alphabetical order to Maine. Beginning again on the right and rear is Maryland, with Massachusetts immediately in her front, and ending with the District of Columbia on the first row of the second tier. New York occupies the front rank in the third, and Ohio holds the sanking position in the fourth and terminating tier.

Back of the delegates is a similar space occupied by the alternates. In the rear of the alternates is a commodious seating space, the chairs standing on an easy decline so that from the space occupied by the alternates by a line of pickets. Beginning at a point one hundred feet in the rear of the alternates is another dividing wall, and from that point rises the upon tier of seats to a point almost midway between the level of the hall and the upper of the two tiers of arches.

To complete the picture, narrow galleries run along the east and west sides of the hall in entire length. The front of this gallery is faced with the shields of the several States on a background of festooned flags. Fluttering from the arches are the national colors and the flags of all nations. The prevailing color of the hall is red, white and blue. Indian red, to a point where the arches seem to spring from the galleries, and from this point, embracing the dome of the building, is a light sky-blue.

THE COLORED MAN RECOGNIZED

The Election of John R. Lynch the Sensation of the Hour.

CHICAGO, June 4.—The selection of John R. Lynch, the colored ex-congressman from Mississippi, as temporary chairman of the Republican national convention is of course, the sensation of the hour in political circles. The Inter-Ocean this morning says: "The selection of John R. Lynch, a colored ex-congressman from Mississippi, as temporary chairman of the Republican national convention, which assembles here to-day, is a master-stroke of policy on the part of the leaders of the party. It is a recognition of the colored man which will be appreciated by the whole race throughout the country. It is a rebuke to the men who have attempted to drive the colored man from the party. It is a vindication of the colored man's right to be a Republican. It is a proof that the party is not ashamed of the record made by the colored man during the dark days of the rebellion

A BEAT FOR THE UNITED PRESS

The New Centres of the Associated Press Knocked Out of Time.

CHICAGO, June 4.—General Manager Phillips, of the United Press, received a number of congratulatory telegrams from United Press papers on the service given them from the Chicago convention. Ten minutes after the selection of Lynch as temporary chairman the announcement was nearly in every newspaper office taking the United Press report. Direct reports could not be had from the Associated Press to cover the convention in a manner heretofore unprecedented, but as a matter of fact, according to advices received from Washington and elsewhere, the announcement of Lynch's election was on the streets, to United Press papers, when only the conclusion of Gov. Mr. Hayes's prayer was being received by the Associated Press. The proprietor of an Associated Press paper, now in Chicago, is authority for the statement that if he had not been in Chicago his paper, its afternoon edition, would have been completely left on the proceedings.

A gentleman who has long been purchasing the Associated Press news, speaking on the subject, said: "I was assured by the Associated Press that they had every telegraph facility, and had made arrangements to cover every incident of the convention fully. I was informed by my partner, however, that their report was very unsatisfactory. I don't know what is the matter, but it appears that the Associated Press makes a beautiful failure in every emergency."

Arthur Has Jubilant.

CHICAGO, June 4.—The Arthur men are figuring on capturing the Edmunds delegates, but it is known that Messrs. Horr, Roosevelt and George Curtis are favorably disposed towards Blaine. Hiscock also speaks of the situation as entirely satisfactory, and urges the importance of holding the forces solidly together. Anti-Blaine men find it difficult to swallow Lynch for temporary chairman in a black eye for Blaine, as his own strength, together with that of Sherman and Logan, was insufficient to capture the temporary organization. The Arthur men are in high feather and say: "We did not sit up until 2 o'clock yesterday morning for nothing." Some of the anti-Blaine supporters are still sanguine, and say that as balloting proceeds they will as the proper time show their hand.

Blaine Telling Dark Horse.

BOSTON, June 3.—The Blaine party left for Augusta after dining at Young's Hotel. Mr. Blaine, just before leaving, said to a personal friend that he did not expect to be nominated, and that the candidate would be a dark horse. There is good authority for the statement that the Blaine men will, if his request, support Gen. Sherman if the nomination of the plumed knight appears impracticable.

Convention Notes.

Senator Sabin, of the national committee, has an uncanny mustache and shaggy eyebrows overhanging a pair of deep-set eyes.

Horr, of Michigan, made a strong fight for a roll call by states. Roosevelt opposed the election of Clayton, but his speech was feeble and his manner very weak impression.

The absence of the Republican giants who had made the rafters ring four years ago is most noticeable. Blaine stood up with a squad of unknown politicians in lieu of Frye and Hale.

Conkling, Arthur and other Stalwarts have gone their ways, and strange faces appear among the New Yorkers.

Parker heads a solid looking body of Ohioans, and right behind him Pennsylvania looms up in mighty proportions for Blaine.

Little Rhody and the territories hang on the outskirts, while the northwest helps fill the body of the building.

Malione and his Virginians are well placed, but he has yet attracted little attention, and there are many conflicting rumors about the standing of his delegation.

Whitelaw Reid and Thomas G. Platt were in consultation a few minutes before the gavel fell call. Both had serious faces. The millionaire journalist had a far-away look. He was evidently not very enthusiastic.

Martin, of Kansas, secretary of the national committee, read the call in a tone that could not be heard more than a short length from the platform.

Senator Sabin's speech of welcome to the delegates was heard with close attention. His allusion to Chicago as the birthplace of Republican victory evoked but little applause, but when he mentioned the name of Abraham Lincoln there was hearty applause.

Grant's name was the signal for applause, but it required the mention of Garfield's name to arouse anything like enthusiasm. Blaine men on the floor and in the gallery set up a vigorous shout.

On Thursday last Postmaster General Gresham sent a dispatch to John Mason Brown, of Louisville, saying that the president would be gratified to have Brown second his nomination. John B. Henderson, of Missouri, who had been previously invited, the story goes, considers himself insulted by this action and has gone over to Blaine.

Amid the intense excitement Tom Payne, the Pittsburg Liberal Republican, read the names of forty delegates who had voted for Lynch, but who were also pledged to vote for the man from Maine.

Senator Harrison has left Chicago and has committed his interests to the hands of friends.

There is some talk of the Illinois delegation uniting upon Senator Colfax, should it become apparent that Logan cannot win.

Tar and Feathers Threatened.

MYSTIC BRIDGE, Ct., June 4.—This community feels particularly outraged over the treatment by Mansonsah Miner of his wife. Miner is a rich man, about 65 years of age. He is very close, and was a bachelor until about three years ago. Ever since he has been accused of ill-treating his wife, who is a refined and middle-aged lady. Saturday evening he abused the woman and drove her from his house. She went to Stonington, going to her in the street. At 10 o'clock at night a mob of several hundred, composed of men, women and children, went to Miner's house, broke in the windows, broke down the door, and covered the front door with tar. The house is covered from sill to eave with stale eggs. He then entered the house determined to find Miner's wife and apply a dose of tar and feathers to him. Their search was unsuccessful. It is thought he has fled, as he has not been seen since. It will not be safe for him to venture around here again soon.

CONDENSED NEWS.

The Old Guard returned from Boston last night.

Mr. Coventry H. Waddell was buried from Rev. Dr. J. T. Duryea's church in West Fifty-seventh street yesterday.

The fifteenth annual convention of the Grand Chapter, Order of Eastern Star, State of New York, was begun at No. 33 Union square yesterday.

Frederick Patterson, a cook in the house of Mary A. Baxter, at No. 311 Madison avenue, pleaded guilty to stealing a watch and chain from his mistress yesterday, and was sentenced to five years' imprisonment by Judge Bixbyjersey.

WOMAN AND HOME.

Girls Who Demoralize—Ladies Who Dance, but Walk Not.

The Women of Vienna—Finance for Children—Tears in Brass Colors —Russian Cosmetic—Work, Health, Fashion.

[Eleanor Kirk in Phrenological Journal.]

It is a fact that two idle girls can move or lean themselves at a table for hours and spend so many hours in each twenty-four that can be safely utilized, and so the careful mother, anxious to prepare her daughter for the responsibilities which, if she lives, she will be called upon to take up, fits the special occupation or lesson to the special hour. Everything in going on not only nominally but enthusiastically, when the doorbell rings, and one of the idle girls appears. That precious hour is broken in upon, every moment hopelessly wasted, for no one ever learns anything that is good to learn, from an idle girl. Having no occupation in life but to visit, or be visited, it is therefore that she should be impressed and influenced in such a manner as to make her a dangerous companion. It may be that the idle girl is a relative, or so recommended socially as to make it impolitic to refuse to admit her, or there may be various reasons for bearing with her; such as a natural readiness to fulfill ends, or lack of moral courage to protect one's time.

And so it comes to pass that girls who would be industrious if they were let alone, are constantly interrupted by the, at present, very common idler. This is not the worst of it. The unlimited leisure at the disposal of these young ladies is frequently the cause of much discomfort. "So-and-so is not obliged to take care of her room." "So-and-so does not have to study after school." "So-and-so is not compelled to make bread and pies, and jelly, and dress herself over and over again every evening if she pleases, while I have to be picked up at home all the time." "Somebody's particular friend so got to the theatre and the driver has to stop while a single one of clothes except to select 'what pleases her.' 'O, madame, I wish you were like so-and-so's mother.'"

This is the most discouraging feature of the whole unhappy business. It is bad enough to have precious time wasted through the inconsiderateness of idle, empty-headed, undisciplined girl, but it is much worse to find that the daughter, who was once happy and pliable to the will and instruction of a loving counselor, is no longer content to be controlled, but is constantly comparing her lot with that of one whom the mother knows to be not only without precedent of future usefulness, but in some cases absolutely undesirable. Much precious freight has been dashed against this rock, and the trouble that has been caused by the influence of the idle girl in families can not be exaggerated.

When Ladies Walk.

[Cor. St. Louis Spectator.]

I mentioned, incidentally, last week, that our young ladies were averse to walking, and that a considerable portion of the ills with which they are afflicted may be traced directly to physical exercise. As I wished a positive proof of the truth of the statement, I posted myself one week, and looked on account, at Pope's theatre, a strategic point for many obvious reasons. The day was perfect. The atmosphere had a balmy warmth suggestive of Indian summer. The heavens were cloudless, with the exception of a flash of white here and there. It was one of those ideal days when simple existence is enjoyable. To-day, thought I, every fair maidens, "setting aside all manner of excuse and delay," as the legal fraternity appressively phrase it, will avail themselves of the opportunity to reduce on their bodies the wretched substitute of art with the glowing line of nature. That was the fond anticipation, but here is the vantage ground of theory was left. I was dealing with the real. The following is the official count.

Going west: 86 street-cars carried 816 young ladies and passengers. Number walking during the same time, 198.

Going east: 86 street-cars carried 789 young lady passengers. Number walking during the same time, 187.

Total riding, 1,605; total walking, 397.

These figures include young ladies between the ages of 17 and 35 only; and each of them, I am sorry to say, was dressed in the style of fashion-plate extremity. Thirteen-sixteenths rode and three-sixteenths walked on a day when it would have tempted the saints from their glens, or the nereids from the ocean's depths. Deducting the percentage due to those who alighted before reaching Pope's and to those who entered the car west of this point, it will be seen that not more than 18 per cent walked any considerable distance. I would have been glad to have the genius who declared that a society belle who could dance ten miles around a ball-room and enjoy it, yet would be fatigued after walking a quarter of a mile, was about right.

The Women of Vienna.

[Foreign Letter.]

The education of girls in Vienna is somewhat peculiar, and perhaps worthy of note, writes a correspondent from that city. Up to 15 years of age they are kept at their studies, but are not deprived of society. They dress very simply, rarely wearing a silk gown till the day they leave the school-room for the ball-room. After they leave school they go through a year or even two years' teaching in the pastry and in the kitchen, under some member of the family, or even, in some families, in another family, under trained cooks. They may never be required to cook a dinner, but they are thus rendered independent of cooks and servants, as they learn how to do everything themselves long before they begin housekeeping on their own account. When married, they are most affectionate wives and mothers. An Austrian lady, in addition to being an accomplished and learned as an English governess, as good a housekeeper and cook as a Parisian, as witty and vivacious for society as a Spaniard, as passionate as an Italian, and as handsome as an American—some of the most beautiful women in Europe being found in Vienna.

Germans, and also Americans, are celebrated for their cooks and their dinners. Here, as soon as a girl is born, the weaving of her linen is begun, and every year a piece or a certain number of yards is set aside for her, so that by the time she is married the linen chests, mangles, cut their side, are not idle. They pass their time knitting for their grand children, but also laying aside for the future dozens of stockings of every kind, being the usual number of any bride's trousseau, and some of these stockings are so fine as the finest woven ones.

An Austrian girl or lady is never seen without some kind of work in her hand. Ladies work even in society, and in nothing of a lady, of course, can that in the least derogate to the rule. When several ladies meet together in a family, one reads aloud while the others work, and thus they get through a great deal of reading instead of the dull. But a number of the day is set aside for fashionable work, when ladies meet. Wide ribbon is interlaced through the dress, now after row, filling in the spaces with lace. Dresses so fine, both of white and coloured with a full robe of the same or silk to match. A less expensive mode is to substitute felt for the ribbon, making it of the latter, and working the rucking very full. If for a work-basket, then line it with silk or chintz, and ornament it with pockets to hold thread and sewing accessories.

Woman's Work in "Three Sets."

[Detroit Free Press.]

Modern methods have not eased the cares of wives and mothers, whose duties have developed with the growth of science and the expansion of art. When children were thrashed into obedience to parental commands, when young people understood that to have wives to obey was to be constantly expected their regular three meals a day and mended and clean clothing, the duties of women were very much simpler than at the present time. In those happy days, when to eat, sleep and work was the whole duty of man, and the insanity of subjecting one's self to the laziness of the household might, after the work was done, eat and sleep, too. At least she had a chance to work when husband and children were engaged in business or at school for long hours of the day. In those day's, rain or sunshine were the same, life moved in a groove, and there was a probability of things running smoothly. It is true that people ate what was set before them, because there was not much variety to be had, and they were not always tempting one's appetite in the way of occupations deep emotions that upset the regular routine of a household. Perhaps it was monotonous, but it was restful for the housekeepers.

Resting Lessons.

A good deal has been said through the papers about the healthfulness of lemons. The latest advice is how to use them so they will do us good. And, as follows: Let people know the benefit of a lemon before breakfast, but few people know that it is more than doubled by taking another at night. Squeeze the juice of a lemon into a tablespoonful without the pills or quinine, is to take the juice of one, two or three lemons, as appetite craves, in as much water as makes a pleasant drink. Sip without meals, before going to bed. In the morning in rising, at least half an hour before breakfast, drink the lemon juice in a goblet of water. This will clear the system of humor and bile with efficiency, without any of the weakening effects of calomel or Congress water. The blood will not forbear the stomach by eating lemons clear; the powerful acid of the juice, which is always most corrosive, invariably produces inflammation and ulcers. Those who have found that it does not burn or draw the throat, it does its medical work without alarm, and when the stomach is clear of food the abundant opportunity to work over the system thoroughly, says the medical authority.

Care of the Aged.

[Exchange.]

From the time they get up in the morning until they retire for the night, there is many a little attention which they need to keep them in health, which kindly hands can give. They are usually early risers. Have the room tidy and warm, and a cheerful fire in the fall. If there is the grate, the chair ready, and, if possible, a flower on the table. Breakfast ought to be ready, and the tea waiting to be infused, for, remember, old people need breakfast as soon as ever they come down of a morning. It weakens them to wait. Whatever is for breakfast, be it tea or cake that can be procured—the bread or hasbrods, as all events, not a strong, oleaginous fish like mackerel or salmon.

Fine Polish for Cabinet Work.

[Exchange.]

A fine, lustrous polish for delicate cabinet work may be made as follows: Half-pint linseed oil, half pint of old ale, the white of an egg, one ounce spirits of wine, one ounce spirits of salts. Shake well before using. A little to be applied to the face of a soft linen pad, and rubbed for a minute or two over the article to be restored, which should first be rubbed off with the dry pad handkerchief. It will keep any length of time if well corked.

Collars for the Season.

[Cincinnati Enquirer.]

It is said that ladies, appreciating the alluring effect of standing collars, have decided to adopt them more than ever during the coming season. Narrow and of linen, according to the fancy of the wearer. Attached to the throat, attached at times with a single cyclopean thread, or with a scarf-pin and white cambric band.

Daily Habits.

[Detroit Free Press.]

Always eat your meals in a leisurely, unstimulating manner; sit down to your meals in good humor, as you go to bed, smiling and peaceful. Keep good natured, and never indulge in anger. This is the way to have good digestion, sound sleep, and long life. A violent passion rocks the constitution as severely as a typhus fever.

To Make a Pretty Portfolio.

[Detroit Free Press.]

Take the covers of an old book; line with crimson sateen. For the outside take black satin; paint or embroider some pretty design on each side, and finish with a full ruche of the edge with a silk cord, and fasten bows of ribbon at each corner, with other ribbons with which to suspend it.

Works Too Hard.

[Florence Atkinson.]

As a woman, sometimes tries to undertake too much, to overtax herself, to wear out her life too rapidly. Her ambition far exceeds her strength.

Her nervous system works at a disadvantage; her energies are divided; she has too many trades, too many "irons in the fire."

Nature Knows Most.

[Henry Clay Dean.]

Nature, who is the best judge of the fitness of things, has appointed woman as the teacher of children, to whose care she has especially entrusted them; and of whose wants she has a perfect knowledge, and for whom she has made ample provision.

No Time To Be Idle.

[Ogden Grove Pleasyans.]

The modern woman is usually extremely systematic, for, with so much to do, nothing would be well done without the close-watch of constant and regularly established rules. These women who are dressed as idle, have, in reality, no time to be idle.

Dressing for Calisthenics.

[New York Post.]

Instead dressing for physical culture in tasks but a gymnasium suit, a dress of wincey with a jump of letter or a well-beaten "gym" suit and pepper to suit your taste. Four yards but over the ankles.

The old-fashioned chemise for the mother is to be in high vogue this summer season.

VISIONS OF WEALTH.

Projects of Great Moment Which Are Mapped Out Unceasingly.

Some of the Smallest Men the Most Brilliant Schemers—Outlines of the Proposed Enterprises.

(Denver News.)

About every other man who is to be met west of the Missouri river is a schemer. The projects that are here hatched are mapped out in endless conversation or in stacks of legal cap and then dropped monumentally, would, if properly described, fill volumes. Mercantile lawyers, physicians, manufacturers, preachers, invalids, and all the dependents occupy their spare moments in studying up enterprises of great weight and moment. There is something in the atmosphere which seems to encourage this peculiar phase of mental activity. A young man in the east to whom inducements to settle in the far west may be offered, is assured that, while the salary may not be large, he must not overlook the opportunities which a new country affords to smart, active fellows. Opportunities to gain millions of dollars in salaries in this country during the last twenty years. It is built in by all who may be established here, and is parcelled out to new comers as if it were an asset of those already here. It is intangible for the most part, and consists chiefly of magnificent visions. The privilege of dealing in opportunity is generously accorded to all, from the railroad manager to the kitchen drudge.

Some of the smallest men in the west are the most brilliant schemers. There is an old fellow who dictates between Virginia City, Leadville, and Denver who, has fathered more projects involving tremendous engineering feats than all the great engineers in the world. Every time he turns up here he has a new idea, and is very confident that he has struck it this time. His latest was thus described by himself:

"You are aware that the great gold deposits of California have been found in the beds of rivers. Millions have been taken from them. Now, I have a scheme that if properly worked, will make the finds on those creeks look like a mere trifle up and down the light. All through the Rockies and Sierras there are buried rivers, rivers that have been covered up by volcanic upheavals in the ages that have gone. Centuries ago these were rivers now unknown, as rich in mineral as any of those from whose beds so many fortunes have been taken. Now, if gold has been found in these comparatively new rivers, as most of those with which we are acquainted undoubtedly are, what do you think must be the richness of the deposits in those old river beds, into which the priceless treasures of a virgin earth were washed?

"I have located three or four of these ancient rivers, and have mapped out a plan of operations. All that will be necessary is to sink a shaft four or five hundred feet through the earth and rock, and when the gravel is struck, drift up and down the bed of the old-time river. There is absolutely no limit to the possibilities. I may say probabilities, of this scheme, except the length of the river that is to be followed from its source to its mouth, and untold millions taken out. It is a big thing, and if I can get some moneyed men interested in the scheme I will make them rich beyond dreams."

"I have got a scheme," said a thin, long-whiskered individual in a Las Animas tavern the other day, "which will soon make money to make it a stupendous and world-famous success. Now, here's this Arkansas river. It's no good after it leaves the mountain country, and with a little change in its course it might be made useful to the west. I have found a place where, by the construction of a wall of rough stone, seventy-eight feet high, for a distance of two or three miles, the river could be turned from its channel here in Colorado, and sent booming to the south through Arizona or New Mexico, as you please, and into the Rio Grande. With a steady supply of good water then assured it would be an easy matter to sell privileges along the line for manufacturing purposes for irrigating purposes, and to build watering-places for towns and mining camps. This thing is the biggest scheme of the time."

"The river now runs through a flat country, the inhabitants of which cannot and do not care to utilize its waters. Turned off, as I propose, it would benefit the settlements of all the country to the south of us, and involve some of the richest mining properties in the world. Think of the amount of stock that could be sold in such a scheme, of the number of companies that could be organized, and of the dividends that they would pay. I have been in with one congressman and several capitalists on the project, and the thing is working. The first thing you know it will be under full headway."

On a Denver & Rio Grande train the other day, a sharp-eyed man who had tried everything, from mining and stock-raising to bottling beer in this city, observed: "One of these days we will have a railroad through every canon in this whole western country. It only needs a million or two to make a hundred millions on a little scheme that I have been thinking of. In canons where you can't put more than one railroad track through to save your life, I have been thinking of organizing a company to lay the right of way in such places, and put down a section of track. Let it lie. One of these days they'll be a strike on one of those roads and they will have to have a railroad built to each up the mountain or through it. Our right of way and bit of track will come mighty handy, also mighty high; and enough can be made on one such deal to pay the expense of the whole undertaking. Before very long there will be a demand for the others, and so it will go on. I'm getting my scheme ripe."

The land grant is a thing which excites the cupidity of the schemers. Every railroad in this country known how necessary it is to keep an eye on the land. Everybody is scheming for them all the time. Dozens of jobs have been organized to capture big slices of the public domain on which corporations of one kind and another have secured their grip. Every legal point must be watched with the utmost care, and if any loophole is left open, some fellow who may be a stranger to the land is on it that opportunity is sure to crawl in at it.

A Statue Restored.

(Cor. New York Sun.)

There has recently died in Rome an old man whose name is not known to the world. The mutilated statues was scarcely short of magic. One of the finest marbles in the museum of the capitol was re-created by him out of 143 fragments. A beautiful statue in the balcony of the wall of a house recently demolished in the new city improvements. This old man had a mania for personal obscurity—even more than the ordinary modesty of artists. In his extensive hunting around among the ruins for broken pieces of sculpture, which he seemed to fit instinctively, bit by bit, one to other, until, from a shapeless mass, a perfect statue arose. He frequently declined to produce anyone of wonderful beauty.

A SLIM MAN'S SHOT.

How One Shot Spun an Old Musket Killed 150 Ducks.

The Feat Played by a Sport at Wire Threadneck Story That Silenced and Mouned Every Listener.

(Park's Sun.)

A number of gentlemen were in the depot waiting room admiring a fine lot of ducks a party had just laid on the floor, and were somewhat surprised to hear him tell of killing the entire with one discharge of his gun. About this time a slim, pointed-nosed man, who had been quietly listening, remarked to the hunter, who began to tell that the glory with which he had covered himself had melted and was beginning to run off.

"Wal, now, don't you get ratiled. I don't know as I'll give the scheme away," retorted the slim man.

"How many ducks could you ever kill in one shot?" asked an interested listener.

"Wal, stranger, I have killed and strung over fifty of 'em," answered the slim man.

"Fifty ducks at one shot!" exclaimed half a dozen.

"Yes, over fifty," replied the slim man, "an' I don't mind telling ye how 'twas done, if ye really want to know."

"How on earth could you have done such a thing? You must have been where the ducks were thick?" ventured a mask-looking individual.

"Wal, if you'll give me a chance I'll tell ye. I took a trip up to Calumet several years ago and I never seen so many ducks in all my life. I took my old army musket along and one cartridge.

"One cartridge" exclaimed half a dozen. "You don't mean to say you only took one cartridge and no other ammunition?"

"Wal, I didn't take anything else but an old army musket, one cartridge and a big spool of wire thread. That's the sum total of what I always take. Yes, sir."

"What was the wire for?" inquired the hunt ism.

"Wait till I finish, hang it, and then you'll know. Wal, when I got out on clear water away from the rushes, I saw about a million of ducks right ahead of me. I just took the end of the wire and fastened it to the bottom of the cartridge and hauled my gun an' put the spool on the bottom of the boat where I thought it wouldn't get tangled up, and then I waited for a good chance. I happened to blow my nose, which of course made a noise, and every duck raised his head to see what was up. I drew a bead on the center of the flock, and as I blew my nose I pulled the trigger before they had a chance to get scared. Jowhis! how that spool did spin while the wire was unwinding! The ducks flew away, I'm pleased to say, with the whole gun, but I had just 150 ducks all strung by their heads on that wire. The bullet had gone through their heads, dragging the wire after it. It didn't stop for every time enough ing one; it took the tail of that duck just as he raised from the water. The bullet would have got more ducks, only the spool got tangled up, and the wire all unwound and stopped it. I believe if I had had another cartridge and another spool of—"

The slim man was somewhat talking to the stove. The rest had fled and none but he remained.

How He Served Over His Time.

(Washington Hatchet.)

A funny scene occurred in the senate of the United States the day after Willard Saulsbury's last term expired. Just before 12 o'clock on that day, at which hour his time was up, he took the floor to speak to some question which was then pending. Vice President Colfax permitted him to run along till fifteen minutes past that, and then the V. P. began to intersperse in his remarks. Finally Colfax, rapping, said: "The senator from Delaware is out of order and will please take his seat."

"I am not out of order, Mr. President!" thundered the bibulous Willard in response. "Do you think I do not know when I am out of order?"

And then he plunged into his subject again.

Colfax turned and twisted, and then rapped again:

"The senator from Delaware is out of order, and he will take his seat."

This was too much for the new irate senator, not to say about launching one of the scorching philippics for which he established his reputation during the first half of the vice presidency, when the latter interposed with:

"One minute, the senator from Delaware is out of order because his time has expired."

For a moment Saulsbury stood in utter amazement, and then blurted out:

"By Jehosaphat, Mr. President, I really forgot that little circumstance, and will now close my remarks," and then for fifteen minutes more the strange scene was presented of a man speaking by sufferance of the courtesy of the United States in full session. And Saulsbury afterward boasted that he was the only man on record who ever served a single term of six years in the senate of the United States.

The Death-Struck Fall Forward.

(Chicago News.)

The critics do not seem to have noticed at least they have not commented upon the natural way in which Henry Irving represents death upon the stage. The American actors invariably fall backward when they come to the death scene in their tragedies. Mr. Irving falls forward full upon his face, and this, we are told by physicians and soldiers, is the natural way with those suddenly overtaken by death.

In a recent conversation with Capt. Lee, of the regular army, said that Irving's death in "Louis XI" was the most natural bit of acting he had ever seen. He had been a witness of numerous deaths on battle-fields, and he had noticed that when a man was shot his head fell forward upon his breast, and his body fell in the direction indicated by the impetus of the ball. He had seen Custer when the day after the battle and he found the dead utterly nine out of one hundred cases lying flat upon their faces.

American actors in representing upon the dead upon the battle-field as lying upon their backs. Perhaps they do this for the purpose of delineating death upon the conspicuous one. Irving's death is the most natural one. He sent the dead with their faces downward, preferring to more subtly convey the idea of death by an outstretched arm, a convulsively clutching hand, and a general but hideously artistic death of the phenomenon of death. Irving is the only actor we know of who has ever dared every stage tradition and convention, and who has given to people of the stage the impression of a passing one, and should pass into custom.

THE OLD CAMEL STORY

Cadi Hassan O'Donahoe's Gay Mother-in-law Section.

(Detroit Free Press.)

It is quite a number of years since the old camel story trails along the sands of time, as as the circus season is approaching it has been suggested that The Free Press start the ancient relic on its weary rounds. This is how it happened: Abou Ben Ali McGuffin, being full of years, died, leaving to his three sons his inventions, camels, for the single reason that he could not take them along with him. The will, duly attested, said the oldest was to have one-half, the second one-third, and the youngest one-ninth of the whole. The camels were worth little perplexed at this as it seemed to involve the cutting up of a camel, and camels were worth $1 a day on the Sahara that season. The three boys, it first-class mathematicians, had level heads and did not go $1 day to prove the old man insane, but went instead to the good old Cadi Hassan O'Donahoe, who lives in a model at redemption at Ann Arbor.

"Boys," said the good Cadi reproachfully, "you should not have come with those little matters. Ask me a harder one."

But seeing they were troubled, the benevolent old man asked the hostler to trot out his own camel, which had been his feed mess for two days traveling with Barnum as the Sacred Ox of Persia.

Placing the aged brute with the seventeen ankles in the hostler's hand, he said, kindly:

"There are eighteen camels. I shall now give you half of the eighteen, which is nine. How does that strike you?"

"It strikes me fine, boss," said the oldest, who was smart, but withal pleased at getting half of eighteen rather than half of seventeen.

The next boy shall have one-third of eighteen, which is six. Are you there, Mociarity?"

"You bet," said the boy.

The next will have one-ninth of eighteen which is two," and so the third youngster colored his two camels. Thus two and six and nine made seventeen, and the boys were sent out Cadi's aged animal left unscathed. The people marveled, as the Cadi had given each more than the will called for, which is rather unusual in courts of law. And they said one to another, "that's what it is to be good at figures."

Old Hickory's Charity.

(Ben: Perley Poore.)

Gen. Jackson turned a deaf ear to the numerous applications made to him for charity. In 1833 a large number of Irish emigrants were at work on the Chesapeake & Ohio canal in Georgetown, and the weather was very hot. Many of them were prostrated by sunstroke and bilious diseases. They were without medical aid, the nearest of the hospitals being in Washington, and the shanties in which they were crowded. Their deplorable condition led to the formation of a society of Irish-Americans, with the venerable Mr. McLeod, a noted instructor, as president.

A committee from this society waited on the president for aid, and Mr. McLeod made known the object of their visit. Gen. Jackson interrupted him by saying that he entirely disapproved of the society; that the fact of its existence would induce those foreigners to come 100 miles in search of relief." Mr. McLeod represented the deplorable situation of the women and children sick in the shanties without food, and begged for them, and with their protector either dead or dying; and observed that the evils which the president anticipated could not flow from the application. Gen. Jackson started from his seat at this part of the interview, and said there had been three beggars at his house that day. Mr. McLeod replied that there had been more than that, and pressed his suit. The president clenched his hand, and with great vehemence exclaimed that if the treasury of the United States were at his disposal, not a dollar of it should go to those were daily made upon him, and he would not be driven from that house a beggar-man, like old Jim Monroe.

Drawbacks to Book-Selling.

[New York Sun.]

Bookselling is going to the dogs. Avaricious publishers are ruining the retail book trade. Nearly all standard books are now sold by canvassers. The result is that the canvasser may handle $10,000 a year, while the bookseller has a hard job to make live. Book canvassers are literally doing the bulk of the book trade. The cutting into the book trade by means of dry goods bargains is also having a bad effect on the business. Those only use books to advertise their business, and of course sell them much lower than the regular retail price. Booksellers are now forced to cut down their prices in a feeble effort to compete with these dry goods dealers. A certain Chicago publishing firm has been giving away its publications in this city. They offer their own prices—tions at a discount of 50 to 50 per cent., and those of other publishers at proportionate reductions. Booksellers are not to be blamed with it is no wonder that the retail book seller has to struggle for a livelihood.

Tomato-Cans Put to New Uses.

[New York Sun.]

The gathering of old tomato-cans pays handsomely. They are sent to Newark, where it seems a considerable trade is done. The canner found daily in the garbage boxes of this city is tremendous, now that quart cans retail at 8 and 10 cents apiece. The cans are sent to Newark, where they are heated, when the solder softens so that they can be rolled by machinery into plates. These plates are hammered and polished, and used for the manufacture of the edges of trunks and cover of boxes in sandwich. The original price paid for the old cans is fully returned in the sale of the solder that is got from them, and the canner has the profit of the time he spends in gathering up what the "ragmen" regard as worthless.

A Festive Signature.

The quiet city of Perth Amboy is much excited over the case of a Pole named Casimir Kizminski, who, not content with having one wife in Newark, must needs marry one in Perth Amboy also. The story runs in this wise:

Some time ago Charles Kizminski, who is a painter by trade, came to the village, no offense meant, by the bay and secured employment. He represented himself to be an unmarried man and, a few weeks ago prevailed upon Mrs. Jennie Allis, a handsome widow about 21 years of age, to marry him. Mrs. Allis, who was formerly a Miss Wardell, had been Mrs. Kizminski but a short time, when a woman from Newark bobbed up serenely and claimed to be the only genuine Mrs. Kizminski. This led to an unpleasantness which "Ubsly," who was something of a dude, tried to dispel by claiming that the true female from Newark was not his wife, as he was not married to her. He admitted, however, that they had lived together, and that he was the father of a child, which the woman produced. On Saturday night Mrs. Kizminski No. 1 had "Ubsly" arrested and brought before Justice S. G. Garretson, in whose portly presence she swore that a Catholic priest had married her and the gay Lothario, but, she said, "in a fit of anger I tore up my marriage certificate."

She maintained with much warmth that she could bring witnesses to prove that she was married to Kizminski.

Justice Garretson seemed inclined to believe her, so he handed over the doubly married man to the tender mercies of Constable Ling, who placed him in jail, where he will remain to await the action of the Grand Jury of Middlesex.

Perth Amboy is in considerable of a "stew" over this unusual innovation in criminal affairs, as nothing more exciting than a fist town brawl has disturbed her peaceful inhabitants for a long time.

The Rev. James M. Whiton, of Newark, will give the charge to the pastor, the Rev. A. P. Foster, of Jersey City, the charge to the people, and the Rev. William D. Hyde, of Paterson, the right hand of fellowship.

A Happy Resultless.

Hotel Netherwood has upwards of 120 guests this early in the season. Mr. R. V. Woodruff, the urbane proprietor, says that it surpasses anything before in the history of this charming resort. We expect Saturday to have what of the regular guests, to be followed from time to time with the new arrivals.

ANSWERED.

Hail, EVENING NEWS! two genetal feel;
To have this come at evening meal!
The latest news is all the rage,
Discarding old, that's cold by age,
We cannot wait for mail, the dross
Most have the wise, or tale phrase;
Who in this age would resign to go,
By land or sea to the Buffalo.
The lightning train scarce answers
The wants of public, with such nerve,
They want what's now, that's morn, that's day
Not what's reloaded, by misery got.

ANON.

The Liquor Trouble in New Brunswick.

New Brunswick is having the liquor question brought home. The Common Council refusing to organize, the liquor dealers are unable to obtain a renewal of their licenses, which expired on Saturday last. The Reform club recently organized there under the efforts of Mahoe and English. Friend prosecuting all violators of the law.

The liquor dealers met on Monday afternoon and organized for mutual protection. The chairman in stating the object of the meeting said:

"You know that our licenses expired on last Saturday night, and you have no doubt heard that the Reform club have threatened to close every rum shop in town. We are met to form an organization or society to protect ourselves, and, if one of our number be prosecuted, to stand by him protect him and pay his legal expenses."

The reporters were excluded soon after the meeting began, and nothing further is as yet known regarding the course of action to be pursued.

A prominent member of the Reform Club said to a HOME NEWS reporter in regard to the situation:

Every man that has not got a license will be prosecuted. We will be governed by the decision of the prosecutor of the county. There will be no lot up on Sunday selling. We intend to break that up entirely.

We have about 400 members on our club roll, and in addition to that have eight hundred on our general roll, and as far as money goes, we represent as much money as the saloons do. We do not intend to persecute any body, but we do intend to carry out our program legally, and hope we may not encounter the complaints for Sunday selling. We shall give due notice of any events that may occur. We have no secrets, and reporters are always welcome to our meetings.

It is said that some 40 years ago a similar trouble was experienced, and that a soldier named Reid, by the name of Uhlin, made a very effective address on behalf of the liquor side.

The Council would not grant any licenses, but a special session of the court was called, and it gave what were known as court licenses.

Step Promotional Notes.

At a regular meeting of Engine Company No. 2, held last Tuesday evening the following persons were elected members of the company. A. Ayres, Edward Van Winkle, John Dwyer, Charles W. Tallman, H. Van Note.

It was decided to hold an excursion to Roton Point, Conn., some time during August, and a committee was appointed to take charge of the matter.

A special meeting of the company will be held to-morrow evening to arrange for a picnic for the benefit of John I. Kelly who was hurt by the truck some time ago.

The horses will occupy the new stables prepared for them in the rear of the engine house to-morrow. A gentleman from the New York Fire Department will hang the harness this evening.

Personal.

Miss Georgie Flanders, formerly of this city, was married on Tuesday last at the residence of her brother-in-law, Mr. James Mitchell, at Delavan, to Mr. Henry Taylor, of Evanston, Ill. The Rev. Dr. Yerkes, of this city, officiated.

Mr. Bret Harte, whose family have recently made this city their summer residence and who is American Consul to Glasgow, is expected to arrive home early next month. One of Bret Harte's sons, Mr. Francis K. Harte, is an actor with Dion Boucicault's troupe. He is the secretary and assistant manager of the troupe, and recently in New Orleans, played the character of Conn Shaughran, receiving much applause both from before and behind the scenes.

A Flower Mission.

A flower mission has been established in Plainfield by the ladies of the Women's Christian Temperance union. It is requested that those who have flowers to contribute will send them to the rooms of the Young men's Christian Association before 10 a. m. on Monday. The flowers so contributed will be used in this city.

The City Court.

The following persons were brought before Judge Good this morning charged with drunkenness.

Thomas Cuhalay, first offence, discharged.

Peter Coleman, first offence, discharged.

Thomas Boilly, an old offender, sent to the county jail for thirty days.

Base Ball.

A nine selected from the Plainfield Reform Club played a similar nine from the Railway Reform Club on the Crescent grounds in this city yesterday. The Plainfield men were victorious by a score of 18 to 10.

The Crescent Base Ball Club will play the Grenville Athletic Club on Saturday on the latter club's grounds at Grenville.

The New Chief of Police.

Charles W. Bodd, the newly appointed Chief of Police, qualified yesterday afternoon, and assumed charge of the force at three o'clock. Chief Bodd occupied several years ago the same position which he now holds, and is thoroughly familiar with the duties of the position.

A Wedding.

Miss Stella, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theo. T. Adams, of Duer street and Linden avenue, North Plainfield, was married last evening at her parents' residence, to Mr. William Randolph of Newark, the Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes officiating. The occasion was made joyous by the presence of a houseful of guests, a bountiful repast being among the pleasurable incidents.

The bride wore a plum-colored silk, and the usual bridal accessories.

The presents were numerous and valuable.

Among the company present were many gentlemen and ladies from Newark. The pleasure of the hour made the party forget and miss the train, in consequence of which the wedding did not terminate until six o'clock this morning.

The lucky groom received the congratulations of the company present and smiling faces indicated that in the hearts of the people and their friends, happiness reigned supreme.

The Season at the New Jersey Resorts.

The season along the New Jersey coast is thus predicted by George C. Boldt of the the Berkeley Arms, at Berkeley. I regard the prospects of a heavy season along the New Jersey seacoast as unusually good. At Berkeley there have been many improvements for the approaching season and the demands for rooms are better than ever. I shall open my house a week earlier than I intended to, as many of my guests wish to spend the early days of June at the seaside. The yachting season on Barnegat Bay will be a brilliant one, and some of the matches will be more interesting than those of last Summer.

Cruelty to Animals.

Mr. Editor, it is a shame we have so many bad tempered people in town. Last night one of our colored gentlemen living in North Plainfield whipped a little pet dog to death. The little dog almost asked him to kill him when he was lying on his back with his little feet put up to heaven. What a shame! I never saw such a thing before. The council had ought to see to it, that such persons are arrested for cruelty to animals.

A COLORED MAN.

THURSDAY, JUNE 5, 1884.

WHAT IS SAID OF IT.

The topic of the hour is the National Republican Convention at Chicago. All the newspapers from Maine to Oregon, including the great Metropolitan dailies, are teeming with the most minute details relating thereto, and editorials according to the bias of the editors criticise the events and the chances of candidates.

There seems but one opinion of the Clayton-Lynch episode, and that is that the Blaine element has been antagonized by those opposed to the "Plumed Knight," and the general demand is that Clayton would probably have been anything but denunciation had he been successful. As Horace Greeley used to say nothing succeeds like success.

The Evening Post says that "Clayton's defeat is something for which the friends of good government should be sincerely grateful."

The Commercial Advertiser thinks "if the same generalship is maintained which was displayed in the defeat of Mr. Clayton it will assure the downfall of the same agencies that were overthrown in 1876 and 1880."

The New York Tribune holds that the judicial leaves "Mr. Blaine stronger than anybody else."

The New York World considers it a great victory for the Independents. It puts it thus:

The Independents have proved to themselves very capable machine workers and have thus far carried everything before them at Chicago. They defeated Powell Clayton by a clever combination of the Logan and Arthur elements, and handled, and thus gave a serious if not a fatal check to the prospects of the leading candidate. They were prompt to see the blunder made by Lynch in fixing on one such an available temporary Chairman as Clayton, and instead of foolishly mooning the high horse of reform and respectability they paired against him, and won the first heat. Then Mississippi and won the first blood. They were not too delicate or conscientious to decline to fight the devil with fire.

The New York Times holds the matter as a great victory for the young men of the Republican party, attributing to their high moral courage Clayton's defeat.

Annexed is an extract from the Times on the subject:

The credit for organizing and leading the effort which resulted in defeating the selection of Powell Clayton as temporary Chairman of the Republican National Convention is mainly due to a small body of young delegates from the East. Theodore Roosevelt, of this State, and Henry Cabot Lodge, of Massachusetts, were the leading spirits in rallying the opposition to the discreditable choice of the National Committee. Men older in politics who shared in the feeling of disgust excited by the shameful effort to win adhesion to a particular candidate by placing in charge of the opening proceedings a man who represented all that was base in the politics of the country, refused to hesitate in deference to tradition and precedent. But the young men had the courage of their convictions. They had no respect for tradition as a cover for a proceeding which would at the outset discredit the moral character and purposes of the party. They not only displayed conscience in their political work, but they soon accompanied it with a definite and practical purpose with the energy and skill which old campaigners seem to have lost. They were persuasive and nothing. by dint of zeal and courage they succeeded in combining the opposition and inspiring it with their own energy of purpose. The result gave the convention a hopeful start and raised higher than before the hopes which look for an outcome of its proceedings which shall unite the Republican party and rouse once more the moral sentiment that is its strongest support.

—We have received the initial copy of THE PLAINFIELD EVENING NEWS, published by Mr. Thos. W. Morrison, formerly of this city. It is a handsome six-column folio, brimful of news, bright and interesting. It is the only daily paper published in Plainfield, and is eminently deserving of success. The editor says in his salutatory: "It begins its career hopefully, because it seems to be progressive, straightforward and enterprising—honest in its purposes, outspoken in its opinions, reliable in statements, and independent but not neutral politically." We wish the new venture abundant success. Plainfield is to be congratulated.—Home News, New Brunswick, June 3.

THE CONVENTION.

Permanently Organized with Hon. John B. Henderson as Chairman.

WHAT MADE CURTIS ANGRY

Refusal of the Convention to Assume the Iron Clad Pledge.

THE COMMITTEES NOT READY.

The Blaine Boom Gaining Strength. Gen. Sherman's Position—A Wast of Courtesy to Gen. Veterans. Carter Henderson's Astute Speech — Ministry Committees Hindered—Gossip.

CHICAGO, June 5.—Soon after the doors of the great hall were opened yesterday crowds began to pour in, and by the clarion o'clock call nearly every available place was occupied. There was the customary noise and bustle. The band was very oppressive.

At seventeen minutes past 11 o'clock Chairman Lynch rapped the convention to order. Nearly every delegate was in his seat, while the managers of the various candidates were closeted in committee with the chairman of various delegations. A number of prominent men occupied seats on the stage, while there was a large audience of the fair sex. Rev. Dr. Newman, Rev. Dr. Goodell, Rev. Dr. Johnson, of the First Presbyterian church, in the corner of which the most of the wast crowd had gathered, he lectured by the pastor of him who now so worthily presided over the convention.

Senator Gary, of Maryland, presented a memorial from the State Tennessee Alliance, of that state, embodying resolutions passed by that body, appealing to the convention of the Republican party of Tennessee to endorse a clause in their platforms distinctly recognizing prohibition, and asked that it be read.

Mr. Ward, of Delaware, offered a resolution referring to the committee on resolutions a proposition to enlarge the term of the presidential office to six years, and to render an immediate re-election of such incumbent impossible. Referred.

Mr. Plumb, of Kansas, offered a resolution against the ownership of land in this country by foreigners as a system opposed to the doctrines of the fathers. Referred.

Mr. Hawkins, of Tennessee, offered a resolution pledging the convention to support the nominee of the convention whoever he may be.

Mr. Pierce, of Mississippi, opposed the resolution, stating that the convention would not bind its conscience in the manner proposed.

Mr. Winkler, of Virginia, also opposed the resolution.

Mr. Hawkins, of Tennessee, said he had offered the resolution in good faith, and he trusted that no stain would be found voting against it. He knew that the convention would support the nominee of the convention he should not participate in its deliberations.

Mr. Knight, of California, advocated the resolutions, and referred to the action of papers in the air, and particularly to the editorial declarations of one of the great newspapers of the country as a reason why the resolution should be adopted.

Mr. Curtis, of New York, warmly opposed the resolution, and characterized it as one which would be insulting if not ratified by a body of free men. (Loud cheers.)

The chair decided that as far as possible rules of the house of representatives would be followed, allowing alternate speeches for and against.

Senator Dolph, of Oregon, moved to lay the resolution on the table.

Mr. Ewing, of Pennsylvania, made a partial report from the committee on credentials to the effect that they hoped to be able soon to complete the labors of that committee.

Mr. Ewing, of Pennsylvania, offered the following:

Resolved, That hereafter, in the selection by delegations in state conventions of delegates at large to the several conventions, parts of counties or wards be the unit of representation, and that the provision in each district respectively for the selection of delegates and committees for members of congress, and wherever a district shall be composed of more than one county, not less than one half of the population of the district shall be represented by the delegates and committee for members of congress; and wherever a county shall be entitled to more than one member of congress not less than one half of the population of the county shall be represented by the delegates and committee of the convention for the district thereof shall be voted.

Referred.

On motion of Mr. Williams, of Indiana, chairman of the committee on permanent organization, reported that that committee had selected Gen. John B. Henderson, of Missouri, for permanent chairman and would request the secretary to read a list of vice-presidents and secretaries. Charles W. Clisbee, of Michigan, was selected as principal secretary. The report was agreed to.

The chair appointed Messrs. Galusha A. Grow, of Pennsylvania; Gen. F. Hoar, of Massachusetts, and Gen. B. Williams, of Indiana, a committee to conduct the permanent chairman to the platform. Gen. Henderson was received with cheers, and, upon taking the chair, made a graceful speech, which provoked continuous and hearty applause.

Mr. Stebbins, of Arizona, presented a resolution to the effect that appointments of territorial officers by the president of the United States should be from actual residents of such territories. Referred to the committee on resolutions.

A delegate from California presented a resolution to the effect that the commissioner of agriculture be made a cabinet officer. Referred to the committee on resolutions.

A woman suffrage resolution was then presented and referred to the committee on resolutions.

The convention then adjourned at 12:30 p. m. till 7 o'clock.

Morning Session.

CHICAGO, June 5.—A disagreeable series of showers at times and several thunder storms prevailed last evening, and ladies were compelled to run the gauntlet of heavy falls of rain and dripping awnings to their extreme discomfort. Still none of the delegates, representatives of the press or ladies who could procure tickets remained away themselves. The visitors' galleries were crowded, and the appearance of the boxes and dress circle was positively that of the presence of the ladies who had braved the storm.

When Chairman Henderson called the gathering to order at 7:35 last evening the committee on credentials reported progress, and added that the final report would be ready. Gen. Gary, of Illinois moved that 800 tickets of admission to the convention hall to the ladies to the exclusion of the wag and

BLOSSOMING BOOMS.

Political Matters Progressing Slowly at Chicago.

All Kinds of Rumors in the Air. The Blaine Boom and an Ohio Combination—Gossip and Speculation.

CHICAGO, June 5.—The Blaine managers have prepared an analysis of the last vote upon the question of seating Senator Cameron Clayton to represent Blaine, and Lynch the opposition, they deduct from the 756 votes for Clayton those in favor of Conger, but 15 Logan votes from Illinois, 6 Arthur votes from Virginia, and 4 Logan votes from Missouri—20. This leaves the Blaine vote 349. To this they add one Blaine vote cast for Lynch by Arkansas, 9 in Iowa, 21 in Michigan, 8 in Kansas, 1 in Wisconsin, 1 in New Mexico, 2 in Idaho, and 3 in Louisiana—45 in all, giving them by the 394 votes for Blaine's strength—394. This is claimed as the development of the test vote in opposition half, and upon this the Blaine people base their confidence. They do not however, expect more than 325 or 340 votes on the first ballot, their prospective Indiana loses on account of Hester's candidacy not being included. Should Hester withdraw on the first ballot for Lynch, the Edmunds votes in Massachusetts, the Sherman votes in Ohio and the Edmunds and other anti-Arthur votes in the west, they believe they could muster 375 votes. The Blaine managers therefore claim that victory would surely perch upon their banner, either by a break for Arthur votes in the south, by a transfer of Lynch to Sherman votes in Ohio, or by a union of the Sherman and Logan votes. If all these fail, they declare that the ability to hold their votes in solid phalanx until the opposition tires or collapses.

Blaine on the Situation.

AUGUSTUS, Me., June 5.—James G. Blaine spent yesterday morning chatting with old neighbors and romping with children on the lawn. A reporter of the United Press called on a neighbor:

"What indication has Mr. Blaine given of the vote and policy of putting Clayton forward?"

"Well, he thought that a very poor piece of management as seen from this distance. Clayton does not represent anybody or anything. He is a representative of no faction even. It was poor judgment to nominate any body to carry in the convention Clayton does not even represent a great Republican state. The only thing of the kind to be attempted it should have been upon some representative Republican from a Republican stronghold. However, it is in no way a test of real signals in the little."

During the morning Mr. Blaine called upon another neighbor and had a long chat with him. To him he expressed much the same views as presented above, and also intimated that he thought the disposition of the convention was to scalp him. He thought the final test would be on the first ballot.

Mr. Blaine expressed himself as feeling in perfect health, and he is certainly looking in better form than at any time during the last few years.

Blaine seems to be thoroughly unconcerned. His neighbors assert that he has had nothing to do with his boom, is receiving no dispatches and has no expectation whatever of a nomination.

Another Blaine Boom.

CHICAGO, June 5.—J. W. Ady, a delegate from Kansas, and ten of his colleagues, have formed a combination which gives Blaine fifteen out of the eighteen votes of the Kansas delegation. The delegation has heretofore been tallied as solid for Arthur.

The latest important movement which has been started during the present convention has come to the surface. The Ohio delegation held a meeting with the utmost secrecy, and although it was a long time before reports as to the matter discussed were given out the main object of the consultation was undoubtedly the furtherance of the Blaine boom. Rumor has it that they considered the affair, with an eye to the vice-presidency should Blaine's nomination become an accomplished fact. It is unfortunate that it has been arranged so that Ohio will be put into line for Blaine as soon as Sherman's nomination is out of the question, provided that in such an event Blaine's nomination be followed by the selection of the Ohio ticket then would be: for president, James G. Blaine; for vice-president, J. R. Sprague.

A Dark Horse Probable.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—Politicians here are all at sea, and while the general opinion is that a dark horse will be nominated, there are but few who have any idea who the particular one to win. The senatorial presidential aspirants who are here, are in seclusion. While it is known that they are very carefully fingering a telegraph wire occasionally, no one knows where they are. Bulletins are being about in various parts of the capital, and anxiety is upon every face. It is thought here that Sherman's defeat is fatal to his friends that notwithstanding the fact that he has telegraphed Gen. Henderson that he will not accept if nominated, he would accept if it were given him, though it is not regarded here as likely that he will be thus honored.

Disposed to Favor Blaine.

FARGO, Dak., June 5.—Judging from a letter written by Alvin Lynch, temporary chairman of the Republican convention, at Leland in this city some days ago, Lynch is disposed to favor Blaine so far as he is able to do so. The letter reads as follows:

"I note what you say about Blaine, but are you aware of the fact that Blaine, Grant and Conkling are now friendly? It looks to me very much as if Grant would favor and influence Logan, will be the combination against Arthur and Edmunds. Ex-Senator Platt, I am informed, is a Blaine delegate for New York. The New York Tribune's defence of Gen. Grant, and Conkling's outspoken defence of Blaine and condemnation of Arthur, indicates the formation of a combination such as I have indicated."

The Grand Army and Greetings.

NEW YORK, June 5.—A special from Chicago of the Grand Army of the Republic said: "In case Postmaster General Walter Q. Gresham should loom up as the probable Democratic nominee for the Republican nomination for the presidency, almost every delegate who belongs to the Grand Army will go against him. We oppose him because he is claimed one of our chief foes from the service. Our grand commander was in the cabinet department, and because he attended to Grand Army matters which did not interfere with his duty to the government. Greshams wife is to turn him out. This act of the present general retains in the hearts of the Grand Army men, and we will vote forget it. Greshams will never be nominated for the presidency."

Gen. Sherman Declines.

CHICAGO, June 5.—Ten members of the Wisconsin delegation, who have been zealous creditors with preferences for Blaine, called upon Gen. Sherman this morning and urged upon him their willingness to transfer their support to Gen. Sherman. Acting on this request Mr. Sherman, who is an intimate friend of Blaine's, wrote the letter of the growing feeling in his favor. Gen. Sherman telegraphed the following reply:

Gen. J. S. Rosecrans, Chicago:
I received your note last night. Please declare my name not to be used in connection with the presidency, but rather for the vice-presidency.
W. T. SHERMAN.

Gen. Sherman Interviewed Hard.

ST. LOUIS, June 5.—Gen. Sherman was asked about the appearance of a nomination by the Chicago convention, and showed the reporter the rejected telegram to Chicago, but three days ago I mailed a letter to Gen. Henderson. He received the letter last night and I presume my letter just reached him, and I am glad it has got there."

"You would not accept, then, as unanimous nomination?"

"No, I would not."

"What are your reasons?"

"I have plenty of them, but keep them to myself."

What Made Conkling Laugh.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., June 5.—On being informed that Mr. George William Curtis had united with the Arthur men in a demand that the Hon. Joseph R. Hawley on the temporary chairmanship contest in Chicago, Roscoe Conkling threw back his head and laughed heartily, saying: "If he has always been a man of that stamp it is time to have a doctor swallow his own medicine. There is evidently a great deal of bitter stuff going down the throats of some people at Chicago just now."

Senator Sherman's Confidence.

NEW YORK, June 5.—A Washington special states that Gen. Sherman says he will be nominated; that a break in the ranks comes he will get most of the southern delegates. Senators Sherman and Hawley spent yesterday in their respective rooms, the former dictating letters and attending to their usual senatorial and personal business.

Tilden's Letter Written.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—Congressman Dobbelner, of New York, says he has had an letter from Mr. Tilden declining to be a candidate for the presidential nomination. It is not to be doubted that such a letter has been written, but has not been seen it.

Rock Island's Officers.

CHICAGO, June 5.—The stockholders of the Rock Island and Pacific Railroad company held their annual meeting for the election of directors to-day. The meeting was largely attended much attention because of the rupture between President Cable and W. H. Vanderbilt. The issue was joined on the re-election of Henry Farnam as a member of the board of directors. The whole number of votes cast was 397,123 shares. H. H. Porter received 238,788; John Newell (Vanderbilt's candidate) received 158,335. Farnam's majority 272,449. Francis H. Tows and James H. Cowing were re-elected, and Marshall Field was elected in place of Jay Gould, resigned. Gould's letter of June 2 was read at any disagreement with the management, but because he could give little or no time to the affairs of the company, while Porter was done in Chicago and could devote much to consultation. H. R. Cable was re-elected president; David Down and A. Kimball, vice-presidents; H. Hoxie, secretary and treasurer of the company. The chairman of the executive committee is Hugh Riddle.

The Eno Extradition Case.

QUEBEC, June 5.—In the Eno case yesterday the prosecuting counsel asked for a further delay, which was granted. United States Consul Hodgdon was present, however, examined this afternoon. The investigation was strictly private, not even the press being admitted. It is stated that Mr. Hodgdon's evidence was very damaging. The crown prosecutors are inclined to abandon the case. Counsel for the bank are evidently trying to gain time for another appeal. A dispatch from Montreal states that another indictment will be laid against Eno before the grand jury, which assembles there to-morrow. It is thought that Eno will be made into Canada. It is thought that Eno cannot now be extradited, but that he will be taken to Montreal on a bench warrant, and if found guilty can be locked up.

The Lasters Hold the Key.

CINCINNATI, June 5.—The lasters refuse to compromise, and it is feared that the strikers will not accept the arbitration committee will be mail. On the 20th of June, the date when the present agreement expires, there is every reason to believe that a general "shut down" in the trade will occur, and 5,000 hands will be thrown out of employment, as nothing can be done without the consent of the lasters, who hold the key to the situation.

The Broken Penn Bank.

PITTSBURG, June 5.—Assignee Wagner, of the Penn bank, has made a report of the condition of the bank's books. His report shows the amount due to individual depositors to be $1,250,000, and the amount of overdrafts, $1,250,952.90. Most of the directors withdrew their accounts on May 26, the day the bank was closed for the second time. Receiver Reed has been offered to assist in settling up the affairs of the bank.

A Fortunate Escape.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., June 5.—At 9:45 last night one of the walls of the Bristol Hotel, a fashionable family boarding place, fell in, letting the second floor fall through on the ground floor. There were 150 guests in the house at the time. There were many narrow escapes, yet no one was seriously injured. Wild excitement prevailed.

A Whole Family in Kansas Exterminated.

The Palisades Hotel in Ashes—El Mahdi's Persistent Fighter—A Despondent Mother—Victim of an Old Feud.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 5.—Sheriff Schaefer, of Miami county, Kan., has arrived in town in search of the family murdered. A fifth body, that of a young girl, was found at Paradise yesterday. She has been identified as belonging to the family of John H. Anderson, an impoverished farmer. It appears that the family had a knowledge of some crime committed by Lewis Wampler, a nephew of Anderson, and some days ago the two men left the house together and Wampler returned alone, saying Anderson had sent for the family. They started in a wagon, and on the way, it is supposed, Wampler murdered the women and four children and fled. It is thought that Anderson has also been put out of the way. Wampler afterwards was seen near Paola, riding the missing horse. It is believed he came to this city. The greatest excitement prevails at the scene of the crime.

The Palisade Hotel in Ashes.

NEW YORK, June 4.—About 1 o'clock yesterday morning a fire was discovered in what is known as the Palisade Summer house, which has long been an object of interest to the tourists who pass up and down on the Hudson river excursion boats, was burned to the ground, not a stick of furniture or any articles of value being saved. The fire originated in the southwest corner of the large building, on the first floor, in about the centre of the large building. Its cause is a mystery, as there was no fire or light in that part of the spot previously, and there was no smoking in the room especially inflammable. There were about forty persons sleeping in the hotel, which was to have been open for the season on Saturday next. The loss on the structure is $100,000 and on the furniture $50,000, $10,000 of which is in the London and Liverpool and Globe company.

Fire in Connecticut.

MIDDLETOWN, Ct., June 5.—A large fire broke out about noon yesterday in the lower part of Portland, nearly opposite this city, on the Connecticut river. Before the fire could be controlled it had destroyed Lavery's large wholesale liquor establishment, eight dwelling houses and three barns, with their contents. Besides these, three houses had to be pulled down by the firemen in order to check the spread of the flames. About $40,000 the fire was under control. The total loss is placed at $75,000, with but little insurance. No loss of life has been reported.

The Victim of an Old Feud.

ST. LOUIS, June 5.—Intelligence reached Vandalia, of a fatal shooting affair, which occurred at Perry, Pettis county, Mo., Monday morning, in which Al White, of Mexico, mail carrier between Mexico and Perry, was shot and instantly killed by Allen Hyde, a jeweler of the latter place. White is a brother of R. M. White, editor of The Mexico Ledger, and was considered a quiet, inoffensive young man. An old feud was the cause of the affair. Great excitement prevails in Mexico over the affair, and the result will be difficult to determine.

El Mahdi a Persistent Fighter.

CAIRO, June 3.—It is believed that the persistent attacks of the dervish fanatics are due to El Mahdi's urgent wish to capture that city in order to have a support to facilitate his access to Mecca. Others he will attempt to establish his authority over the Moslem world. Two assaults were made upon the town, resulting in the rebels being defeated, with five of their number killed and fifty wounded.

IN A LOOKING-GLASS.

Broadway Travelers Who Stop to Look at Themselves.

The Street Confessions—The Unkempt Shoe-Shiner—A Lover and His Sweetheart—The Gilded Tenderfoot—Others.

[New York Herald.]

Two large mirrors at the Fourth place glass are placed in front of adjoining stores on Broadway, above Prince street. It is needless to say that they are worn by the eye of the passer-by and well they fulfill this object. Men, women and children, be they in ever so great haste, can no more resist a look at themselves framed in the mirror in the glass than they can refuse to read the most attractive advertisement which starts off boldly: "Don't read this."

People begin to pair into the mirrors with on their way to business in the morning, and the procession is kept up until nightfall, when that part of Broadway is comparatively deserted. By actual count on Thursday afternoon 391 persons passed the two stores in four minutes. Of them all but nine looked into one or the other of the mirrors. Most of these neared specimens of male nobility, but many others after looking made some slight change in the disposition of their neckties or the adjustment of the expression of their countenance and the carriage of their walk.

A stout, well-built gentleman, with firm, swinging step, and shoulders thrown back, comes down the walk with the pretty fans and bright eyes, vanity-trimmed honet, well-fitting coat, and shining buyer, plainly denoted contentment with life and a solid bank account. He suddenly stopped and looked around as if to find out who had passed him so swiftly. He saw his own reflection in the mirror, and forthwith proceeded to look himself over. Not finding his coat-sleeve, gave his hat a slight rake toward his right ear, took a leisurely survey of one of his boots, and then, with a satisfied air of self-approval, resumed the even tenor of the even tenor of his way. Then came a young man of the genus "dude," who, after a brief survey of himself in the mirror, turned his back to it and looked over his shoulder to see if his coat-tails were properly adjusted. He observed that every one of the passers-by looked at him, and, with a flush on his face, said, taking the wrist of his left hand between the thumb and forefinger, flicked away with it very industriously for a moment, with the result that a speck of fresh blacking, which before was scarcely visible, was plastered artistically over his entire cheek.

A tall, slender young man, with a pair of sights of Broadway—approached the magnetic mirrors. The girl smilingly drew her escort's attention to their images in the depth, and both seemed vastly pleased. One of the most remarkable looking men in the looking-glass was covered with the reflected visages of those standing behind. Blushing slightly, and then the young man gravely, evidently desiring that the others might be benefited, turned his back to the window and became deeply interested in some bogus person's "Neighborhood Guild" or "Golden Rule Parcel" seeming to strike them very favorably. Then along came a young man whose exterior plainly heralded an over-indulgence in strong drink and lewd associations. His wrinkled coat, unbrushed hat, and disordered scarf; the two days' stubble on his chin, the glare of his eyes and the general air of rakishness all marked him as one who had been a stranger to sleep for several nights. But the mirrors gathered him in. He stood for a moment as if vainly endeavoring to place the countenance before him. He at last succeeded in his draft on memory. Passing his hand over his face, he examined long and earnestly the sprouting beard. He put his hand in one pocket and then in another, and at last brought to light a few cents. He counted them carefully, and then made a mental calculation as to whether he should get shaved or expend the money in the way he had the rest of his funds. While out coming to a decision he departed, giving place to a gilded youth with absolutely faultless costume. This young man glided silently by, as if fearful of producing some disruption of the airy attire he was displaying to advantage. His abbreviated light spring overcoat carried to display his limbs in all their marvelous symmetry. He too cheered the throng surging in and out of the mirrored rectangle. With a sneer, probably meant to express contempt for the vulgar mob caught by such trifles, he joined the crowd at the windows. In languid contemplation he consumed two minutes of his time, and then sought the friendly and truthful glass. He fixed his necktie, patted his hair slightly, tenderly smoothed his upper lip, and passed along.

The big, handsome, blonde policeman paces up and down before the mirrors pretty daily and all day. He has paid such attention to his personal appearance that although it is late in the afternoon he looks as spick and span as when he began his duties in the day. He has been so busy, though, in attempting to poise his hat at the most gallant angle that he has forgotten part of his duties as a police officer. Several times he has failed to notice a New York girl in gorgeous attire, engaged in a shopping expedition, stops before the glass and inspects her double. He takes no pains to disguise her admiration, and smilingly repins the fluttering ribbons at her throat and brushes back a rebellious waving bang disarranged by the breeze.

Then the scene is unbroken all day. A gentleman comes along and, stopping for an instant, watches the crowd coming and going. He smiles a pitying smile at the passers-by, takes a furtive glance at himself, and looks around to see if any one is watching. A miserable vagrant, with garments hanging from his shoulders in tatters, is a mark for the attention of all the passers. He peers hurriedly into one and goes off more conscious than ever that he presents a wretched appearance; but even to him no improvement has been suggested, and he takes off his hat and brushes it, and the tatters of his coat together. An Italian street boomer, with the face of a bandit, displays his strength in the mirrors, and his eye is kindled in admiration. A crowd of school children laugh and dance from one mirror to the other. A near-sighted man bolts before one of the glasses and makes many inaudible remarks. He possibly had the impression that he was on the verge of entering into some new line of business. As soon as he discovered his error he also surveys the reflector, takes off his eye-glasses, wipes them, and then goes over his general appearance.

A tall, slender young man, with a pair of sights of Broadway—approached the magnetic mirrors. The girl smilingly drew her escort's attention to their images in the depth, and both seemed vastly pleased. One of the most remarkable looking men in the looking-glass was covered with the reflected visages of those standing behind. Blushing slightly, and then the young man gravely, evidently desiring that the others might be benefited, turned his back to the window and became deeply interested in some bogus person's "Neighborhood Guild" or "Golden Rule Parcel" seeming to strike them very favorably. Then along came a young man whose exterior plainly heralded an over-indulgence in strong drink and lewd associations. His wrinkled coat, unbrushed hat, and disordered scarf; the two days' stubble on his chin, the glare of his eyes and the general air of rakishness all marked him as one who had been a stranger to sleep for several nights. But the mirrors gathered him in. He stood for a moment as if vainly endeavoring to place the countenance before him. He at last succeeded in his draft on memory. Passing his hand over his face, he examined long and earnestly the sprouting beard. He put his hand in one pocket and then in another, and at last brought to light a few cents. He counted them carefully, and then made a mental calculation as to whether he should get shaved or expend the money in the way he had the rest of his funds. While out coming to a decision he departed, giving place to a gilded youth with absolutely faultless costume. This young man glided silently by, as if fearful of producing some disruption of the airy attire he was displaying to advantage. NEVER SMILED.

The nurse said it could not live long. Two of them came and looked at it. True, rather pretty young women, with spruce and tidy dresses, with aprons and cambric caps. Trained nurses both of them, and proficient in name and education as babies that might ailing. The thing was to, shelter and feed it; they called it the shadow of a child. Pinched, thin, bloodless and miserable.

"Insufficient."

"Temperature too low."

"Wants a mother, you mean."

The nurse who said this took up the poor bit of humanity from its crib, and held it to her arms and her warmth, which must be if to warm it back to its miserable life.

Born in a hospital, and its mother gone on her journey to the far country. Its father unknown and unmourning of mother or child. It seemed best and kindest to let it die rather than to warm to life such a feeble spark of vitality.

"Will it pay to save?"

"Hush!" said the other nurse, who still held the child in her arms. "You never can tell. It may inherit talents, and it were a pity to waste them. Besides, it is a child and has its rights."

"Oh, I didn't mean that. I was thinking of its tremendous disability of the nose. The child will be dead before three in the morning unless it can get warm and be nourished."

They looked round the ward now dark and quiet. The little lamp by the bedside seemed to make the rows of white beds, the bare walls and black windows only more dull, more dreary, more forbidding.

"Call the doctor. I'd rather not take the responsibility."

"What can a man do? It needs a mother feeding. Some one has been stirring, and left that child to almost be its mother."

"Call him then. The man is young."

"And full of queer notions."

"Good. Even a notion may be of value in this case."

The young man came, sleepily rubbing his eyelids. It was from a sick-couch. Report on the child's condition. Decided that it should be the baby hard by. Then he looked at the two women in a queer, half-amused way, and said:

"Female knowledge."

The elder nurse shook her head, and the younger ventured the opinion that it could not live long.

"All right, I'll take the responsibility. I finished the machine this morning. Bring me a gallon of boiling water. I'll go for the apparatus at once."

He walked rapidly away between the rows of beds.

"A hot bath! I told you so was a fool."

"It's your duty to obey. The child's life is not in my hands. Say you have white; I get the hot water for this medical lunatic. There's one consolation—the little thing will die about it."

In a few minutes the young man returned, bringing what seemed to be a package of cotton wool, and a glass tube eight inches long by two feet four inches wide and deep. He placed it upon a table by the bed, and said:

"Shut a minute. I must get the lamp."

The nurse had returned with the can of hot water, and stood staring at the tube.

"Well, of all the crazy notions!—I wonder whose else hospital is going to with such impossible things! What is the thing for, pray?"

Just then the young man returned with a small lamp, a funnel, and a thermometer. He then took off the top of the tube, and filled it with pints of glass placed one over the other, and with an air-pump between them. He touched a handle at one end, and drew out what seemed to be a thicker tube from the other.

"Hold up a blanket and lay it in that, and put the child upon it. That's the cradle. Now the hot water."

While the woman prepared the drawer as a bed for the child and laid it in it, the young man put the funnel in a hole in the box, and poured in the hot water. The water did not appear somewhere within the tube, and then he thrust the thermometer into the opening where the drawer had been taken out. The mercury quickly rose to something over 80, and there appeared to hesitate.

"That will do. It is nearly warm enough. Give me the cradle." He took it, child and all, and placed it into the tube. The air in the manner was still in the box, and both the child and the glass could be plainly seen through the cover of the apparatus.

"What a horrible idea!" said the younger nurse aloud. "It's only an incubator—an egg-hatching machine."

"Convenient, you mean," said the young man; "terse for mechanical nurse. If the fowls of the air have an artificial mother, why not the human chicken? I've patented that modern idea, and the tube is lined with mattresses filled with sawdust to retain the heat. I'll light the incubator lamp to keep up a gentle circulation of the water. The temperature must be maintained at exactly 85 Fahr."

"It will not suffocate?"

The young man smiled and tapped on the lamp-box at the top, where there appeared to be a row of holes.

"The air enters below the water reservoir, and is heated before it reaches the child, and passes out through the top. You can see to that if you wish. I'll sit up and watch the case."

The two women leaned over the box and gazed thoughtfully at the human chicken, carefully sleeping in the embrace of its new-dust mother.

"It seems to sleep better."

"Yes, it gathers warmth."

"Perhaps it will live through the night."

The young man seemed to be pained.

"All it wanted was a mother. I know my mother would work. It has many great improvements over the French mother, all covered by my patents."

"I dare say it's better than a real mother," said the younger nurse, with just a shade of sarcasm.

"Yes. It cannot talk, and—and—feed itself, generally more amenable to the laws of scientific nursing."

The women looked the end of her cap-string in a meditative way.

"It certainly looks better already; but think of its feelings. What is home with such a mother?"

The young man bent fondly over his new invention and gazed upon the child asleep in it's pure cradle.

"Temperature rising too fast," he soliloquized. "The lamp must be turned down a trifle."

"It's a great pity your mother cannot feed the child."

"That is a defect, I admit. The cradle must be withdrawn when the child is to be fed. I have plans already drawn for a method of feeding without taking the child without taking it out of the cover-case."

"How soon will it be hatched?"

The young man felt hurt. Plainly the women had no faith in his mother. He must watch it, or they would neglect the machine, let the child die, and say it was the fault of his mechanical nurse. He would heroically sit up all night and feed the machine, if the child died it was important to know why, to correct the defects in the new mother, and if it lived it would be a triumph for science.

"For my dear Edward always was a sensible child. He overthought at times, and was inclined to be melancholy; but from the day I found him all now that he is a man grown, he has had this persistent melancholy. I declare I believe the child never once laughed in his life, and certainly I think he often contrasted to the poets, 'he is never known to smile.'"

"It was in an asylum you found him?"

"Yes, and I don't often think of it now, but propose or know about it."

She gave this a little emphasis, and beamed in a motherly way across the lovely girl who sat beside her.

"I have nothing to conceal, my dear Mrs. Stevens. I have known Edward for eight months, and always respected him. Then, he loved me, and took idiot person. Four months since you my elder sister by several years—married a Grecian savage and moved to the city, and had no one to confide in at last—and sent for the poor boy to the tender mercies of a hospital."

"Perfectly he never had a mother. (It's not true that he is not melancholy.) I—I—was brought up by artificial means, they said—by hand, I suppose, they meant. The doctor said it was a peculiar case."

"Who was he, this doctor?"

"Why, don't you know? The celebrated Dr. Sands."

"Ked mother's pet physician?"

"Certainly."

"Then I shall see him at once. This brooding melancholy must be cured before I can ever marry him. I couldn't join on my wedding dress with any hint of comfort if I thought he was never again to smile. Something must be done to rouse him—to make him see clearly that he is young, he's good, and good looking, and all that, but so sad, so sad and gloomy."

Mrs. Stevens shook her head doubtfully, as if even this had been tried.

The young man physician sat in his luxurious office, meditating on the vanity of earthly pursuits. Where was the young lad hopes, desires, and noble ideas. Now that he was old he was content with his earnings, his wealthy patients, and comfortable practice. His regular office hour was nearly over, and he was waiting, perhaps impatiently, for the bell to call him to dinner. In his callow days he could go on all night, and go without food to watch a new experiment in science. Now his dinner was the most important event in the day. Such can be the decay of a noble ambition, and the growth of selfishness.

She came bounding in, lively, vivacious, full of fresh, young life, that broke like sunshine of natural merriment. Clearly, physician nobody ever ailed. Her cheeks were pink, her eyes bright, a sparkling balm, (to blighted ambition—and the old man was truly gladly to see her.

"Miss Vivacia! Is this you? Charmed to have you come to my den. Lights, she-she place up. How is the mother?"

"Mother perfectly well, thank you, doctor. She has come to the conclusion to grow and I wouldn't do any more healthy—positively—and can't come to see you."

The doctor looked smiling and pleased before the healthy Vivacia, and wondered what on earth could be the matter.

"It's not for myself I—I—never ill. So are—and—I'm—I'm—in love—and I'm—I'm—sleepy—and melancholy. Never laughed—never even smiles."

"Not even in your presence! Must be a sad case," looking at her keenly.

"It is, sir, deeply affecting, too. A man grown, and, as his mother says, a man, never known to smile; and he is so be my husband."

"So! He will recover soon. You are his best prescription."

"You do not understand, sir. It is a strange story. He was born in a hospital, and as they said, brought up artificially—though I don't know what they mean by that. He was always good and gentle and dutiful doctor, do help me. I'm going to be his wife, and I shall certainly die of the blues if I live alone with him, and I shall die if I don't. Can't you do it into the life?"

A shade of deep sadness overspread the old physician's face. He bent down, and for a moment was absorbed in reflection.

"What is your name, child?"

"The Hospital for Infants and Respectables."

"He did not finish the sentence, for the doctor sprang up suddenly, and said:

"I know it. I know it. It's the same case. It is strange how time takes its revenges. I know all about that case. The man was foolish enough by my patent mechanical nurse."

"What!"

"His young head was pillowed on cotton-wool."

"What do you mean?"

"His life was saved by my patent cover-case, but of course I was not allowed to have gone out to a mother, but only an irresponsible machine, and this is the result. It is not strange that, as the poet has so well expressed it, 'he is never known to smile.'"

"What!"

He did not seem to hear her.

"Something must be done—yes I know not what."

"I don't understand a single word you say, though I suppose it is very dreadful."

"It is, child. It is very dreadful that any child should have been so blighted."

"Tell me what to do. Will he never get over it? Won't he outgrow it? Cannot you give him a prescription?"

"Hush, child! I see him think."

A solemn hush filled the room. The physician's mind ran back to that fatal night in the hospital. A baby Vivacia began to scarcely wide she was consigned to my moderate a person. There must be some horrible mystery about that hospital. Her nurse was perjured, for a night of savage scene the experiment too awful to describe.

Just then the dinner-bell rang, and the aged physician rose with alacrity, and said; "Miss Vivacia, you must stay and dine Vivacia. I'll consider your case, and send you a prescription by my boy in the course of the afternoon."

Miss Vivacia considered herself dismissed, and went home, and waited as best she could the expected advice.

It came in about two hours. She tore open the envelope, and found only a few lines in pencil:

"The patient must be born again, or he cannot be saved."

She threw the note on the floor in mingled misery and vexation. What did he mean by such cruel nonsense? After a while she felt better, dried her tears, and repaired to Mrs Stevens' mansion, and there told the note and the whole story before that motherly person.

"That's clear, sensible advice."

"It's rubbish."

"Not at all. He means that Edward must be a boy again. He must learn to say with the poet, 'Turn back-ward, O, Time, in your flight,' and make me a boy again," and so on. I declare I did not know the English knew so much about children. Who have we Edward, now?"

"Why, he's gone home, yet; dismissed at the office. Leave it all to me. I'll get him a cable and some other preparations, and he shall be a boy again. You go to his office, and tell him to come home. He has not had a holiday in four months. Poor dear little thing! He is frightful fun, to have no boyhood. You'll help me, dear?"

"Yes," said Vivacia. "I'll try."

"You will succeed. You are so glad and joyous. Do you think any baby would ever smile to see such a cloudy face as yours?"

"I'll do anything, Mrs. Stevens, to help once dear Edward, but to treat him as a child is just a little silly."

"It's not. It's good medical advice by one of our best physicians. Now run right up to the nursery, and look in the top drawer of the old bureau, and you'll find Katy's playthings. Hurry, before Edward comes."

"I'll do nothing of the kind."

"Then I'll go myself. I've been a mother, and I know just what to do to such a case."

With that she went hastily out of the room.

III.

Miss Vivacia was sadly thinking of the poor child's blighted babyhood, and inwardly raging against her friend for thinking that her fastened husband could ever be pleased with a top, when the door of the office door opened, and the lover solemnly entered the room. She sprang gladly up to meet him, with light laughter and lively demonstrations of welcome for the lover. He took her hand soberly, and said:

"Good evening, Vivacia. It has been a fine day. Are you going into-night, and-pleasant to find you here."

"Well, you don't look it. Why don't you smile, or laugh or look pleased?"

"Good reason. I don't. I don't not anything to laugh at. As for the everlasting smile so many people wear, it reminds one of that Cheshire cat-who, I am told, grabbed at the end of his tail, and ate up the rest. It's an absurd story, and I don't see how any one could believe such awful nonsense."

"Why, it's very funny. Her say you—I think it perfectly delicious. I read the whole book through twice, and laughed till I cried."

"What a paradox. How could you do both?"

"My love," cried Vivacia, in desperation, "were you ever guilty of laughing?"

"Never knowingly. I never could see anything to laugh at."

"Then it's time you did. The trouble is, you were a disappointed child. You never had any fun. Sit down, and I'll try to make up for it to you."

He calmly sat down by her side on the sofa, and she, nerved to her duty by mingled love and despair, took his head in hers, and mussed up his fingers, sang in an excellent alto voice:

This little pig went to market,
And this little pig stay at home," etc.

But, poor, foolish girl, she had not a word all the song was finished.

"Where could you have learned such rubbish?"

"Oh! here's a story. Let's play cat's cradle."

With that she pulled a string from Mrs. Stevens' work-basket, and, with both his hands in hers, began to wind it round his fingers.

This is the way. Hold up its little finger-wriggle it, and let mother play cat's cradle."

He suffered her to twist the twine round his fingers, but paid no attention, being absorbed in grave reflections on the sad and solemn subject of the living market.

"Perhaps it would rather play peek-a-boo with mother. Peek-a-boo! I see him!"

Just at this moment Mrs. Stevens returned, bearing a child in her arms. Vivacia looked. She instantly grasped the situation, and came to Miss Vivacia's aid. Swinging the rattle before the young man's face, she cried: "See the pretty rattle-stik go roundy-poundy!"

"Peek-a-boo! Mother see him!"

"See pretty dolly! Dolly play with baby!" Then, with a look of mingled despair into the young man's face, and tears, perhaps of joy, shone in his manly eyes.

"Oh, Edward!" Vivacia, she put her arms round his neck and drew his head upon her shoulder.

"Oh! come to its own mother."

"Yes, come to mother while nasty stags to it.

Sing a song of sixpence,
A pocket full of rye."

"There! Take the rattle and play with it."

Suddenly the young man rose, rushed his intended's arm rather rudely away, and said in a patient and serious way:

"I don't know what you women mean, but if there is a mother in this house, a darling omitted from an asylum, you are the pair. I'll bid you good-night. I'm going to Wednesday evening lecture to hear Mr. Descanter on the Rights of Women."

"Edward, how can you be so rude! I was trying my best to help you."

"I'm not conscious of anybody else. I have no desire to marry a lunatic, even if I live with one."

With that he was gone.

Vivacia was in a fury. Of course, they were married in due time. Mrs. Stevens had an earnest talk with her nephew on his peculiar threat of a foreign engagement, and he, like a sensible young man, said that Vivacia would be could never understand women, and would really marry one in due season. He went solemnly through the ceremony, and then, with a sigh of relief, went abroad. The bride tried to smile, but she was already in the gloomy shadow of her husband's serious life. Even when the baby was smiling, and then it seemed there was ample occasion for smiles. The grave and solemn father was not at home when the stranger arrived. Dr. Smith had been right. Nothing could be done to make one more desperate effort to repair the sad damage caused by his heartless and irresponsive, though patient mother.

"Vivacia, I have a child."

"Let me take the baby," said the doctor. It is a serious experiment, full of the great-est scientific interest. The father's baby-hood was blighted."

"I know," said the nurse. "I heard tell of it and your prescription—Unless the child is born again I cannot be saved."

"Yes," said the doctor, absently, "I believe that was it. Hush! here comes the poor man."

He entered, and paused at the door with a look of deep anxiety. Vivacia rose to meet him, the doctor and looked at the child on the old nurse's arm. The baby seemed, in a red and watery way, to smile about the eyes, and the father smiled in return.

The father gazed inquiringly, wonderingly, at it, a painful spasm seemed to affect the muscles of his face, the corners of his mouth were drawn, quivered, and he suddenly cried:

"Thank heaven!" said the doctor and the nurse.

"Thank heaven!" came feebly from the next room.

And the baby nearly strangled himself in an effort to join in the general joy.

Byron: Every fool describes to those foreign days his wondrous journey to some famous court, and expresses in quaint, and so makes your guess.

—The first number of the EVENING NEWS, published at Plainfield by Mr. Thos. W. Morrison, has reached us. We have been acquainted with the publisher for a number of years and know that he has the ability and enterprise to make the new venture a success, if anything like a generous support is accorded him. The paper will be independent politically.—Somerville Messenger.

—The estate of Stephen Brown of Bound Brook has erected a very handsome monument, well fenced, and having an entrance that surpasses anything in that part of the State. The work is about finished. The monument stands nearly 20 feet in height, and has a very beautiful concave die, which is sunk about 2 1-2 inches and raised one-half inch in the centre. On the top is a beautiful urn of the best Quincy granite. It is situated in the Bound Brook cemetery, on the north drive.

—The Building Committee of the Stillman's Memorial Music Hall have had brought to their notice a new style of pavement for the passageway by the opera house and are to have samples in a few days. It is known as iron stone paving blocks of the Diebold patent, arranged to present a most beautiful appearance, and, being made principally of iron slag, is of about the hardness of sandstone. It consists of flat diamond-shaped blocks having a series of concentric, interesting grooves on the surface, to prevent slipping and for ornament. The blocks are used in Chestnut street, Philadelphia, where they have been tried for many years. These differ from the pavement blocks, the latter being used ornamental.

The Work of the Flower Mission.

The ladies of the Flower Mission which was recently been started in this city wish it stated that the flowers contributed to the mission will be sent to the hospital and to the homes of the sick poor. It is their wish that a large quantity of flowers be contributed in order that the work may be successfully begun. Friends will please leave the flowers at the rooms of the Young Men's Christian Association on Park and North avenues on Monday morning before nine o'clock, instead of ten, as heretofore stated, in order that the flowers may be distributed before noon. The distribution will be continued four eighty during the Summer.

The Paper Festival.

One of the most unique entertainments of the many unique ones with which Plainfield has of late been favored took place yesterday evening in the Chapel of the Park Avenue Baptist Church. It was termed a Paper Festival and Promenade Concert, and was under the auspices of the Young People's Association of the church. This association has on many other occasions shown its energy and enterprise and is known as one of the most active of the associations in the city.

The chapel on the present occasion was decorated at every convenient corner and passage-way with some form of paper. In the centre of the room the conventional flower bower, of course, held forth, supreme though she got up not anything but a paper stool. The frame work was covered entirely with different colored paper, and a very gay and pretty aspect it presented. The only surprising part about it was that the flowers were not paper also, but the good genuine article was furnished, and at as low a price as was consistent with festival usage. On the side of the room next to the church a very pretty Japanese bower was erected, and like the other features in the room was made up only paper for its effect.

The young ladies in attendance at the different tables and booths appeared in paper caps and aprons, paper frills to their dresses and we are not sure but that some and paper dresses as they flitted about the room. They surged up and down the promenade they made a very pleasing picture.

The refreshment tables were ably presided over, and did a thriving business. The music was the best which has been heard at a Plainfield festival in some time. It was furnished by Prof. Felix I. Bonn, of New York, who has appeared here before and always to the great delight of his hearers. A number of his selections last evening were highly appreciated by the young people as was evinced by the lighter manner in which they tripped along.

We understand that the idea of the festival was an entirely original one, and being carried out to such a successful conclusion reflects great credit on the inventor. It is only to be regretted that the festival could not have been continued another evening.

The German Festivities.

The fourth annual picnic and show turning of the Plainfield Turn Verein was held yesterday afternoon and evening at Wooden's Grove, North Plainfield, at which there was a large attendance principally of Germans, and the festivities included dancing and earning.

It was one of the occasions wherein the German husbands, wives, fathers, mothers, sons and daughters, all participate. The grove is well situated at the foot of the mountain and the surroundings are exceedingly picturesque, wherein the Teuton frauleins and mein liebchens watched beneath the cool shade of the trees the gambols of their men.

The Elizabeth Turners, who were met at the depot in the afternoon by the Plainfield Turners, were escorted to the grove, and opened the festivities by f ats of tarning on the horizontal bar, followed by music from a band led by Prof. Bremm.

The dancing was begun by a grand march led by Mr. Frederick Clark and Miss Louise Krause, in the afternoon, and in the evening by Mr. Alexander Gee and wife.

The evening exercises were begun by Mr. Fred Becker with Indian clubs, which seem to have been followed by leveling. The latter was, however, dispensed with in consequence of the dim light. The club swinging was considered very graceful and accomplished and elicited much applause.

This was followed by exercises on the horizontal bar by the Newark Naval Club, composed of six athletes, whose performances were also greatly ap lauded.

Considerable interest was manifested in a handsome large flag belonging to the Elizabeth Turners, to whom it had been presented by ladies of Elizabethport.

The dancing was continued until about two o'clock this morning, when the crowd dispersed and the festivities came to an end.

Odd Fellows' Social.

A social gathering of encampment I. O. O. F., was held last evening at their room, in Coward's building.

There were present, among others, Mr. J. Barton Smith of Newark, Grand Patriarch of the State; Grand Representative Orane, also of Newark; District Deputy, William Jones of Plainfield; Scribe, John Rollins of Plainfield; Past Patriarch Crown of Westfield; Patriarch Slater and Chief Patriarch Morse also of Plainfield, all of whom made addresses interesting and instructive to the fraternity.

The jurisdiction of their encampment extends from Elizabeth to Somerville and from Newark to Bound Brook, and the encampment is in a splendid condition financially.

A social of the above character is unusual, and is held but about once a year, during which the brotherhood have an enjoyable meeting.

On this occasion the festivities lasted until about 12:30 o'clock in the room, and refreshments were then had at Book's, prior to the departure of the visitors.

Railway's Debt Compromised.

The city of Rahway, which, like Elizabeth, has had a hard time with a big debt of several millions, it has been able to make a compromise with her creditors.

Rahway issued $3,000,000 of bonds to pay for sundry improvements such as lighting the roads for several miles out into the country and macadamizing every street and alley possible. The city has since been not only unable to reduce the principal, but has also been unable to meet the interest. Several plans of compromise have from time to time been offered, but nothing definite has ever been accomplished. Yesterday a conference of the bondholders and the city's representatives was held at Taylor's Hotel, Jersey City. The city was represented by Mayor Savage, Corporation Counsel Berry, Finance Commissioners Lubburrow and Tufts, and City Treasurer Longstaff. Among the bondholders represented were the Mutual Life Insurance Company, of Newark, and the Grocers' Bank, of New York.

After considerable discussion the creditors agreed to accept 75 per cent. of their claims, and that amount was paid to them in new bonds to run forty years and to bear interest at 3 per cent for the first two years, 4 per cent. for the third year and 4 four per cent. after that time. About $550,000 of the old bonds were exchanged on this basis. If the committee is not accepted by all the conditions the old bonds will be returned to their original holders; but it is expected that, as the largest creditors have accepted it, the others will do the same.

Meeting of the Reform Club.

The regular weekly business meeting of the Reform Club was held last evening in the Lecture room of the Trinity Reformed Church.

It was decided to complete the purchase of the old Second Baptist Church building, on the corner of Central avenue and Second street, by paying over the purchase money $1,600, all of which has been raised, and leasing the deal made out to the Reform Club. This will probably be done some time to-day. In addition to the purchase money about $1,000 has been raised toward furnishing the building.

It was also decided to have a grand excursion to Ocean Grove on or about June 27. A committee was appointed to have charge of the matter, and the complete arrangements for the excursion will be made known in a few days.

A Free Fight.

At the Turn Verein picnic last evening a crowd of roughs got into a free fight, which lasted about half an hour, greatly to the annoyance of the peaceably inclined German picnickers, who eventually succeeded in quelling the row. It is stated that two of the combatants decided to fight it out over the matter, in regular pugilistic fashion, and went over into North Plainfield for the purpose, the fight to take place behind the last factory about three o'clock.

DEMAGOGUES.

In every affair of life there is more or less demagoguery. All things are not what they seem. All people are not what they appear. The purest gold is naturally concealed beneath dross, and brass is easily made to appear pure gold. Even language, Tallyrand said, was used to conceal thought, and Barnum says people like to be humbugged. Notwithstanding all this, the general sentiment favors honesty, and holds natural tendencies to opposite courses in check, when its presumptions become too offensive. The good in one class grows stronger as the bad in the other grows bolder, the one counterbalancing the other, and the world grows so worse.

These reflections are suggested by a perusal of the doings thus far at the Republican Convention.

The effort to palm off Clayton on the soldier element of the country as a piece of demagogue work, has proved a failure and been effectively rebuked.

It was in hunting rabbits, not rebels, that Powell Clayton, of Arkansas, lost his arm. Yet in defending the Blaine blunder of putting forward this unsavory person as Temporary Chairman of the Chicago Convention Gen. Ben M. Prentiss, of Missouri, and Gen. Clark E. Carr, of Illinois, reared and ranted and pawed the air and bellowed and grew red in the face in threatening the convention with the wrath of the soldiers if they dared to close their ears to the colored lepresidial "that empty sleeve." We fancy that the brave and handsome Union soldiers are getting tired of hearing their name and their deeds invoked by cheap demagogue roarers made of disreputable hack politicians.

Even if the substitution of Lynch was a trick to catch the colored vote, it is more pardonable than the attempted trick on Union soldiers.

Mr. Frederick Douglass, says that the "action of the Convention proved its greatness and did away with a prejudice of ages." Mr. Lynch may have been chosen for chairman by the aid of the purpose of "doing away with a prejudice of ages" against his color, or to prevent a lot of colored delegates from Southern States from being bought up for Clayton. If it was for the one, it was a rebuke for the demagogue; if the other, it was fighting fire with fire to prevent harm.

[Wall Street News.]

Two of three years ago one of the Appropriations of the old Congress was for the sum of $15,000 for improving Goose creek, Indiana. The engineer in charge for that district succeeded in digging the said creek the other day, after a search of almost six months. He found a rivulet three miles long, six inches deep, and three feet wide, and on the banks he found a solitary settler.

"The government has appropriated $15,000 to improve this creek," observed the engineer.

"I know it, and I've been waiting," was the reply.

"I don't see what improvement is needed or can be made."

"Reckon not, being as you are a stranger, but that are cash was appropriated to shovel down into the bank so that my old mule could get down to water without breaking his fetlocks."

"The improvement of Goose creek was made at a cost of 83, and the engineer will either have to turn the surplus up stream or send the rest of the appropriation back to the treasury.

The Essential Ingredient.

[Texas Siftings.]

Gilhooly had another unpleasant little bout with his wife last night. Mrs. Flapjack, whose coffee is famous for being almost as weak as a state administration. He stirred up the coffee, baked it, and called pardon-lessly.

"Perhaps I didn't put in any sugar, Mr. Gilhooly."

"O, yes, the sugar is all right."

"I suppose I didn't put in enough milk."

"No, the milk is all right."

"Well, what is lacking, Mr. Gilhooly?"

"Coffee."

It was very wrong in Gilhooly to make that scathing remark. He certainly cannot expect to be fed on all the luxuries of the season for $3 a week.

The Four Vines.

[Wall Street News.]

A Rochester nursery firm, who are shipping trees and vines to Nebraska, received a letter early in the spring from a customer of that place asking if the nursery firm could be furnished with any kind of fertilizer. He was answered to the effect that bones were an excellent thing for grapevines. He at once sent the reply:

"I have thirty of your vines. How many bones do I need?"

The firm wrote in answer: "A barrelful will be enough."

In three or four days there came in response to this letter, saying:

"Those sent me 100 more vines, as I have just found out my seventh man, and am long on bones."

Advantages of Being Married.

[Yonkers Gazette.]

"You are so happy now as you were before you were married," asked Mrs. Smith of Mrs. Comeoddeek. "Yes, indeed," replied the lady, "and a great deal happier." "That is strange," suggested the philosopher's wife, with a sigh of strange, "for most of the young married women ——" "You see, before I was married I used to spend half the time worrying about what dress I should wear during the day," added the lady. "But don't you try now as hard to look well when your husband returns home at night?" interrupted Mrs. Tuttle. "Well, you see, I went on the bride of two months ago, and I don't worry any about it now, as I have only one dress to my name."

READY TO BALLOT.

All the Candidates Nominated Amid the Greatest Enthusiasm.

SCENES OF WILD TUMULT,

Speech of West, the Blind Orator, of Ohio,

AND OF TOWNSEND, OF NEW YORK.

Blaine's Friends Make the Welkin Ring—All the Nominations Greeted with Tremendous Applause—Eloquence and History—Attack on Conkling Hinted—Scenes at the Close — Fighting for a Ballot, etc., etc.

CHICAGO, June 6.—There was a great demand for umbrellas yesterday morning, and before the doors of the convention hall were thrown open to the delegates and to the public, the 10,000 people that were waiting were down in torrents, and this greatly delayed the assembling of delegates. At 10:54 Chairman Henderson rapped his gavel, and the convention was opened with prayer by Bishop Fallows, of the Reformed Episcopal church. He prayed that those who might be elected by this convention for the loftiest political positions to which human ambition can aspire shall possess every qualification of body, mind and heart for their high and holy trusts, and that those who shall be defeated should yield to the just demands of a true and broad patriotism, and that a final ratification of the choice should be made by the people in an unmistakable way.

Henry Ballard, of Vermont, chairman of the committee on credentials, reported that the delegates from Alabama had been entirely harmonious and without reference to personal preferences. The report was read by Mr. Fort, of New Jersey. It was to the effect that the contest from the Fifth district of Texas are entitled to their seats except in the cases of the Nineteenth district of New York and the Fifth district of Kentucky, in both of which cases contestants are admitted to cast half a vote each. In the Virginia case the committee found unanimously that the delegation headed by Senator Mahone was entitled to seats. The report was adopted without discussion.

Mr. Parks, of California, from the committee on rules reported that the committee had adopted substantially the rules of the last convention, except that it recommended the adoption of "Cushing's Manual" as the parliamentary law of the body, instead of the rules of the house of representatives, except that the previous question is to be in force as in the house.

Mr. Parks offered an additional rule as to order of business.

Mr. Bayne, of Pennsylvania, moved an amendment to it, so as to make the order of business as follows:

First—Report of the committee on platform and resolutions.

Second—The call of the roll of states.

Third—Presentation of candidates for president.

Fourth—Balloting.

Fifth—Presentation of candidates for vice-president.

Sixth—Balloting.

The amendment was agreed to, and the additional rule adopted.

Mr. Sanders, of Montana, offered an amendment that no person shall be eligible as a member of the national committee who is not eligible as a member of the electoral college.

The amendment was adopted.

Mr. Parks, of California, then made a report as to the number of votes of delegates for future conventions. It directs that each state shall be entitled to four delegates-at-large, with two delegates for each member of congress; that each territory and the District of Columbia shall be entitled to two delegates, and that each congressional district shall be entitled to two delegates.

Bishop, of Massachusetts, submitted a minority report which elicited so much opposition that he withdrew it, and the majority report was adopted.

Mr. McKinley, of Ohio, from the committee on resolutions, then presented the report and the platform which was adopted.

Mr. Parks offered the following:

Appointments made by the president to offices in the territories should be made from the bona fide citizens and residents of the territories wherein they are to act.

It is the duty of congress to enact such laws as shall promptly and effectually suppress the practice of polygamy in every territory, and divorce the politics from the ecclesiastical power of the so-called Mormon church, and that the law so enacted should be rigidly enforced by the civil authorities, if possible, and by the military if need be.

The people of the United States, in their organized capacity, constitute a nation and not a mere confederacy of states, and the national government is supreme within the sphere of of its national duty, but the states have reserved rights which should be fully maintained, and which should be guarded with jealous care, so that the harmony of our system of government may be preserved and the dangers of centralization averted. Upon the purity of our institutions rests upon the maintenance of a free ballot, an honest count and correct returns.

We have always recommended the best money known to the civilized world, and we urge that no effort be made to unite all commercial nations in the establishment of an international standard which shall be for all the relative values of gold and silver coinage.

The regulation of commerce with foreign nations and among the several states is one of the most important prerogatives of the general government, and the Republican party distinctly announces its purpose to support such legislation by congress as shall fully carry out the constitutional power of congress over inter-state commerce. The principle of the public regulation of railway corporations is a wise and just one, and we favor legislation that shall prevent unjust discrimination and excessive charges for transportation, and that shall protect the people and the railways alike the fair and equal protection of the laws.

We favor the establishment of a national bureau of labor, the early remount of its eight hour law, as a wise and judicious system of general education by adequate appropriations from the national treasury wherever the same is needed. We believe that everywhere the protection to we citizen of American birth must be secured to citizens of American adoption, and demand the faithful observance of national differences by international arbitration.

First, Republican party having its birth as a hatred of slave labor, and a desire that all men may be free and equal, is unalterably opposed to placing our workingmen in competition with any form of servile labor, whether at home or abroad. In this spirit, we denounce the importation of contract labor, whether from Europe or Asia, as an effort to defeat by fraud the meaning of our laws, and we pledge ourselves to sustain the present law restricting Chinese immigration, and to provide such further legislation as may be necessary for its enforcement.

The reform of the civil service, auspiciously begun under Republican administration, should be completed by the further extension of the system established by the present law, to all the grades of the service to which it is applicable. The spirit and purpose of the reform should be observed in all appointments, and the law itself, and all laws at variance with the objects of existing reformed legislation should be repealed, to the end that the danger to free institutions which lurks in SPEECH OF HON. JOHN A. LOGAN.

The cheering which followed this name was scarcely as great as that which greeted the presentation of Hawley's name, and in an effort to speak he was overcome and had to take a seat. "The grand men of Illinois," resigned his seat in congress to march to the front, and

HE NEVER LOST A BATTLE.

His plume was always to be seen at the front, where the battle raged the most, and since his entrance to congress now twenty years, in both branches of that body, he has shown himself to be no less able and distinguished as a statesman than he was renowned as a soldier. Courageous, prudent and sagacious, he has never shrunk from any question involving public welfare, ready and eloquent in debate, fearless—yes, I repeat it again, fearless in defence of a right and true in battle against any of the enemy. He stands to-day as I said, without a disposition to pick one laurel from the brow of any man whose name may be presented to this convention.

"Thousands of veterans are standing around the telegraph office to see if the gallant leader of the volunteer forces is to be the nomination."

He asked the nomination "in the name of the north, in the name of the south, in the name of the loyal people of the nation now assembled in all their majesty." He offered the name of this man of courage and this incorruptible statesman, Hiram Ulysses Grant.

The name of Mr. Grant was received for nomination, and received but little attention.

WHEN JOSHUA WAS CALLED

the audience rose to its feet and looked over in the direction of that delegation. Richard Thompson half rose to his feet, but resumed his seat and a murmur of surprise and disappointment went through the hall. Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky and Louisiana were called, but there were no nominations. The audience suddenly became silent as a pall as from the western clock, and the name was heard yards away. The reading clerk hesitated a moment, and then in stentorian tones shouted

"MAINE."

In a second, yes, in a minute, like a flash of lightning, it seemed as though every person in the convention was on his feet, as if every throat was shouting, every handkerchief waving, every heart beating as one. For five minutes this scene continued. There was a lull for a moment, and then the enthusiasm broke out with increased fury. Chairs were thrown down, the crowd in the gallery before the bunting from the walls and waved it aloft, and the building shook to its center. The band struck up, but the tune was drowned. It was probably eight and a half minutes before order was restored, and a passage way to the platform could hardly be made for Judge Fessenden.

THE BLIND ORATOR OF OHIO,

who was to nominate the man from Maine. A hearty greeting was accorded him, when he stepped to the front. He said:

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen: As a delegate in the convention of 1860, the proudest service of my life was performed in voking for the nomination of that illustrious statesman, the first Republican president of the United States. Four and twenty years of the greatest history in the world's annals have rolled away, illustrated by the ascendancy of the Republican party. Reverses have threatened our flag, but it is yet there, waving above the mansion of freedom, which it helped to rear. Defeat has never dimmed its glory. Whether it shall maintain that grand ascendancy depends on the action of this great council. With hatred breath, a defeated party has combined to blacken the eyes of 20,000,000 Republican free men in the north. To be stretched forth through the hands of 5,000,000 political bondsman of the south, while above, from the parterres of light, is looking down the immortal spirit of the martyr, who first born in freedom's cradle, fell in freedom's battle-planes. Six times in six campaigns, has that banner trimmphed; that symbol of union, of freedom, of humanity and of progress, led by the always loyal old guard, the Wellington of the American army—Ulysses the Great; later by him at whose untimely taking off a nation shivered and wept about great Garfield's sepulchre. (Great applause.) Now that banner trimmph again, committed to the bearing of that chief (a voice: "J. G. Blaine") whose name is the synonym of political honor and great name will lift the hearts of our young men, stir the blood of our manhood, and re-kindle the fervor of the veterans; and the cohorts of the Republican party will march that holy ensign spanning the sky like the bow of promise.

The great Union hosts have ceased their contention. The subordinate issues resulting therefrom are settled, are buried with the dead issues of the past. The odds of the solid south will be overcome. Notwithstanding gun can be expected from that section. If the triumph comes, the north, the Republican states of the north, must furnish the conquering battalions. Forward, then, forward to the battle-fields; from the hill of the fishermen on the banks of the Hudson, the Republican states must finish those conquering battles. If brimming cornucopias, (Great applause.) and the proud dictate and demand your car shall be given to him whom our people will follow, not accompanying the funeral harmonies to certain defeat, but the great civic hero whom the hearts of the people desire to serve (applause), swelling the line with the enthusiasm of victorious battle, assured that the winds of heaven to certain victory! Citizens, I am not here to take one jot from the public integrity of G. F. Edmunds, of Joseph R. Hawley, of Shelby M. Cullom, of Frye, of Logan, of Farnsworth of Illinois; and I am proud to know to know that these distinguished senators whom I have named have borne, alike, testimony to the great civic hero whose life-long integrity of him for whose confirmation to the office second in dignity to the office of the president himself—the first personality in the public estimation of J. Logan Chipman, the man for whom these senators and rivals voted for secretary of state of the United States, the man who, in the darkest hour (Cheers and calls for Blaine and Arthur.) Send a representative of a particular interest, of a particular class to the country—the declared purpose of the Democratic party—and the night of the resurrection would not fathom his November grave. He must be a representative of American manhood, a representative of the living Republicanism that demands the ablest industrial protection, whereby labor shall be enabled to earn and eat the food of independent employment. He must be a representative of the Republicanism that commands the political following as well as the confidence of nomination; the representative of the Republicanism that recognized by the stamp of American citizenship and crowded by every right, privilege and consideration, as home and blood, whether under the flag of Bleeding Kansas or the banks of the Mohawk; Republicanism that records with disinfranchise the despotism which gave birth to the name of Democracy; the Republicanism that is embodied and stated in the plankform of principles and

This was called, and Judge Fessenden, after a few slight applause, arose to speak for Maine. He said he was no orator, and that he could not do justice to the occasion, which he said was one for a greater adornation for Blaine than he had, when the convention again broke into confusion, which lasted for several minutes, during which time the band and the phone were centered around the hall.

Joseph Hale, of Kentucky, seconded Blaine's nomination.

Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Vermont were called, and ex-Gov. Long, of Massachusetts, presented Edmunds' name. Ex-Gov. Long became one of the best speakers of the night, and notwithstanding the fact that the hour was late and the audience tired, he was attentively listened to and applauded. A wearily silent man was Edmunds as Long.

When Edmunds' name was mentioned the convention was liberal in applause. George William Curtis seconded Edmunds' nomination in his usual clear-cut, incisive manner.

When Curtis had concluded Forsker moved to proceed to ballot, and after debate the necessary motion to that effect was put on the question. The result was: Yeas, 391; nays, 410.

At 1:45 A. M. (Chicago time) the convention adjourned until 11 A. M. to-day.

OPINIONS OF THE PLATFORM.

Carlisle Says it Straddles the Tariff Question.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—The bulletin announcing the adoption of the Republican platform relative to the tariff adopted at Chicago aroused more interest among members of the house than any other news.

Mr. Morrison said in the morning: "I mean that the Republicans will keep all they have got and get all they can. They will raise the tax on plate, cotton ties, and other things."

Mr. Hewitt, of New York, said: "The action of the Republicans means that they want to humbug the whole people. They tell the people of the west that it is a plank for protection, the leaders mean that the obstacles to trade will be removed. I know they would declare for a revision of the tariff. Those gentlemen on the ways and means committee had better go to work and do something now."

Mr. Carlisle: "The action of the convention is a complete straddle of the question."

Mr. Springer characterized the action as "a piece of political juggiery to catch all classes of voters."

Mr. Hiscock said it means an increase of duty.

Judge Kelley said the plank means a revision of the prohibitory features of the present tariff.

MR. BLAINE TAKES CHARGE.

Managing His Candidacy by Telegraph—His Friends Confident.

AUGUSTA, June 6.—Mr. Blaine received telegraphic dispatches from Chicago at 6 o'clock. It was true until yesterday that he depended almost entirely on public sources of information for what the convention. But the Clayton plan of publicity on the part of the democrats was apparently more than he could endure. So since was kept going a messenger between his house and the state telegraph office. Mr. Blaine spent almost the entire day in his library, where he has given audience to only a few intimate friends.

Mr. Blaine's friends here and the publicans alike, are on the qui vive for the latest news. The bulletin board at the post office has been fixed in a crowd all day, and under the lights of private dwellings. Even from members of the Maine delegation, there is great confidence that the man from Maine will get the nomination. All Blaine's friends are pleased with the policy of the convention in delaying the balloting may be passed in long enough to deaden the enthusiasm of the Plumed Knight's supporters.

The National Committee.

CHICAGO, June 6.—The national committee is as follows: Alabama, Wm. Youngblood; Arkansas, Powell Clayton; Connecticut, Samuel Fessenden; Delaware, Daniel J. Layton; Illinois, David C. Littler; Indiana, John C. New; Iowa, S. H. Conover; Kansas, J. A. Martin; Kentucky, J. L. Moore; Maine, J. Manchester Haynes; Massachusetts, R. W. Crapo; Michigan, John B. Pryor to Colored Democrats.

NEW YORK, June 5.—Gen. Roger A. Pryor has written a letter to Mr. Thomas Ingram of the colored Democratic committee, which invited him to address a meeting of colored Democrats in this city, as follows:

"My Dear Sir: I regret to be hindered by some inconsistent engagement I shall accept your invitation to address my fellow-Democrats of the colored race.

"In the whole history of its history the Democratic party has accidentally deflected from the fundamental principles of its organization—equality of human right and universality of human liberty. I am not sure that fidelity to state rights involves no apparent sanction of slavery, and the repugnant obligations of the fugitive slave law sometimes no longer embarassed by a "divided duty." The Democratic party obeys the impulse of its original nature, and resumes the fulfillment of its mission to mankind. Such, I believe, is the Democratic party, since its emancipation from the unnatural and ill-omened alliance, the colored man finds a true sympathy and affiliation with the Democratic party. Its present attitude I cordially welcome the colored man to political fellowship, and greet him as an equal and worthy member of the party.

"Very respectfully yours,

"ROGER A. PRYOR."

Has Indicted.

NEW YORK, June 6.—The grand jury of the general sessions has found an indictment against John C. Eno for forgery in the second and third degrees. The indictment is the result of the examination by a committee of the Second National bank and several of the officers who have appeared before the grand jury. Assistant District Attorney Allen referred to dismiss the matter with a reporter who called on him.

The Pinkerton Tragedy.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 6.—The searching party has discovered the remains of John Anderson, the sixth victim of the Pinkerton tragedy. He resided in a small house on the Missouri side of the state line. Anderson had been shot in the head, and the body thrown into a pit. Parties are scouring the country in search of Westover, the supposed murderer, and his capture is probable. The county has offered $200 for his arrest.

The report was read by Mr. Fort, of New Jersey. It was to the effect that the contests from the Fifth district of Texas are entitled to their seats except in the cases of the Nineteenth district of New York and the Fifth district of Kentucky, in both of which cases contestants are admitted to cast half a vote each. In the Virginia case the committee found unanimously that the delegation headed by Senator Mahone was entitled to seats. The report was adopted without discussion.

Mr. Parks, of California, from the committee on rules reported that the committee had adopted substantially the rules of the last convention, except that it recommended the adoption of "Cushing's Manual" as the parliamentary law of the body, instead of the rules of the house of representatives, except that the previous question is to be in force as in the house.

Mr. Parks offered an additional rule as to order of business.

Mr. Bayne, of Pennsylvania, moved an amendment to it, so as to make the order of business as follows:

First—Report of the committee on platform and resolutions.

Second—The call of the roll of states.

Third—Presentation of candidates for president.

Fourth—Balloting.

Fifth—Presentation of candidates for vice-president.

Sixth—Balloting.

The amendment was agreed to, and the additional rule adopted.

Mr. Sanders, of Montana, offered an amendment that no person shall be eligible as a member of the national committee who is not eligible as a member of the electoral college.

The amendment was adopted.

Mr. Parks, of California, then made a report as to the number of votes of delegates for future conventions. It directs that each state shall be entitled to four delegates-at-large, with two delegates for each member of congress; that each territory and the District of Columbia shall be entitled to two delegates, and that each congressional district shall be entitled to two delegates.

Bishop, of Massachusetts, submitted a minority report which elicited so much opposition that he withdrew it, and the majority report was adopted.

Mr. McKinley, of Ohio, from the committee on resolutions, then presented the report and the platform which was adopted.

Mr. Parks offered the following:

Appointments made by the president to offices in the territories should be made from the bona fide citizens and residents of the territories wherein they are to act.

It is the duty of congress to enact such laws as shall promptly and effectually suppress the practice of polygamy in every territory, and divorce the politics from the ecclesiastical power of the so-called Mormon church, and that the law so enacted should be rigidly enforced by the civil authorities, if possible, and by the military if need be.

The people of the United States, in their organized capacity, constitute a nation and not a mere confederacy of states, and the national government is supreme within the sphere of of its national duty, but the states have reserved rights which should be fully maintained, and which should be guarded with jealous care, so that the harmony of our system of government may be preserved and the dangers of centralization averted. Upon the purity of our institutions rests upon the maintenance of a free ballot, an honest count and correct returns.

We have always recommended the best money known to the civilized world, and we urge that no effort be made to unite all commercial nations in the establishment of an international standard which shall be for all the relative values of gold and silver coinage.

The regulation of commerce with foreign nations and among the several states is one of the most important prerogatives of the general government, and the Republican party distinctly announces its purpose to support such legislation by congress as shall fully carry out the constitutional power of congress over inter-state commerce. The principle of the public regulation of railway corporations is a wise and just one, and we favor legislation that shall prevent unjust discrimination and excessive charges for transportation, and that shall protect the people and the railways alike the fair and equal protection of the laws.

We favor the establishment of a national bureau of labor, the early remount of its eight hour law, as a wise and judicious system of general education by adequate appropriations from the national treasury wherever the same is needed. We believe that everywhere the protection to we citizen of American birth must be secured to citizens of American adoption, and demand the faithful observance of national differences by international arbitration.

First, Republican party having its birth as a hatred of slave labor, and a desire that all men may be free and equal, is unalterably opposed to placing our workingmen in competition with any form of servile labor, whether at home or abroad. In this spirit, we denounce the importation of contract labor, whether from Europe or Asia, as an effort to defeat by fraud the meaning of our laws, and we pledge ourselves to sustain the present law restricting Chinese immigration, and to provide such further legislation as may be necessary for its enforcement.

The reform of the civil service, auspiciously begun under Republican administration, should be completed by the further extension of the system established by the present law, to all the grades of the service to which it is applicable. The spirit and purpose of the reform should be observed in all appointments, and the law itself, and all laws at variance with the objects of existing reformed legislation should be repealed, to the end that the danger to free institutions which lurks in the power of all such personage may be wisely and effectively avoided.

The public lands are a heritage of the people of the United States, and should be preserved, as far as possible, for small holdings by actual settlers. We are opposed to the acquisition of large tracts of these lands by corporations or individuals, especially where such holdings are in the form of non-resident alienage, and we will endeavor by state and local legislation as well as to correct this evil. We demand of congress the speedy forfeiture of all land grants which have lapsed by reason of non-compliance with acts of incorporation, in all cases where there has been no attempt in good faith to perform the conditions of such grants.

The grateful thanks of the American people are due to the Republican soldiers and sailors of the late war, and the Republican party stands pledged to the liberal treatment of all who were disabled and for the widows and orphans of those who died in the war. The Republican party has always stood for the repeal of the limitation contained in the arrears act of 1879, so that all invalid soldiers shall share alike, as to their pensions, whether they were discharged or not discharge, and with the date of their application.

The Republican party favors a policy which shall keep us from entangling alliances with foreign nations, and which shall preserve the right to expect that foreign nations shall refrain from meddling in American affairs—the policy which seeks peace can trade with all nations equally with those of the western hemisphere.

We demand the restoration of our navy to its old-time strength and efficiency, that it may, as in the past, protect the rights of American citizens and the interest of American commerce, and we call upon congress to remove from our statutes those laws by which our shipping has been depressed, so that it may again be true that we have a commerce which leaves no sea unexplored and a navy which follows the flag to every port.

[Against the so-called economical system of the Democratic party, which would degrade our labor to the foreign standard, we enter our protest protest. The Republican party has failed completely to relieve the people of the burden of unnecessary taxation by a wise reduction of our surplus.

The Republican party pledges itself to correct the inequalities of the tariff, and to reduce the surplus, not by the vicious and to discriminate against any industrial interest, but by such methods as will relieve the taxpayer without injuring the laborer or the great productive interests of the country.

We recognize the importance of sheep husbandry in the United States, the serious depression which it is now experiencing, and the danger threatening its future prosperity; and we therefore favor such legislation as will carefully protect the interests of the representatives of this important agricultural interest; for a readjustment of duty upon foreign wool, in order that such industry shall have full and adequate protection.

We denounce the fraud and violence practiced by the Democracy in southern states by which the will of the voter is defeated as dangerous to the preservation of free institutions, and we solemnly arraign the Democratic party as being the guilty recipient of the fruits of such fraud and violence. We extend to the Republicans of the south, regardless of their former party affiliations, our cordial sympathy and pledge to them our utmost earnest efforts to promote the passage of such legislation as will secure to every citizen, of whatever race and color, the full and complete exercise of the elective franchise and exercise of all civil and political rights.

The convention took a recess until 7 o'clock P. M.

THE DROWNING OF GEN. BABCOCK

Particulars of the Accident—The Body to be Embalmed.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—The secretary of war has received the following telegram from Mr. G. W. Benjamin, dated Astor, Fla., June 4, giving particulars of the accident which resulted in the drowning of Gen. O. E. Babcock: Mr. Levi P. Luckey and Benj. F. Sutter:

"Gen. Babcock, with the clerks of the Fifth and Sixth Lighthouse districts, arrived on the tender Pharos off Mosquito inlet, June 3. A large whaleboat with seven men, went out to him about 12 o'clock. On her return Gen. Babcock and party embarked in her to come ashore. On the outer bar breakers the steering oar was broken, and the boat filled and capsized. The general held on to the boat until she reached the shore breakers, when he and all hands were torn from the boat and he with three others were drowned. I am here with the remains on my way to Washington."

The secretary of war has telegraphed the United States signal officer at Jacksonville, Fla., to cause the remains of Gen. Babcock to be embalmed and sent to Washington. The body of Mr. Levy P. Luckey has been recovered and buried. The other two bodies have not yet been found. The seaman lost was Charles McCormick, of the Fish Fertilizer works, and not of the Pharos' crew, as reported.

Maryland Democrats for Tilden.

BALTIMORE, Md., June 5.—The Democratic state convention was called to order at noon yesterday by United States Senator A. P. Gorman. Phillip R. Laird, of Montgomery county, was unanimously chosen president of the convention. The eight resolution called forth great applause. It says that the democracy will never cease the agitation that will bring about the seating at the head of the government of one (Tilden) who, by Republican fraud in 1876-7 was deprived of the office to which the people of the United States had elected him.

The following named gentlemen were then elected as delegates-at-large to the Chicago convention: Hon. Wm. Walsh, of Allegany county; Richard Hynson, of Kent county; C. J. McGrain, of Baltimore city, and John Lee Carroll, of Howard county.

Also the Green Mountain Boys.

MONTPELIER, Vt., June 5.—The Democratic state convention was the most enthusiastic for years. Every allusion to Tilden called out great applause. The following delegates-at-large were elected: B. B. Smalley, of Burlington; John C. Burke, of Albany; Frank H. Dixon, of Montpelier; Amos Aldrich, of Medford. Alternates: Dr. A. P. Grinnell, of Burlington; J. W. Pierce, of Springfield; James M. Johnson, of Northfield; R. F. Powers, of Clarendon.

Land Grants Forfeited.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—In the house a second vote was taken on the bill forfeiting the lands of the California and Oregon Railway company, on which no quorum voted on Wednesday. On this vote the yeas were 165, nays 6. No quorum voting, a call of the house was ordered. On the roll call 310 members answered to their names, when a vote was taken for the third time on the bill, resulting in 249 yeas, 10 nays, and the bill was passed.

Mr. Lewis, of Pennsylvania, called up the bill to repeal section 23 of the act of March 3, 1871, to incorporate the Texas Pacific Railroad company, and to declare the forfeiture of the land grant therein made. This is known as the Louisiana Backbone road.

A motion to adjourn was interposed and rejected—yeas 56, nays 206. Filibustering was kept up for about two hours, when Mr. Lewis moved to adjourn, giving notice that he would call up the bill again. Agreed to, and at 6:05 the house adjourned.

DON'T WANT MEXICO.

The Lazy, Conceited, Cruel, Vicious and Arrogant Ruling Class.

They Regard Work as Degradation—How Women Are Looked Upon in "May-Hee-co"—The Young Folks.

[Crofter in St. Paul Pioneer Press.]

Do you want Mexico? We do not. There is nothing we do not need more. If we could take Mexico with only its aborigines, without the Spaniards, or a drop of Spanish blood, it might be worth considering. But the Indians, who constitute three-quarters of the inhabitants, are active, industrious, modest, peaceful, docile, amiable. It is a thing of beauty to see two Indians meeting anywhere on the street and take off their ragged hats to each other, and converse in solemnity as if they were kings. They are said to be efficient with pencil and pen, but, perhaps, is because they are attractive and kind as dumb brutes—anyhow, it is a mere incident. I have never met any people so lazy, conceited, cruel, vicious and arrogant as the ruling class in Mexico. They are so conceited and arrogant generally that they look, act and speak as if there were nobody else on the planet worthy of consideration. They are so cruel that every town has its bull fights, dog fights and cock fights; and within a week nearly every one of his horses on his own account, kindness to animals solely for their sake is almost unknown. They are so vain, and so lazy that they regard work as degrading, and I have never known one to carry a parcel of any sort through the street. They do serve as clerks in the city stores; but they are always apologizing even for this, and reminding their friends of the good old days when they were not compelled to submit to the humiliation. If one of these vaunted Creoles of Mexico has a hook to carry to the next corner, he will hire a servant to carry it for him. A Yankee loves to walk.

When I left my last home in Mexico I hired a stout Indian to take charge of my [illegible]. Our morning, having a hombre [illegible] to do, I gave it to him to take to the [illegible]. Pretty soon I started for home [illegible] on my way was startled to see [illegible] at my door. "Why, Jose, what is the matter?" I said. "Where is your dinner pail, my groom behind him on the [illegible]. He wanted for the groom to come [illegible] and pushed him off to a safe distance. "Yes, sir," he said, straightening up, "very well," I said. "I'll carry it myself." So I took the dinner pail, and I had [illegible] of [illegible]; but I suppose, he got a [illegible] to carry that basket of the Miss Editor.

They are vicious. The president's wife is carrying her own living in the United States—in Chicago, I think—but her place is occupied. This is the first year that the wife of an American has walked through the streets of Mexico alone, in the daytime, without being grossly insulted. They look for women as a class to be only fit to minister to their pleasure. As to their own wives, they are prisoners always. They are never permitted to walk or ride out for a moment without the full and complete escort, which is very imperative. One call from a gentleman will compromise any married woman in Mexico. It is not believed to be possible that a woman can innocently appear alone upon the street without her husband, or that she can receive a gentleman in her parlor without criminal intent. As a consequence lady who boarded at the Hotel Durlidis, tells me of a Spanish-Mexican wife there who, though as well as imprisonment will permit, has not been out of her room once in seven weeks, except to go to church (confessional doubtless) once on Sundays! Her meals are sent to her. To see American ladies out shopping seems to them tyrants and victims a degree too spectacle.

I wouldn't like to be a young girl in "May-hee-co," as they call this land—or a young fellow, either. It is hideous for them to speak to each other till they have virtually become engaged, or to see each other without the presence of third parties, till they are married. To behold the Mexican youth at his first courtship, gazing lackadaisically up at a brown girl a hundred feet distant on an upper balcony, whom he has never been permitted to speak to, holding his stool inconspicuously, and gazing up on his head a colossal hat brave with great ropes and arabesque of gold, on his legs breeches of some fine stuff elegantly with silver buttons or coins down the legs in double rows, holding his place with unwinking eye an hour at a time, and coming there day after day, week after week, rain or shine, especially rain, dressed to the nine, persistent and passionate—well, I know few more sobering spectacles. In two months, if he is lucky, he will be able to get into the house and sit in the "front room" with the old folks. And in two months more he will marry her and lock her up.

SOCRATES' DOG.

[Fred R. King.]

Only a dirty black and white dog!
Yet many a man may envy
Trusting, friendly frisky dog
As he trots around to envy.
As he looks up with wistful eyes,
"I don't count to be to poor boy."

His tail hangs drooping between his legs;
His body is thin and spare;
He carries a long nose; and well dot dog
That shows us their every care!
And he wonders what they must think of him,
And grieves at his own hard fate.

Sometimes he sees a friendly face—
A face that he seems to know;
And thinks it may be the master
Dead, it may be years ago;
And even dares to follow him home,
For he loved his master so!

Poor Jack! He's only mistaken again,
And almost every time;
But he's sent to disappointment now,
And he takes up his broken track.
Nobody's dog—for whom nobody cares—
Poor, unfortunate Jack!

A CASE OF KEEN OBSERVATION.

An Arkansaw Official at the "Dog-eat Will Ever Saw."

[Arkansaw Traveler.]

A man is never so much impressed with his wife's power of discernment as when he goes home drunk and attempts to play sober. As a rule, the man has only taken one drink. He doesn't understand why one drink should make him drunk, but after awhile he acknowledges that he did take two drinks, but the last one was so small that he had forgotten it.

The other night when Mr. Harvey Binden, a well known official of Arkansaw, went home, he had reached that close observing stage of intoxication when a man stops and intimately examines the most unimportant objects and takes mental comments. In this state of drunkenness a man takes notice of every household article. Every chair demands a certain amount of attention.

After sitting down with studied gravity, Mr. Harvey Binden noticed a feather lying on the floor. He debated for a while whether or not it would be an illustration of sobriety to remove it, and, remembering that he had often seen his wife pick feathers from the carpet after having performed the pillows in making the bed, he arose, took up the feather, examined it a moment, raised a window and threw it out. This performance did not satisfy Mr. Binden, for he still felt that there lurked a suspicion that his wife might fancy him to be drunk. He looked around for one, but he discovered the water-bucket. He knew that to bring fresh water would, beyond a doubt, settle the question of his sobriety, so he took up the bucket and went out to the well. Feeling around and not finding the "moss-covered bucket," but deciding that it must be at the bottom of the well, he let down the windlass. For fifteen minutes he turned the crank. "Dogone well I ever saw," he mused, and continued to grind. After awhile his wife came out and said:

"Harvey, what in the name of common sense are you doing?"

"Trying to draw bucket water. Dogone well ever saw. Grindin' for hour, bucket not up yet."

"Why, don't you know that we had the well cleaned out, and that the bucket has been taken off? Come on away. You are as drunk as a fool."

"Keen observation I ever saw," said the unfortunate gentleman to himself. "Never saw thing like it."

Insurance Company for Dogs.

[Boston Globe.]

"Don't you know that the wealthy people of this city are running over with dogs? Why, there're more dogs on the Back Bay, poodles and pugs and pets of all kinds than you could hunt up in a week. Generally speaking their owners are nice young girls or doting old ladies, who are really affectionate toward them. There's the basis of my company—a vast number of dogs half begging the extinction of the wealthy people. You admit that? Very well. I establish a insurance company. I get in the best premiums $20 or $30, or any even [illegible]. Seven years is the average age of [illegible] in seven years I collect quite [illegible] don't I?"

HOW IT WOUND UP.

The Most Extraordinary Thing He Ever Saw in His Life.

His Friends from Boston—Clam Cocktails—In a Fourier Pitcher—Bitter Remorse—"At Thirsh Period."

[New York Sun.]

"It was extraordinary thing I ever saw in all life," remarked a motor-looking young man as he dropped heavily into a chair in a popular cafe up-town last night and gravely nodded his head to several acquaintances. "I fell in with th' Fleishers on m' way uptown, an' they got th' best of me. I'm done brown."

He shook his head with solemn disapproval and began to make rings on the damp table with the bottom of an empty glass. His scarf was awry, his hair disarranged, and his coat buttoned irregularly. There was an expression of silence and bitter remorse on his face, and his words were thick. He was a broker. His friends sat around the table in lounging attitudes and grinned with amusement at one another as they drew him out.

"Whom did you meet, Billy?" asked one of them kindly.

"Boston friends," he remarked figuratively, "who asked me if I'd ever had a clam cocktail. Told 'm I'd never heard 't 't. They said 'twas th' on'y thing in Bos'on, and that 'twas th' best thing to brace up on in th' world. Well, you know me, Pete? I'm always ready to 'periment, so we went down in Pine street an' had 'em. three clam cocktails apiece—forgot how many."

"How do you make them, Bill?"

"Make who?" asked Billy, who had fallen half asleep after his effort. "Oh, yes, clam cocktails. Take clam—small clam—put in lemon squeeze an' squeeze juice in glass. Also put in juice from shell. Then stir bit her, red pepper, an' dash salt. Mix an' drink. It's insane."

"Is that all you had?"

"Well, d'ye mean I imagine that I'm as I pear fly situated [No, sir. We then went up town, an' one of the Bos'n boys said he had a drink in Liverpool that pleased 'im ver much. So we 'ad som 'f that. It consists of small glass pantry an' ginger ale, ginger ale. Mix 'em up. Knock you cold. We 'ad lot, an' then we 'ad a'n brandy an' soda with 'em."

Here he relapsed into a doze, from which he was with difficulty aroused.

"Af'r that," he continued, laboriously, "one of the Bos'n said 's 'f would say a drink had been in mind—Hoboken, which said we would, bein' then up in G sharp. So we went into place in Broadway an' we got porter pepper sauce, porter—"

"Porter pitcher?"

"Yes per—pew—well, we got one. Then we took five bottle Apollo ale an' one small bottle champagne an', mixed 'em with chopped ice in pew—pitcher know what, what we did then three times an' then one of, of th' Bill's said a shantygaff would go good, which we did it an' 'twas a success."

"How far up-town were you at this time?"

"At thish period we were in th' neighborhood of Block's store. Then we had s'm Rabbit gin with milk."

Fire Department Notes.

Neptune Steam Fire Engine Co. No. 2, of New Brunswick has extended an invitation to Pilot field Engine Co., No. 3, to participate in the bi-annual and bicentennial celebration of the Fire Department of that city. At a meeting of the Plainfield Co., Tuesday evening, the invitation was formally accepted.

The expert from the New York Fire Department, who has been engaged to hang the patent harness for Plainfield Engine Co's. horses in the new stable, did not arrive Thursday evening, as was expected. The harness is so suspended from the ceiling that, as the trained horses run under it it can be instantly dropped on them and fastened by spring fastenings. Friday one of the committee, having this matter in charge, visited New York about the delay, and he says he learn that it is due to some misunderstanding as to the plan of the New York Fire Department to dispose of the device.

On next Tuesday evening in the Council Chamber the Board of Managers of the Fire Department will hold their regular monthly meeting, and at the same time will distribute the new badges to the members of the Department.

Hunger and Misery.

NEWARK, June 7.—Six children, the eldest 15 years and the youngest 4 months old, were found last night sleeping in the hallway of the house No. 16 Wallace place, this city, and the police removed them to the police central office.

The oldest said that their father was James Clark, a hatter who was given to dissipation. On Tuesday the family were ejected for non-payment of rent, and after storing their furniture in a neighboring cellar, mother, father and six children slept Tuesday night in the hall.

Yesterday morning the father went out and after waiting several hours for him to return his wife started after him. When she returned she found the children were gone, but soon found them at the police station. The police will provide for the family.

Temperance Services.

Interesting Union Gospel Temperance services will be held to-morrow afternoon at 4:15 o'clock by the Women's Christian Temperance Union, in the Holly Tree Inn. The exercises will consist in part of brief testimonial addresses by Christian workers of denominations, and members of the Reform Club. Spirited congregational singing by the Club Choristers will be a prominent feature.

The Reform Club meeting on Monday evening will be held in the Park Avenue Church. The services will consist partly of a temperance sermon preached by the pastor of the church, Rev. V. V. Raymond.

Attempted Suicide.

She then drank a quantity of whiskey and yesterday morning swallowed a dose of laudanum, which nearly ended her life by producing stupor. She was found in the barn by a brother-in-law of her husband, who had hanged himself about 12 o'clock.

She has been living unhappily with her husband for some time past, and is said to be afflicted with a disease of the heart. She has four children living.

Acoustic.

The evening breeze doth bring us news of day,
However much the morning has to say.
Ere sunset, it is said. We need fresh news,
Efficiently it comes, as nightfall dews.
Variety is brought, from far and near,
Each member of our homes may read, or hear.
Negotiate at once—for such a boon,
It costs much thought and toil, from noon 'till noon.
Note, for our families it has a claim,
Genius poisons used it, children, too, the same;
Nutritious buts to head, and heart, and life,
Enduking not in envy, scorn, or strife
We hail it as the summer flowers, that bloom,
Sing on bright bed of News, dispelling gloom.

The Tonsorial Art Abroad.

Otto Supply, a native of Baden, from which he became a resident of Plainfield, and is now engaged at Eugene Laine's establishment, removing the facial stubble of the genius homo who abide in this delectable locality, was formerly similarly occupied in his native city. The difference in rassoing the masculine hirsute crop is very interesting. Mr. Supply came here from Baden about two months ago.

The barber in Baden, as in other parts of Germany, is engaged more at the homes of his customers than in the barber's place of business, because most Germans prefer to be shaved at their own homes.

The barber carries his implements of trade in a small box, resembling a little trunk about the size of an ordinary cigar box. These consist of a small bottle of water, kept warm, a piece of shaving soap, a small plate per upon which to make lather, a couple of towels, two razors and a strop to sharpen the razors. An extra platter is carried for the lather and beard to be placed on as removed.

The barber has a specified time for each customer, and usually shaves from thirty to forty per day, except Saturdays, when the number reaches to sixty or seventy.

A description of one visit will suffice as a sample of all. The barber enters the customer's house, generally without any ceremony of knocking, or of ringing of doorbells. The customer sits on an ordinary chair, and has the barber's towel placed around his neck. The barber then takes the soap and, pouring a little of the warm water from the bottle, on to the platter, rubs the soap on the platter until he has secured the requisite lather, which he then applies to the customer's face, often using no brush, simply the hand. The customer is shaved over once, and is required himself to wash off the remaining lather, instead of having all this done for him as in America.

This completes the operation, and the charge is two and a half cents. The price is less when the engagement is monthly, and still less if a yearly engagement is made. Customers at the barbers are usually rushed through at the rate of one every four minutes.

The journeyman barber is given a number of customers to visit and attend to, and receives as wages a sum equal to one dollar per week, in exceptional cases as much as $1.50, and more rarely $2. The wages are so small that he never marries before he gets in business for himself, or has quietly picked up a number of extra customers on his own account, a thing quite common.

Persons passing on usually tell where the barber has been. As he leaves one customer, he removes the cut beard and lather on the platter with one finger and throws it into the street, where its serves as a mark of his course.

In this country a barber receives 400 to 900 per cent. more for a s[illegible] does from four to six times as m[illegible] each customer. A shave [illegible] patient occupies but three [illegible] while here, when pro[illegible] occupies from twel[illegible]

Twenty-five Years.

To the Editor of the Evening News.

Fremont, Lincoln, Grant, Hayes, Garfield —Blaine. These are the men whom the Republican party has successively placed in nomination for the high office of President of the Union. The first was nominated by the party in its infancy and was just elected. Since that defeat the popular instinct has never been wrong on the question of the right man to lead the Republican Host. It was not wrong in the nomination of yesterday. When the 820 delegates and the 16,000 visitors from every State, County and Township in this country met at Chicago and compared notes, it was discovered that the dial finger of popular sentiment pointed North to the statesman of the Pine Tree State. From the first hour his popularity grew until it overshadowed all competitors. Every square inch of Territory was represented by a delegate, who told his fellows whom his constituents preferred and, the result is the nomination of the brilliant Statesman, the accomplished writer, the skillful debater and the resistless orator, James G. Blaine.

His instrumentality in organizing, defending, supporting and leading the Republican, party during the past twenty-five years is too well-known to need description. His power, ability and skill in debate are common knowledge. He is pre-eminently fitted to lead the party, to battle and to victory. Just now there may be disappointments, jealousies, apathy among the friends of other candidates. They will mainly disappear under free discussion, and the steady march of events, destruction and slander will be in requisition as in Garfield's case, but their edges will have been blunted before the ides of November. There is no mistaking the popular sentiment, and there is no resisting the popular will. Let the other side put up Cleveland, Tilden, or even the chevalier Bayard in any other of its chosen champions he and it will go down, under the steady, resistless tramp, tramp, tramp of the Republican hosts, with Blaine at their head, of all the candidates named he is the most likely to carry New Jersey.

Potter Press Works.

Mr. C. Potter, Jr., the proprietor of the Potter Press Works, at the southwesterly end of the city, is having the addition to these works, of which he is the proprietor, rush forward with all possible speed, to meet the constantly increasing demand for the various styles of Potter Presses.

The present works, give employment to nearly 300 men, and when the addition is completed, will probably double the capacity.

The addition is 100 x 265 feet, which, added to the old building will make the works over 500 feet long.

The superintendent of the works is Mr. John Brooks, one of the most thorough experts in the country on printing presses, and a courteous gentleman.

Improvements are constantly being made to the Potter presses, which keeps them abreast of the times, and in many instances ahead of any similar presses in the market, notably the Potter two-revolution press, which must become a favorite with printers who aim at quality of work with speed, as the same is the product of the press.

BLAINE AND LOGAN.

The nomination of James G. Blaine for President was published in the later editions of THE NEWS of yesterday. Leading Republicans in this vicinity do not as yet favor the Convention's choice. They may, however, change before election day.

The nomination of John A. Logan for Vice-President, is intended to please the soldier element of the country. As such it was a good choice.

But there are ten thousand men in the Republican party who would be preferable to either of the candidates chosen. We think events will prove that the ticket chosen is by no means the strongest.

Many good Republicans believe that a wise choice by the Democrats will defeat Blaine and Logan, but wisdom has not been of late a prominent feature with that party. Their own follies have defeated them, and made the independent element of voters, and particularly the independent Republicans, who are the real power of the land, not willing to trust them even once.

Many will vote for Blaine and Logan because of a feeling that the worst in the Republican party would be better than the best in the Democratic, after the exhibition it made of itself in the last session of Congress. But it is premature now to prognosticate until it is known who the Democratic standard bearers are to be.

New York Papers on the Nominations.

[From The Times.]

One word as to the position of The Times. It will not support Mr. Blaine for the Presidency. It will advise no man to vote for him, and its reasons for this course are perfectly well understood by everybody that has ever read it.

[From The World.]

The nomination of Blaine and Logan is clearly the result of a shameless political bargain and represents the triumph of the mercenaries and worst elements of the Republican party. The vote at

WHAT PEOPLE THINK of the Ticket and Its Chances of Success.

Kelley, of Pennsylvania, Hawley, Chandler and Others Say It Will Win—Edmunds to Boost—Carlisle a Democratic Victory.

WASHINGTON, June 7.—The nomination of Mr. Blaine did not surprise any one who had watched the course of the convention. Numerous bets were made last night that he would win before the fourth ballot. His nomination was unanimously conceded after the ballots on the second ballot. The scenes at the capital were enlivening. Bulletins were posted in the rooms of the secretary of the senate and in the house corridors every few minutes, and were awaited with the keenest interest by a crowd of senators, representatives and employes.

The United Press bulletin dispatches afforded more satisfaction than the dull business of the house.

Mr. Edmunds awaited news in the vice president's room. Senator Sherman remained in his committee room until after the final ballot was announced. He had foreseen the result since the developments of last night, but he carefully scrutinized the returns for possible weak spots. He had abandoned every hope long before he heard that Logan had thrown his forces for Blaine. This movement did not seem to be a great surprise to the Ohio statesmen. When the result was announced he seemed satisfied with it. He signed air, and said the nomination was a strong one. Messrs. Allison, Hale and other Republican senators had no hesitation in saying the nomination could be carried, and that Mr. Blaine could be elected by a sweeping majority. Senator Morrill said the nomination would cause a very enthusiastic campaign.

Gen. Logan did not go to the astor yesterday. He received dispatches at his residence. To a United Press reporter he said: "I do not care to be interviewed. I think the nomination a strong one. I shall do everything I can to elect Mr. Blaine. The dispatch I sent to Senator Cullom voices my sentiments, and I do not wish to say anything in addition now. In view of the preference shown by the great states for Blaine, I deemed it my duty to recommend my friends to assist in his nomination."

Mr. Logan refused to discuss the question of the vice-presidency.

President Arthur was at the White House until late in the afternoon. As soon as Blaine was nominated he sent him a congratulatory dispatch. The president said the result was perfectly satisfactory to him, and that he had every confidence in Blaine being elected. Don Cameron lunched with President Arthur between 4 and 5, and afterwards they took a long drive together.

Vice-President Edmunds appears to be one of the most unconcerned of the defeated nominees. He frankly expresses himself as glad of having escaped the nomination. He regards the nomination of Mr. Blaine as preeminently a strong one. The proceedings of the convention seem to show that the candidate was endorsed and demanded by the Republicans generally, and he must poll as many votes as any other could, and will certainly be elected, whoever might be associated with him on the ticket.

Secretary Lincoln frankly said that he was disappointed in the defeat of his first choice, President Arthur, but he added: "I intend to pull off my coat and work for Blaine." His resident Mr. Blaine one of the great leaders of the Republican party, who should and will undoubtedly be supported by every Republican voter in the land.

Postmaster General Gresham refused to talk about the nomination.

Judge Kelly, of Pennsylvania, says Blaine will defeat any man the Democrats may nominate. If the ticket is Blaine and Logan it will, he thinks, to make use of an expression he once heard Abraham Lincoln use, "run like a house afire."

Representative Hiscock declined to say whether he thought Blaine the best candidate or make comparisons. Blaine, he feels sure, will carry Maine in September, and Ohio and West Virginia in October, and consequently New York state by default in November, together with all the Republican states needed to insure his election.

Senator Hawley said: "Blaine is nominated and will be the next president. We have a battle to fight and to win, and we shall do both. It will be an earnest campaign, both parties doing their best, but the Republicans will be victorious. When Mr. Blaine delivered his masterly eulogy upon President Garfield many expressed surprise at the calmness, harmony and justice of his oration. He dealt fairly with all hostile elements. He did not exaggerate parties. He was the work of a strong and well-poised man. When the same man shall have attained the summit of his ambition in office he will in like manner disappoint many of his critics. There will be sorrow for a time, caused by this nomination. President Arthur has aroused nearly a whole nation that looked with distrust upon his coming in. No man denies to Mr. Blaine the intellectual conception of what the presidency calls for. His friends believe that he can set it forth in action. Of course, it will be a hot campaign. The convention shows what warm friends Mr. Blaine has. Most of those who voted against him will now feel them in need. I won't try to prophesy what states he will carry, but he will be elected."

Secretary Teller thought a better nomination could have been made in President Arthur, but the party would succeed and elect its candidate.

Secretary Chandler thinks the ticket a strong one, sure to be elected.

But little comment is passed upon the platform by Republican leaders here.

Senator Logan thinks it is the best ever put out by the party and sees nothing in it to find fault with.

Senator Edmunds thinks it "a little rickety." He regards the action of the convention in restrict southern representation in future conventions.

Among Democrats the common expression is that Blaine, on account of his record, is the weakest of the Republicans whose names were before the convention.

Some of them say Blaine is just smart enough to warn and receive a nomination at a time when he cannot be elected.

Speaker Carlisle says the Democrats "ill gain an easy victory—if they cannot at Blaine they cannot beat anything. He feared the Republicans would nominate John Sherman or Hawley; but Blaine—here he laughed and said no more.

A Republican Paper Flops.

BOSTON, June 7.—The Boston Advertiser, which has been a Republican paper since the party was organized, published today a bitter editorial declining to support the nomination. The Herald says it expects and hopes to see Blaine defeated. The Journal says the party is greater than the men.

Cause Given to Holmes.

BERLIN, June 7.—Prince Henry, of Hesse, grand-nephew of the Emperor William, has embraced the Catholic religion.

CONVENTION PICTURES

Notes in Pen and Pencil from the Lakeside.

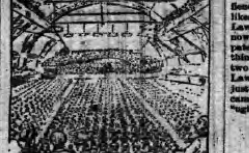
Scenes at the Opening of the Eighth Republican National Convention—How the Delegates Looked and Acted.

The convention contagion struck the pulpit even on the previous Sunday.

Professor Swing, at the Central church, pictured his ideal of a national candidate. He should be one, Professor Swing said, who can add to politeness and affability among friends, a brain that can grasp the condition and needs of the nation, and a heart that can love all the millions of his land equally and wisely.

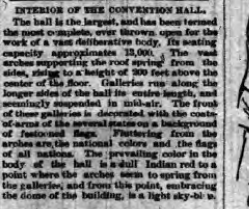
The Rev. Dr. Thomas preached on "Our National Life and Responsibility." He thinks there is too much political partisanship in our national government, and that in selecting candidates for high offices there is a growing disposition to ignore brains, ability, and high character, and to take into account the amount of money that the candidate or his friends can afford to spend in the canvass.

The Rev. Thomas E. Green, in the Eighth Presbyterian church, analyzed Chicago whisky for the benefit of the delegates as follows: "On the corner of Fifth avenue and Harrison street a bottle of Bourbon whisky was purchased. It was composed of about 65 per cent. neutral spirits—this essence of concentrated lye and vitriol—1 per cent. of fusel oil, 1 per cent. of glycerine, colored with burned sugar and cleared with arsenic, of which there was enough, if a man should drink a pint of it at once, to kill him. It is a mixture that was probably the essence of bourbon, which is made by a secret process out of alcohol and acids, producing a kind of ether. This particular sample had in it also sulphate of zinc and chromic acid, probably a part of this essence of bourbon. That was old Kentucky whisky, 40 years of age. It was a mixture of chemically concocted lye—spell it 'lie' if you like—glycerine, arsenic, zinc, chromium, and plenty of fusel oil."



INTERIOR OF THE CONVENTION HALL.

The hall is the largest, and has been termed the most complete, ever thrown open for the work of a vast deliberative body. Its seating capacity is appropriated to 15,000. The vast arches supporting the roof spring from the sides, rising to a height of 300 feet above the center of the floor. Galleries run along the longer sides of the hall in double length, and seemingly suspended in mid-air. The fronts of these galleries is decorated with the coats-of-arms of all the States, and a background of festooned flags. Fluttering from the arches are the national colors and the flags of all nations. The prevailing color in the body of the hall is dull Indian red to a point where the arches seem to spring from the galleries, and from this point, embracing the dome of the building, is a light sky-blue.



PROMINENT COLORED DELEGATES.

Senator Bruce was at all times the member most often consulted by the colored delegates. In personal appearance and manner he is a gentleman of the old school.

Fred Douglass looked just like the last pictures of him that made the rounds of the illustrated papers—just like his old self of about five years ago, with his white mane and his strongly marked face and great frame.

Tom Ochiltree's stumpy little figure was reclining in the shade, just outside the Texas delegation headquarters, against a Sherman house wall, and his liberal crop of fiery red hair surrounded him like an aureole.

One of the funniest things at the various headquarters was the liability of delegates of a talkative turn to go off in a speech. It is usually the younger members who thus consult themselves. They are not content to wait a chance in the convention—they all want to speak about the platform, the location and "speak." The different styles of oratory, and the different efforts at it, are killing. Vermont visits Florida on Oregon visits Rhode Island, and the occasion is at once seized upon for oratory. The spokesman considers it the occasion of his life and spreads himself. He buckles all the ears of the crowd by his warmth, and the cooling ashes of christendom are there, and every reporter in the land is on hand with a type-writer. He roars and bats and balls and roars. It is grand fun. Regardless of the gas-heat, rid themselves of buncombe, salute each others' flags, drink each others' ice water, schools, he, several times, last on results and then conclude with a song.

ALL SING.

The peculiar odor of Chicago hospitality is thus described by the correspondent of an out of town paper: "The round of enjoyment that I have been forced into by friends here would kill a horse. Every night there are dinners, suppers, receptions, parties, dances, lunches and the like to attend to, and we have outlived me for anything like business, and my usages is to think that I cannot improve my own whole by dissipating myself every night—I think it was night, possibly it was early in the morning—I reached the hotel from the opposite side of the street, where I had been dancing my head off at the house of [illegible] with a party of very intelligent people, and I found that the entire I had drank

AT THE GRAND PACIFIC.

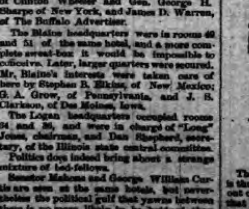
Though all the hotels were crowded, the politicians were especially petrified at the Grand Pacific hotel. Here there was unending political discussion from morning until bed-time. The only occupation apparent among the thousands of able-bodied men who thronged the hall of ceremonies seemed to be the consumption of tobacco; the fragments of the partially consumed cigars and the condition of the crush-covered carpets indicated they were accomplishing their purpose effectually. In the hotel were the headquarters of Arthur, Blaine and Logan. The main headquarters for Arthur were located in the gentlemen's parlor, and were in charge of Clinton Wheeler and Gen. George H. Sharpe of New York, and James D. Warren, of The Buffalo Advertiser.

The Blaine headquarters occupied rooms 52 and 53 of the same hotel, and a more complete sweat-box it would be impossible to obtain. Later, larger quarters were secured. Mr. Blaine's interests were in the hands of here by Stephen B. Elkins, of New Mexico; G. A. Grow, of Pennsylvania, and J. S. Clarkson, of Des Moines, Iowa.

The Logan headquarters occupied rooms 34 and 36, and were in charge of "Long" Jones, chairman, and Dan Shepherd, secretary, of the Illinois state central committee.

Politics does indeed bring about a strange mixture of bed-fellows.

Senator Mahone and George William Curtis were one night last week. Not perchance the political gulf that yawns between them is no more likely to be bridged than ever. Among the distinguished men talking were also Senator Hoar and Governor Foster, of Ohio. Mr. Curtis's eyes is at present, and his whiskers are brown, as ever, but he has grown absolutely fat—and his face do not appear to attenuate as rapidly. Had used to portray them stretched beneath a gibbet, while their owner sought to divert the gaunt mind from the remembrance of short



PRESIDENT WHITE, CURTIS AND ROOSEVELT.

The leaders of the New York Independents. President Andrew D. White, of Cornell university, George W. Curtis, editor of Harper's Weekly, and Theodore Roosevelt, the young reformer, were seen at their headquarters discussing the prospects of the team from Vermont.

Among other characters is Dwight Lawrence, a typical New York masher. He wore ish-de-ish clothes, a ish-de-ish hat, and a sweet, perfumy smile that would lure a silly bird from a perch.

But perhaps one of the most striking figures among the New York following was Mr. Jake Haas. He is tall, dark, and wears the New York "plug" with a frightful brim. His necktie was a marvel, and was adorned by ancient jewels in the way of diamonds, pin, which rumor has it, Dr. Schliemann dug up in ancient Byzantium from the tomb of Mr. Haas' ancestors. "Sitting Bull" Lawson is another character. "Sitting Bull" owns his title to the witty and malicious Amos Cummings, of The New York Sun. Mr. Lawson is a dignified gentleman. He is absolutely in earnest. He does not know the respect of all his friends; but one night he did something to stir on some Sun cartoonist for a local office, and the fiendish Cummings, unfeeling lout, saw a likeness to "Sitting Bull." "Sitting Bull" Lawson went in next morning's Sun, and now Mr. Lawson has his name registered patent. One can hardly look at Lawson's think of Sitting Bull, and not laugh. The two great chieftains are almost identical. Lawson is quiet, big, lazy, sleepy, and looks just as if he wanted to sit down before a camp fire, curl his legs under him, and say "ugh."

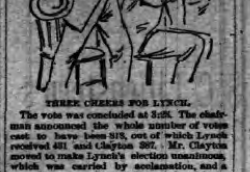
THREE CHEERS FOR LYNCH.

The vote was concluded at 3:38. The chairman announced the whole number of votes cast to have been 818, out of which Lynch received 411, and Chapin 397. Mr. Chapin moved to make Lynch's election unanimous, which was carried by acclamation, and a committee was appointed to conduct him to the chair.

Mr. Lynch, with his escort, moved toward the platform amid tremendous applause, and was introduced by Mr. Sabin as temporary chairman.



JOHN R. LYNCH.

—Lynch is a small man, about as dark as a Frenchman, and lighter than a Spaniard. He has a shrewd, wide-awake look about the eyes, and a pleasant smile that will make its way through the vast audience. He gestures little, speaks without hesitation, and it may be said to his credit and that of his race that, as an orator, he ranks below no man who addressed the convention.

Leslie W. Russell, of New York, moved that Titus Sheard, of New York, and Joseph W. Lee, of Virginia, be made temporary secretaries of the convention until permanent secretaries were appointed, which was carried.

At 4:45 the convention took a recess for the day.

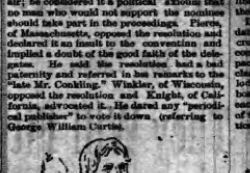
The Second Day.

CHICAGO, June 4.—The situation was red hot Wednesday morning. This doubtless was due to the generally acknowledged fact that a terrific struggle was inevitable. The masses caught the enthusiasm, and Walnut avenue for several blocks was almost impassable.

At 11 o'clock precisely Mr. Lynch stepped up to the stand, which was ornamented with a basket of beautiful flowers, and rapped the convention to order. The constant entrance of late arrivals, however, resulted in disorder for fully twenty minutes, and by the time Rev. Mr. Burroughs, of this city, had finished the opening prayer it was 11:25.

The prayer held especial reference to the desirability of God's blessing on Lynch and the race he represents, and implored that the nominee of the convention should be a Christian man. The prayer was short and to the point.

One of the two events of the day then "came off," being, of course, the report of a resolution declaring that no man should hold a seat in the convention who did not intend to support the nominee. He said he objected in behalf of certain colored delegates, he considered it a political axiom that no man who would not support the nominee should take part in the proceedings. Flores, of Massachusetts, opposed the resolution and declared it an insult to the convention and implied a doubt of the good faith of the delegates. He spoke at length, but as bad paternity and referred in his remarks to the "late Mr. Conkling." Winkler, of Wisconsin, opposed the resolution and Knight, of California, accepted it. He feared any "periods and quibbles" to vote it down (referring to George William Curtis).



GEORGE WILLIAM CURTIS.

Mr. Curtis took up the gauntlet thus thrown down. Commencing his answer with the remark that "I am not pledged to any man if I came into this convention, and by the grace of God a Republican and a free man I will go out of it," he then referred to the attempt four years ago to do the same thing, and defied the defiant, and also a similar attempt in the convention which nominated Lincoln. He also declared that the resolution was in the hands of bitter opponents of civil service, and eulogized Campbell, of West Virginia, who is the last national convention said: "I am a Republican who carries a sovereignty under his hat."

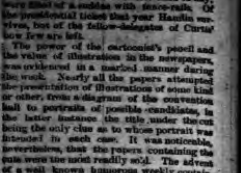
Mr. Curtis spoke with unusual fire and energy and his open declaration that he had come into the convention a free man, and would so go out of it, by the favor of God, he would not let those words pass unnoticed. He closed amid tremendous applause.

HON. POWELL CLAYTON.

Clayton was about to take the chair when Caleb Lodge, of Massachusetts, rose and said it was the right of the convention to adopt the rules of the previous day, and moved temporary chairman or reverse B. With no view of entering in to make a test vote of the strength of the candidates, but to give the convention an opportunity to express itself on the party, he would move to adopt the rules of the last convention. Lodge, of Massachusetts, then declared a recess for ten minutes, at 1 o'clock.

Twenty-four years ago George William Curtis, a delegate to the convention of this year, sat in the wigwam at the corner of Market and Lake streets where Abraham Lincoln was nominated, and when the streets of Chicago, once much smaller than to-day, were filled as seldom with brass-rails. Of the immediate delegates of that year Hamlin survives, but of the fellow-delegates of Curtis' how few are left.

The power of the cartoonist's pencil and the value of illustrations in the newspapers was evidenced in a marked manner during the week. Nearly all the papers attempted the presentation of illustrations of some kind or other, and a number of the prominent men built to portraits of possible candidates, in the latter instance the title under the cut being the only clue as to whose portrait was intended to represent. It was noticeable, nevertheless, that the papers containing the cuts were the most readily sold. The advent of a week knows humorous weekly containing a cartoon of some of the principal candidates was looked upon by his supporters as a most severe blow to the chances of their favorite.



HON. THEODORE R. ROOSEVELT.

The youngest speaker before the convention, on the opening day, was Theodore Roosevelt, of New York, who said, in reference to the motion made by Henry Cabot Lodge, of Massachusetts, to revise the action of the national committee in the choice of a temporary chairman: "I trust that the motion of the gentleman from Massachusetts will be accepted, and that we will see at temporary chairman of this convention that distinguished Republican, Mr. Lynch. It has been said by the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania that it is without precedent to reverse the action of the national committee. Who has not known of instances where it has been done? I is not that the action was taken by the individual members and not by states, but let each man stand accountable to those whom he represents for his votes. [Cheers.] I trust that the Hon. Mr. Lynch will be elected [illegible] any chairman of this convention." [Loud cheers.]

A JUMPING-JACK DELEGATE.

During the session there was one colored delegate who deported himself as if actuated by a spring from beneath. The instant a speaker was about to close his remarks this colored individual would pop up and throw aloft his arm. What he said could not be heard from the reporters' tables, nor was he recognized by the speaker.

The weather during the convention was of the usual lake-like variability, with an occasional tendency to coldness, and much excitement resulted on the arrival of some of the southern and eastern delegates with linen dusters, and no provision for which to their second wintry weather.

In regard to the provisions for accommodating and providing for the convention crowds, Chicago's sixty-two principal hotels contain 22,000 rooms and have a feeding capacity of 31,175, besides hundreds of third-class hotels. These there are hundreds of lodging houses and thousands of every-class boarding-houses attached to this, making an aggregate which, while the feeding capacity of the large down-town restaurants is practically unlimited.

Trials of a Candidate.

[Puck.]

"Now, my dear," said the candidate's wife, "I don't wish to throw the slightest obstacle in the way of your election, and if you choose to turn the house into a beergarden, and have all the loafers in town tramping on my carpets and filling my curtains with pipe-smoke and drinking whisky out of my best tablespoon, I shall say not a word. But I want you distinctly to understand that if another of those women's rights delegations comes to know if you are going to take a nasty stand for free schools, or anything of that kind, that delegation has got to be twenty years older and keep its veil down, or I'll interview it myself. That's all, dear."

Convention Allegories.

[Eugene Field.]

A beautiful Promise stood in the hotel entre-sol mopping its brow.

"You seem exhausted," said a setter.

"Exhausted! I guess you don't know me. Not much. I'm just getting warmed up to my work. I'm willing to bet I can do more hard work in three now and election day than anybody."

"Do you never rest?"

"Oh, yes; right after election I'll go to sleep and you won't see me again for four years."

The Lonesome Cork.

A poor little Cork was sitting on the hotel bar, weeping.

"What's the matter, my little fellow?" said a big, swapping Brandy.

"I'm lost."

"What makes you lonesome?"

"Why, before these delegates came I used to see my mother every little while, but for the last three days I have been left all alone."

"Who is your friend?"

"The pebbly bottle over there."

Life; Thanks! Small favors thankfully received. Larger ones in proportion.—Motto of the Anti-Monopolists.

—A reception to young men will be given at the Young Men's Christian Association Rooms next Friday by the Ladies' Auxiliary. All the young men of the city are cordially invited to attend.

—The special features of the May Celebration on Saturday were photographed.

—If reports are correct as to Sunday's sermon, the Rev. Charles Dunn, of Park ave., a recent graduate of Union Theological Seminary, is destined to become a big preacher.

—The Rev. Mr. Tuttle, of the Methodist Church, is said by an eminent divine to be the best preacher in the Newark Conference, while others rate him among the ten best Methodist preachers in the country.

—We understand that one of the local weeklies proposes to ignore our existence entirely and press the absolute silence. Too bad. We hope to survive it, however, to sense "future date."

Rocky Hill.

The Rocky Hill Choral Union will give a public rehearsal in the Reformed Church on the evening of June 6th.

The large barn, together with some other buildings, and a stock of clover hay, of Mr. Chas. H. Voorhees' farm, near Rocky Hill, was burned to the ground last week. His colored boy accidently sent fire to the hovel while the family were away from home. He was safely lodged in the jail the next morning. One horse was entirely burned up, together with much valuable machinery. Nothing was saved from the buildings but one horse, and that was so badly burned that he could not live. The loss to Messrs. Stephen and C. H. Voorhees is very heavy, and only partially covered by insurance.

A Lamentable Runaway.

The inhabitants of Madison avenue were refreshed yesterday afternoon by a rather unique method adopted by a driver for stopping his horse. The driver, one of the carmen of the town, was hauling over alluvial the reins to dangle beneath his knees when the horse gave a sudden start, drawing the reins to the full length of the line. Instinctively grabbed at the nearest article within reach which happened to be the tail of the horse. Not being used to being driven in this style the horse gave another start, this time unseating the driver and sending him high in the air. The driver, however, still held on to the tail, and continued doing so until some well disposed person came to his assistance and stopped the horse.

News Telegraphic.

The Telephone Company has over 125 instruments in active use in this city, while in the city of Plainfield there are 70. We are in reality, behind that place in the support as our population is almost 10,000, while that of Plainfield is about 10,000. The great utility and convenience of both one of these splendid inventions of modern times is undeniable, and so is the fact that we are behind. Home News, New Brunswick, N. J.

NEW JERSEY'S GROWTH.

A careful analysis of the census of 1880 will convince the most skeptical as to the gradual and increasing growth of our State. Comparing the figures of 1870 and 1880 together, we find that in the year 1870 the population as recorded was 906,126, while in the ten years ending 1880, the figures were 1,130,892 showing an increase of 224,743. The greatest gain is apparently to be found in the counties of Hudson and Essex—Hudson with 58,622, and Essex with 45,942. Political economists will find much food for reflection in these statistics, conveying as they do the silent but uncontrovertible fact that as a State we are not retrograding.

Whether the increase of population will continue in the next decade is impossible to say; one thing is evident, immigration does not seem to be carried out to any great extent in this county.

Some author very aptly called New Jersey on one occasion the garden of the Atlantic States. Certainly, if what real estate brokers tell us be true—and they are competent judges—our fair State is being rapidly taken possession of by people whose eyes are not only on the beautiful but the healthful spots which nature has so lavishly bestowed upon us.

It is our educational growth and moral status likewise in proportion to our population? That, indeed, is a question hard to answer. The criminal statistics of 1880 give us a favorable view of this matter, and Prof. Apgar has stated that in education our schools may compare with those of any other State.

It is a matter of congratulation that our statistics are so favorable in point of progression.

PENDING arrangements for an engine to supply power for driving the large press upon which THE NEWS is printed, we must be indebted to such local bipeds as possess the requisite sinews. The first investment in this primitive article, a somewhat attenuated specimen, has proven unequal to the task, despite plenty of good will. In consequence our first edition appeared yesterday instead of Saturday, as was intended. We expect our engine here in about a week. Meanwhile, we will have to force out our daily editions under difficulties, and trust the host of kind friends who welcome the enterprise and have given us the most substantial encouragement will have patience until we get fairly under way, when we will welcome criticism in comparison with the best standard. We will aim at having the best local newspaper in the State, considered both in respect to literary and typographical excellence, and will not be satisfied with anything less.

SOME STARTLING FIGURES.

The author and publisher of Shorthand Tekigrafy, D. P. Lindsley, of Plainfield, N. J., makes the following interesting statements, which are significant for every one writing the English language.

Let us estimate the labor involved in longhand writing:

A good penman can write thirty words in a minute. To do this he must draw on paper thru the space of a mile, and in five hours and twenty minutes he pen-trays a mile.

We make use of at least 300 words in the turns of ten pen in writing each word, thirty words a minute, we must make 900 strokes a minute and in six hours, 324,000 in a day of only five hours 144,000 and in each hour 27,000 strokes. Now, one man, therefore, who does 1,000,000 strokes with his pen in one month was not at all remarkable. Many of the pen in one month for instance—make 4,000,000. Here we have, in the aggregate, 300 mile of ink lines to be traced by paper at a single writer in a year.

What, then, may we estimate the labor of writing by our entire people—the editors of our 11,341 periodicals—and the authors of the thousand of volumes that come from our teeming press?—the hundreds of our book-men and professional men, with the army of clerks and assistants? 1,000,000 of these ma a 300,000,000 of miles of inky lines, in a year, and spread immured—300,000,000 MILES OF PEN MARKS—WHEW!

In T Rigraly we save five-sixth to nine-tenths of the labor both in the number of strokes employed and in the distance traversed by the pen—that is to say: we save 250,000,000 miles of the pen in one month's work; and 270 miles of pen travel; and in the writing of 1,000,000 of people 38 millions of miles of pen travel and 270 miles of inky lines. All this saved in one year, and by one million of writers! What then, shall we say of the labor of a century—the many millions that now write, and the uncounted millions that shall write? And what hinders us from adopting this saving? Nothing! Absolutely nothing!

—There appears to be trouble brewing in New Brunswick. Common Council was to-day gotaine, and the liquor dealers, those who keep orderly houses and those who do not—can't get their licenses renewed. Some have received, rather than shut up their places to sell liquor at all hazards until the organization takes place, when they can secure licenses. The Reform Club, on the other hand, are preparing to make war upon them, taking advantage of the situation.

Gen. Grant kneed his name and his influence, but now he probably couldn't raise a dozen of any considerable account if he was a leader in the battlefield as in the civil walks of life he let others lead him.

COUNTRY weekly newspapers with small circulation are commonly run by hand power, but for a daily paper with an large a circulation as the NEWS has at the outset of its career, this does not suffice.

FOR THE NOMINATION.

The Forces of the Rival Candidates at Chicago.

Scenes Preceding the Opening of the Convention—The Scheme of the Two Leaders—The Meeting of the National Committee.

CHICAGO, June 3.—The national republican convention of 1884 has drawn together a crowd of politicians larger than ever before gathered in the history of the party. There are about three thousand of every degree, while clubs, societies, private organizations and individuals from all parts have been arriving steadily in the city for the past several days. All the hotels, boarding houses and lodging apartments in the city were taxed to their fullest capacity, while private residences have been thrown open for the accommodation of prominent men from various parts of the country. The streets adjacent to the hotel lobbies are packed with workers, who buttonhole delegates, while at the same time the rival candidates are on the ground in a sea of trouble and confusion. The Blaine men were on foot yesterday and went to bed with flags in their windows and music in their throats, and to-day they followed suit. Logan arrived from the country early, but did not appear to be the center of attraction that, for a few days, Blaine was. It is evident that the Illinois senator has not the following that the Maine statesman has, and that the latter's friends are more enthusiastic and confident. Logan's friends are quiet and unobtrusive, but they are working steadily and systematically, and their candidate's chances are by no means to be underrated. Both candidates have their headquarters at the Grand Pacific hotel, and to-day the lobbies and corridors were packed with a surging, struggling mass of humanity, through which it was impossible to make one's way. Blaine's headquarters were in parlor 40, on the second floor, and Logan's in parlor 45, on the same floor. Both were thronged with visitors, and the air was thick with cigar smoke. DEADLY STEAM CLOUDS

From a Bursting Boiler Kill an Engineer and Scald His Assistant.

A Dull Explosion, Followed by Volumes of Steam—The Escape All Night, but the Boiler Now Succumbs to the Pressure.

NEW YORK, June 3.—The boiler of the steam dredge Norfolk, lying in the Harlem river at the foot of Ninety-second street, on Monday morning, killing the engineer, Jacob Feeley, and severely scalding the cook, Wm. Hudson. The dredge belongs to Thomas Fillyaw, jr., of No. 116 Wall street, and has been engaged since March 1 in dredging for the foundation for the Second avenue bridge, on which the Harlem railroad is to cross into the annexed district. Early this morning, at about 8 o'clock, Patrick Gregg, the captain of the dredge, while waiting for the inspector of the port to arrive, who was to begin operations, went down into the engine room in the after part of the dredge to examine the water and steam gauges. The steam gauge showed that the pressure of steam was above the pounds to the square inch that the water gauge showed the boiler to be full.

A few minutes afterward Gregg, on deck, went below to the engine room. He had hardly been there two minutes, when there was a dull explosion, and the steam came rushing up the hatchway and over the deck.

When the steam's loud had passed Gregg and Robert Sweeney, one of the hands on board, went below to the engine room and were paralyzed by the escaping steam. They carried him on deck, where he died within half an hour. William Hudson, the cook on the dredge, was in the forward part of the vessel, and, hearing the explosion, ran aft to the engine room. He escaped the full force of the steam, but was badly scalded. He was taken to the Harlem hospital, and is to be removed to the Ninety-second street hospital. The boiler is twenty-four feet long and four feet in diameter. It has been already condemned by Inspector Berry, of the port, and was to be replaced by a new one. Engineer Feeley lived at 413 East Seventy-second street. He was married and leaves a family.

Destroyed by Dynamiters.

WINNIPEG, Man., June 3.—The alleged threat of Sir John A. Macdonald to force Manitoba to accept the terms offered by his government is certainly one of her strongest cards. It has created a flutter of excitement here. Its effect will be to strengthen the feeling of hostility which the people of this province have for some time felt towards the Dominion.

Ominous murmurs are heard on all sides, and the general expression is of defiance. Sir John's statement that Manitoba is powerless, and must submit to the older provinces, is particularly galling, and old timers resent the fact that in 1871 Manitoba, with a population of less than 10,000, defied the armed forces of eastern Canada, and forced from it all she then wanted.

Mrs. Fannie Stewart at Liberty.

NEW YORK, June 3.—Mrs. Fannie Stewart, who alleged that she was illegally confined in the Magdalen asylum, is at liberty. Mrs. Sweet, one of the matrons, took her on Sunday to friends on Staten Island, and Mrs. Stewart refused to return with them. They returned together to this city, and on landing Mrs. Stewart walked away and visited the office of her counsel, Arthur Kahn, prepared and signed a petition saying that she was incarcerated against her will, and was entitled to her discharge. To this Mr. Kahn applied for a writ of habeas corpus, and it was granted by Judge Lawrence in the supreme court. The argument will be held on Thursday.

A WALTZ QUADRILLE.

[Miss Wheeler.]

The band with the wand'ring minstrels
I left as the dusk was falling.
As we floated away at this editor's will
To the tune of the "Beautiful Ireland."
I knew not my partner's name at the time
Nor did I ever learn it,
But I know you were young and fair.

The fold of your flowing arm rest a thrill
From your bosom as we gently glided
Like a bird in the air to the music's soft flow
Through the "Beautiful Ireland."

Dreaming and speaking of nothing,
Thinking each other;
Feeling each other's heart beating each other;
Wishing each other
Were changed to a bird and flying away
With the "Beautiful Ireland."

I said to my heart, "Let us take our fill
Of love," and it answered, "All love and Love is the only thing worth living for."
And the music was sad, and the hall was Dreary
After you went away.

ORIGIN OF THE AZTECS.

Wonderful Resemblance between Mexican Traditions of the Deluge.

[Chicago Herald Letter.]

Nearly a week when the Aztecs at the time of the Spanish conquest, or what took upon the great kingdom of their god, which the Aztecs met in battle, were supposed to have come from the east. Where they originally came from is one of the most interesting questions in connection with the history of this continent. Between Indians we that the human race practically originated at the point of the plateau in Mexico and ought enough. So enjoy-like; this the uniform migration is forward toward the equator, and that along this path, for many centuries, the human race has been developing from the first of our kind will finally perish. From the original birthplace the Mexicans way have come southward and established in this out do the under the tropic of Cancer.

But that they have been constantly visited by people from across the sea is now universally agreed if the Aztecs themselves. And against Donnelly should be only a brilliant and plausible again, the early Mexicans were by no means the first people to visit this country. Long before the Aztecs came from the eastern a Chinese junk has been blown across the Pacific so often as once in five years, and shattered with repeated sailors on the coast of California or Oregon. If this were equally true in the past, hundreds of shipwrecked tanks must have landed on the Pacific coasts, mated to the ancient people, who constantly modified the mind, the laws, the language, the religion and the manner of the Chinese settlers have carried. Now it is found that Aztecs bowed before the great Lotus crown of granite, on the face of which they had sculptured the grotesque image of their god. The stone still is here exhibited in the gates of the museum here. They had a record of the deluge, which only one man and one woman survived, Coxcox and his wife, both of whom were saved in his unbidded they sent out a dove to distribute the language.

Another tribe, 300 miles west of here, had a similar tradition. Their Noah was named Tezpi, and he escaped with a boat filled with animals. He sent out a humming bird, which returned with a sprig in its mouth. The building of the great pyramid of Cholula, 100 miles south of this city, was abandoned because the Aztec's guard sent fire and thunderbolts upon it to punish them for their blasphemy—so they say. In the Aztec religion the goddess Cresconil was the first to bear children, "and therefore," says the tradition, "by her came sin into the world." The Aztecs practiced the rites of confession and penance, and even had this important feature of the trinity and incarnation. For communion, before the Spanish came, they made a wafer of corn-meal mixed with blood, which the people ate in sorrow and penitence, declaring it the flesh of Deity. They baptized infants, touching them with water on the forehead and lips, after an invocation.

Effects of Wealth.

[Texas Siftings.]

"Here, boy; come hold this horse," said a fashionable equestrian to a boy, as he dismissed in front of a New York hotel.

The boy to whom he spoke was pulling the stump of a cigar, and having a fair conception of his position that he was an intelligent Jay Gould, so instead of responding with alacrity he drawled out languidly, with some hauteur:

"Is that such a vig o'ferin' how that it takes two men to hold him?"

"What do you mean?" retorted the swell young man.

"Well, do I mean? I mean if one man can hold him why don't you hold him yourself?" and he resumed his labors on the stump of the cigar.

A Wife's Devotion.

[New York Sun.]

A young man with a pale face and a pair of crutches was standing at the corner of Fulton and Nassau streets yesterday afternoon when a woman approached him and said:

"Excuse me, but I have been watching you for some time, and I am sure you are in trouble. Can I help you?"

"Thank you, madam, you are very kind," he replied, "but I am afraid you can't help me. I am in trouble, and I don't see how anybody can help me out of it."

"Perhaps I can," she said, sympathetically. "Tell me what it is."

"Well, I am a married man, and my wife is a very fine woman. She has been a devoted wife to me, and I love her very much. We have been married about two years, and we have a little boy. I am a printer by trade, and I have been working in a printing office on Nassau street. I have been there for about a year, and I have been getting $18 a week. I have been very happy, and I have been able to support my family comfortably. Last week I was taken sick and had to go to the hospital. I was there for a week, and when I came out I found that I had lost my position. I have been looking for work ever since, but I can't find anything to do. I have only $2 left, and I don't know what I am going to do. My wife has been sick for a week, and I am afraid she will die if she doesn't get something to eat. I don't know what to do, and I am almost crazy."

"Where do you live?" asked the woman.

"In Brooklyn," he replied.

"Have you any money?" she asked.

"Not a cent," he said.

"Then you must go home at once," she said, "and I will go with you. Your wife must not be left alone. Here is a dollar. Take it and get on the next car for Brooklyn. I will go with you."

"Thank you, madam," he said, "but I can't accept your money. I am not a beggar, and I will not take it. I will get along somehow. I am sorry I told you my troubles. Please forget what I said."

"Please don't refuse me," she said. "I am a married woman myself, and I know how I would feel if my husband were sick and out of work. Please take the money and go home to your wife. She needs you more than I do. I am not a beggar myself, and I am not in the habit of giving money to strangers, but I feel sorry for you, and I want to help you. Please don't refuse me."

"Well, madam," he said, "I will accept your kindness, but I will return the money as soon as I get work. I am very much obliged to you, and I will never forget your kindness to me."

"Don't mention it," she said. "I am glad I was able to help you. Now, you must go home at once. Your wife will be glad to see you, and she will be glad to see me, too. I am sure she will be very much surprised when I tell her what I have done. Here is a car coming. Get on it and go home. I will follow on the next car. Good-by."

"Good-by, madam," he said, "and may God bless you for your kindness to me. I will never forget you as long as I live."

"Good-by," she said, and she turned and walked away.

(Paris Letter.)

M. Simon, ex-French consul at Pakin, writes very sympathetically of the Chinese. A pious party recalls the Arcadian age. A number of persons hire a kitchen for the day to a young alcoholic on the river; they set out early in the morning, with a stock of paint brushes, ink and paper. After, well stocked with the necessary of the fiery straw, others form a group and compete in the grinding of poetry on a given subject. Dinner winds up the festival. A reward, these can be applied to highest paragraphs, if he obtains distinguished marks at the public competitive examinations; he is eligible even for the hand and heart of a maiden of the highest family. Decidedly the Chinese are not so favored among the other barbarians.

Posting is left to private enterprise, and thanks to the spirit of competition, conveyance and accommodation are, as to the matter of expedition and fidelity, the service leaves nothing to be desired. There are not exactly what are called railroads or railways in China, but rather a succession of short lines of steamers. Each of the latter dispatches his own coaches, who will often, by good judgment, hurry along the passengers at a rate which is —The flower mission was inaugurated in this city this morning. A quantity of flowers was distributed by the ladies in charge to various places throughout the city.

—New Brunswick has a new town clock. Plainfield hasn't a new town clock, but it is hard to beat in time. It will frequently beat the best time on record, according to its strikes.

—The Martins which for many years have made Plainfield their favorite Summer resort, are here the present season, in as large numbers as ever before, and get along very peaceably together, and with the sparrows, whose brown color appears more dull beside the glossy dark blue of the Martin.

—The Somerville Messenger is one of the oldest newspapers in the State, having been established in October, 1822, and published continuously ever since. Under the able management of its present proprietor, Mr. John A. Mattison, our friend of many years, it is one of the most newsy, sprightly weeklies which reach us.

New Jersey's National Guard Plans.

For several years the National Guard of this State has held regular practice at Bricton Rifle Range, near Elizabeth. In the fall of each year the successful competitors are awarded badges as qualified marksmen or prizes in special matches. The expense of the rifle practice and the transportation of the troops has been borne by the State. Last year several hundred qualified as marksmen, but the attendance for practice has not represented over ten per cent of the commands. Gov. Ludlow, in his last annual message, recommended that no existing system of rifle practice be abolished and that a State encampment like that at Peekskill be established. The suggestion was not acted upon, but Governor Abbett, advised by National Guard officers, has declined to make any appropriation for practice at the range this year, and accordingly all practice will be stopped. It has been ordered that the Second Brigade, which includes the West and Middle Jersey regiments, shall go into encampment for one week, either near Morristown or at a point on the seashore. The First Brigade, in which are included all the regiments in the northern part of New Jersey, will not go into encampment, but will probably have a Field Day.

Death of a Valuable Horse.

Mr. Isaac Melhorne, the custom contractor, lost a valuable horse at his brick yard yesterday. The animal was taken sick very early in the morning, and seemed to be in great agony, and groaned as if in distress. Dr. Hall was called in and after examining the animal pronounced it dead. The horse was valued at $250.

MARRIED.

By faithful dog, I sing thy praise,
And herald thy sagacious ways;
If aught is lost by chance or will,
By hook or stone does he find it still,
And when at night I'm wrapt in sleep,
There watch and ward at door will keep,
Without bolt or bar I have no fear,
My trusty Mac, whom all men are,
'Mong this and that, as where I see
Any of such capacity.
If there's no reason in a beast—
There's ought allied to it, at least.
When bid to seize a stile too high,
Don't reason tell him not to try;
Or o'er a chasm, if lots too wide—
He'll not or attempt the other side.

M. M. THOMAS.

Personal.

John Crosby, of Trenton, is visiting L. Laine, of this city. M. Crosby is, we understand, doing very well in Trenton.

Mr. Frank S. Smith, who graduates at Rutgers next week, has been honored by an appointment as one of the commence ment orators.

Mr. Fred. Willis, the present General Secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association, will remain a year with the Association.

The Rev. Charles Dunn, of Park avenue, has received a unanimous call to the pastorate of the Hempstead, L. I., Presbyterian Church.

Mr. Arthur Kimball, of this city, who has for some time been prosecuting his studies at Johns Hopkins University, has been elected Assistant to the Professor of Physics of that institution.

The New Brunswick Home News says: Mr. William Stine, of North Plainfield, was in town this morning making arrangements for an extended tour through the West. Mr. Stine leaves on Tuesday next.

Col. Julian Scott, the artist is completing one of his grand pictures entitled "The Battle of Cedar Creek," also Oct. 19th. It is a duplicate, of a reduced scale, of the picture he made for the State of Vermont, now in the State House, at Montpelier. He expects to have the present picture completed in about two weeks. He then starts on an extended pleasure trip West possibly in time for the convention.

Sunday Closing.

Cigar stores and other places accustomed to keep open Sundays in Plainfield, were notified by a policeman Saturday to keep closed on Sundays thereafter, beginning with yesterday. The policeman acted under instructions from the Mayor and the order was obeyed. The order did not affect the barber shops, which are regretted by the owner of at least one of these establishments, who felt that, if his customers attended to such matters as shaving Saturdays, he, like other barbers, could have Sundays to themselves, which the present enclose custom prevents. There are some difficulties in the general enforcement of the law, however. The Seventh Day Baptists, for instance, a large and respectable body in this community, keep their places open, Saturday being their Sabbath. Saturday is also the Sabbath of the Orthodox Jews, the reformed Jews adopting Sunday.

Elizabeth's Debt.

The Elizabeth people discuss the city's debt question fitfully. Like any great trouble, there are times when it is almost forgotten. Mr. McKenzie, of the Singer Sewing Machine Company, has published a pamphlet on the question which has been discussed during the past week with varying comment. The legislation of last winter has strengthened the city authorities, and they manifested a reasonable spirit at the late meeting of the Common Council. The attitude of the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company of the best possible settlement, with sacrifices on both sides, meets popular approval. The people are willing to bear a tax rate of 2 1-2 per cent., which would be necessary on the 50 per cent. plan, but it is claimed that they can pay no more.

New Jersey's Old Graves.

A family burial plot on the Parker farm, Smithsburg, Monmouth County, contains the graves of an ante-Revolutionary family of note, the Prestons. The oldest grave is that of a child, John Preston, who died at the age of two years. If John had lived until the present year he would have been 102 years old. Much older graves may be found at Newark, dating back 250 years; at Basking Ridge, where Lord Sterling was proprietor; at South Amboy, where he lived, and even at Connecticut Farms, Union County, where the old church still bears the marks of British bullets.

Temperance Meeting.

The fourth month of the temperance revival in this city is rapidly nearing a close, and yet the interest in the movement seems as great as ever, if one may judge by the large meeting held last night at the Trinity Reformed Church, at which time Rev. Hall used the discourse by the Rev. A. V. V. Raymond to the Reform Club was attentively listened to by all. The Choristers of the club occupied the choir and led the singing.

An Engagement Knew.

Dealers in butter and cheese have until July 1st to work off their stock of imitation. On that date a law goes into effect which provides a penalty of $100 fine and a year's imprisonment for the manufacture or sale within this State of any article designed to take the place of pure butter or cheese produced from pure milk or cream, unless it is unmanufactured from those substances.

A Valuable Record.

Through the courtesy of Mr. G. W. Grant, we have been furnished with a copy of the Acts of the Council and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey from the establishment of the (then) present Government, and Declaration of Independence, to the end of the first sitting of the 8th session on the 24th day of December, 1783, with the constitution prefixed, to which is annexed an appendix containing articles of Confederation of the United States, compiled under the appointment of the Legislature, by Peter Wilson, A. M., and printed at Trenton by "Isaac Collins, printer to the State of New Jersey, 1784."

Many of these acts are very unusual, others interesting and valuable in many respects, some relating to matters in this locality, and as all will be found more or less instructive, we will furnish the whole—often in brief serials, consecutively as our space permits.

The Fruit Crops.

Reports received from over 1,000 correspondents in all parts of the United States in regard to the fruit crop say the apple crop will be the largest ever known in the country. There will be only about half a crop of peaches and pears. The prospect for a very large crop of small fruits is very good.

Warren Mission Industrial School.

The closing exercises of the Warren Mission Industrial School were held Saturday afternoon in the Chapel on Custham street. A number of the friends of the school were present. The exercises were of a pleasing nature, and passed off very successfully. Refreshments were served at the close.

Curtin and McClure.

[Washington Hatchet.]

One of the best old time unpublished stories of ex-Governor and Congressman Curtin, of Pennsylvania, occurred during the war. Governor Curtin was designated in a convention to make a speech, and desired to make it strong, and pertinent to attack on the Cameron faction. What bothered him was how to make the assault most positive. Alex McClure, who was in with Curtin, suggested that the best plan would be to have some representative man in the audience ask a question and thus afford an opportunity for an answer covering the project. McClure selected a well-known sporting man and "roundsman" of Philadelphia, "Buckey" Neals by name. "Buckey" was very much elated at the honor and prospective importance of his position, and prior to the calling of the convention attired himself in his best suit of clothes, purchased a tall silk hat, and boasted himself in the most prominent portion of the hall. The signal for him to make the inquiry was preconcerted; it was when Alex McClure would wipe his face with his handkerchief. Governor Curtin commenced his speech, continued, and was frequently warmly applauded by the audience but not especially by his friends. "Buckey" was bored to oblivion to all things except Alex McClure, upon whom he had his eyes fastened as intently as those of the Ancient Mariner. At the fitting time the handkerchief came out and Alex mopped his face. Up jumped "Buckey," and, pointing his finger Burke-like to Curtin, in ringing tones called out:

"Governor Curtin, can I ask you a question?"

"Certainly, sir," was the gratifying reply.

"Certainly, sir—as many as you like," said Alex.

"You blank, blank, bleak!" howled a disappointed voter. "Watcher mean by trying to break up this meeting?"

And before "Buckey" could explain, a mob was on him. He was knocked down, the floor swept up with him, and after much pleasure and pastime the shout of "Alex McClure said me to do it" was stopped, kicked, and dried out of the hall, ended a most tumultuous uproar.

Next morning Alex met "Buckey," battles, contusions, and covered with blood, mud, and rags was very much surprised to find the Cornet Band and Invincibles "on deck" to escort Alex. Mad Lawn whilst put up such a bloody muss job on me!"

Not Much Pleasure.

[New Orleans Times-Democrat.]

Mrs. Squire—Dear me, Mrs. Stout, how is it you contrive to look a year ago as well? I suppose you look as young as you did twenty years ago. Mrs. Stout—I don't know, unless it is that I escape a great deal of care by not having any children to worry about. Mrs. Squire—Yes, that may be so; but, dear things! you can't find much pleasure in living on you!

Waterproof Shoe-Leather.

[San Francisco Chronicle.]

Boots and shoes can be rendered waterproof by making them for several hours in thick, soapy water. The explanation is that the compound formed by the action of the soap upon the leather is a fatty acid within the pores of which the water has no property of making the penetration of moisture.

A NEW WEEKLY.

The New York papers are frightened from time to time to refer to their journalistic enterprise, and we presume we may say a word likewise, although perhaps unnecessary, as any reader of the news weekly intelligence could not but be impressed with the enterprise shown in THE NEWS the first week of its existence.

During the Republican Convention at Chicago, we published full telegraphic dispatches as late and as full as the afternoon New York papers, and so complete were our arrangements for news direct from Chicago that we were enabled on Saturday, the Convention concluding Friday evening, to give not only superior portraits of the nominees, but also excellent pictures of notable characters and events at the convention by artists on the spot.

Besides all this our local columns teemed with local news. Is it any wonder that THE NEWS has sprung into notice so rapidly from the start? Several have wondered if it would continue to be "as excellent as at present." It will be improved from time to time as opportunity offers, and every effort made to make it even better.

During the past week over 6,000 copies of THE NEWS were printed and sold in Plainfield, which we claim to have been more than three times the number printed and sold in Plainfield by both the other papers combined. This is but the end of our first week, and we are under many obstacles which we are gradually removing. Our advertising rates are from 25 to 50 per cent. less than those of the other papers.

A casual observer might suppose, from the larger size of our weekly subscription, that they gave more matter. As a fact, however, THE NEWS has given, each day over twenty per cent. more than either of them, and everything was fresh and newsy. Our type is about the size of that used in the New York papers, which is so much smaller than that used by our local contemporaries, that we give more news in each issue to the amount stated in about half the space.

Last week the TIMES contained 12 columns of matter; and the CONSTITUTIONALIST, 11 columns, not counting advertisements, while THE NEWS contained an average of over 15 columns per day, or by actual count, just 100 columns for the week.

By printing and circulating the matter furnished by each of the three papers is as follows:

	No. of Ems.
THE EVENING NEWS - - - about	300,000
THE TIMES - - - - -	96,000
THE CONSTITUTIONALIST - - -	96,000
Amount of matter furnished by THE NEWS more than THE TIMES -	228,000
Three Hundred and Twenty-eight Thousand Ems!
Amount of matter furnished by THE NEWS more than the CONSTITUTIONALIST - - - - about	332,000
Three Hundred and Thirty-two Thousand Ems!
Amount of matter furnished by THE NEWS more than both the TIMES and CONSTITUTIONALIST - - about	380,000
Two Hundred and Eighty-three and Ems!

This embraced fresh local news, general news, telegraphic news, full reports, original articles, scientific, historical, critical, political, humorous and otherwise, besides all this, illustrations of more than ordinary merit.

When it is remembered that the price of THE NEWS is only two cents per copy, or 10 cents per week for six numbers delivered at the subscriber's residence, without extra charge, while the price of each of our local cotemporaries is five cents per copy, or 30 cents for the same number of copies furnished by us, for 60 cents, 66 per cent. less, and that our advertising rates, as before stated, are from twenty-five to fifty per cent. below those of our neighbors, some idea may be formed of the value of THE NEWS to the reading and advertising public.

We believe advertisers have a full right to know what they pay for. We make no mystery of our circulation, and in support of our claim that, in Plainfield it is over three times as much as either of our local cotemporaries. We cheerfully allow any advertiser to watch the edition printed daily and taken out by carriers, and challenge our cotemporaries to do likewise; it being understood that they are not to paint off the papers they send in exchange to other papers around the State as a part of their circulation, as these are of no use to advertisers, and which they actually circulate in Plainfield to regular subscribers. Those are the only ones we count.

Annexed are our advertising rates, which are published for comparison by those interested:

Rates of Advertising.	1 week	2 wks.	3 wks.	1 mo.	2 mos.	3 mos.	6 mos.	1 yr.
							COL.	COL.
One Day	$ 1	$ 1.50	$ 2.00	$ 3.00	$ 5.00	$ 6.00	$ 10.00	$ 15.00
Two Days	1.75	2.50	3.50	5.00	8.00	10.00	15.00	25.00
Three Days	2.50	3.50	5.00	7.00	11.00	14.00	20.00	35.00
Four Days	3.25	4.50	6.50	9.00	14.00	18.00	25.00	45.00
One Week	4.00	5.50	8.00	11.00	17.00	22.00	30.00	55.00

Six Months	40.00	55.00	70.00	95.00	140.00	185.00	250.00	475.00
One Year	75.00	100.00	130.00	175.00	260.00	345.00	475.00	900.00

All notices must be paid. Double columns 50 per cent. advance above usual rates.

These rates were not made with any reference whatever to those of our local cotemporaries, as it would be impossible, without being wordless—and to make comparison therefor it must be by comparing prices for each insertion—when it will be found that our prices range from 25 to 50 per cent. the lowest.

We do not wish to depreciate the value of advertisements in either of our local cotemporaries. The fact that they are well filled may be evidence that advertisements in them are found profitable, but it is necessary in this instance to make comparisons to show the value of such a daily as THE NEWS in this respect.

We might further add that everything is published fresh in THE NEWS at the time it occurs, is copied into THE TIMES, and from THE TIMES into THE CONSTITUTIONALIST, and like the double column editorials of the latter readers must lookout and fifty per cent. of them the sum charged by THE NEWS for the same news (originally, but such a statement might be considered unkind, so we won't say it) this time, but let the readers judge.

POLITICAL GOSSIP.

The Organization of the Republican National Committee.

The Logan-Blaine Combination—Friends of Carlisle Among Democratic Members of New York Committee—Streets Ingraphy for Tilden.

CHICAGO, June 5.—The Republican National committee will meet in the Fifth Avenue hotel, New York, at noon on June 26, to choose a chairman and select a headquarters for the campaign. On Saturday week it is expected by the members that the campaign will be as active one from that date. The selection of the chairman is the first step in the organization of Messrs. Elkins, Chaffee, Lawson, Rew and Hooker.

Among the names mentioned for permanent chairman of the Republican National committee are those of the Hon. Joe Manley, J. S. Clarkson, of Iowa, and Senator Chaffee, of Colorado.

The chairman, however, will depend a good deal upon the preference of the candidates for president and vice-president. Senator Warner Miller, James D. Warren, Thos. Shearer, and one or two others have declined since this morning in regard to the organization of the New York state committee. It was admitted by Mr. Warren that the friends of Mr. Blaine would be allowed to organize the committee and direct the campaign work. The Blaine men are expecting the appearance of Thomas C. Platt, whom still as a manager is to be one of the first to arrive here. The only one suggested for chairman of the New York state committee is John B. Dutcher, of Dutchess. The state committee will not meet until the national committee has selected and campaign work in the state by the democrats is to be opened some time in August.

The Blaine men are confident that before the nominations are made the friends of protection will have a big delegation present in favor of tariff reform in the strongest manner by placing at the head of the ticket the name of Carlisle, or some other friend of free trade. This proposition is met with the objection that, as the home of Mr. Carlisle is in a Southern state, the Republicans would not support him, and that would be the position any which the Democrats are anxious to supersede with the tariff issue.

Johnny O'Brien's Return.

NEW YORK, June 8.—A tall bearer of polished elegance passed down the platform of the Grand central with the crowd. Under his arm was a heavy package, and in his big hands. He wore a smile. Several more of men, with equally brilliant beavers and sure badges, surrounded him and gave him room as he passed. Johnny had been to Chicago to see Mr. Tilden and there to see Jim Blaine. Then Mr. O'Brien took off his magnificent tile and bowed.

"I'm perfectly satisfied," he said, as if he really meant it, "and I'm glad to get off my coat and go to hoary for Jim."

Then he put on his hat again and went down to Coney Island with the boys. The package he took off his coat was, the same as Mr. O'Brien.

The Tilden Boom.

NEW YORK, June 9.—The Democratic local conventions throughout the state are electing Tilden delegates almost without exception. This is evidenced by friend Mr. Forrest P. Flower that of the 108 delegates elected outside of New York city to the Saratoga convention, the second choice of all but 12 delegates for president is Flower, and of 28 Cleveland.

Death of Weather Prophet Vennor.

MONTREAL, June 6.—Henry O. Vennor, the weather prophet, died here yesterday. Mr. Vennor was 45 years old. He was born in Montreal, where his father was a wealthy and prominent citizen.

Mr. Vennor has been best known by his weather predictions, which have reached the public through cards to the various daily papers, and through his almanac of meteorological disturbances, and through his almanac Writing of this almanac in June, 1881, Mr. Vennor said: "I have been hoard by the medium for the exchange of meteorological information throughout Canada and North America. Gain, he said, was not quite correct, and when pencils dried had in the almanac had been reaped by publishers and agents. Speaking of his claims as a weather prophet, he said: "I attribute my success to the fact that I have made a close study of the course of storms in years gone by and a comparison of them with the conditions of the country. I have carried the people along with me not so much by one general strikingly accurate forecast, such as that of the winter of 1881, but by the fact that I have made a series of local predictions, incontestatively published, but telling in their effect upon the people instead."

A Tribune to the Capitol Force.

BOSTON, June 6.—Just 6 years Gen. Grant says editorially: The remarkable progress and accuracy which has lately marked the signal service of the United States Army, and particularly during the late political convention at Chicago, has made the work of Gen. Myer conspicuous before the country, and his personal record, the Associated Press is forced by candid comparison to acknowledge. Said the Times: The United States signal service has been a great success. Its work is done with the same precision as that of the Greenwich observatory, although the Globe occasionally makes fun of it. The success of the United States signal service is due to the fact that it is under the control of experienced and skilled telegraph operators.

CAPT. ANDREWS ON HIS TRAVELS

The Old Man Smokes Near York on Mill Tramp from South Carolina.

New York, June 8.—An aged old man, grave and gray-haired, walked into Leggett's hotel, A Sun reporter walked up to him and knew while the old man spoke to the hotel clerk.

"Send this," said the old man, handing the clerk this dispatch:

"We, the undersigned citizens, certify to the good name and unimpeachable character of the bearer hereof, Capt. Robert W. Andrews, now 86 and 87 years of age, and a native of this (former) county, S. C. He was engaged in the war of 1812, and also in the war between the states. He was from 1865 to 1870 a citizen of Michigan and Illinois, and also served as a sailor during a part of the time. He is on his return to his native home, Wadesboro, N. C., from New York on foot, and he is worthy of all and every just confidence he may inspire."

The paper was signed by the sheriff of Anson county, the county judge and a string of citizens.

"I am Capt. Robert W. Andrews," the old man said when the paper had been returned to him. "I served a year and a half in the war from Sumter, S. C.

"The last time I was in New York was in 1832. In 1833 I drove a gentleman's carriage, loaded with silver from the U. S. Branch. At that time I used to drive a horse about New York."

Capt. Andrews was born in South Carolina in 1791, and although 86 years old, is hale and strong. Seven weeks ago last Wednesday he left Sumter to walk to Boston. He stopped four days in Philadelphia and three days in Baltimore. He walked about twenty-two miles a day, he says, starting at 7 o'clock in the morning. He is in fine health.

He did not eat any vegetables during the trip.

TABOOING IN CONNECTICUT.

A Rich Mystic Trader of Mystic Brings the Latest Victim.

New London, Ct., June 9.—The practice of "tabooing" seems to be springing up in New England villages. The latest case is that of Ransom Miner, a well-known citizen of Mystic Bridge and a member of the Congregational church there. Miner is 60 years old, a rich horse trader and speculator, who, until within a short time, has been considered the embodiment of Yankee cuteness. Two years ago he brought home from the Green Mountains of Vermont a pleasure-loving, white-haired lady to be his second wife. Since then the woman has constantly seen trouble. The husband's abuse of her continued until, a few days ago, he threatened to send her into the back country to live in an old house. He then barred all his property into money and carried it on his person. Soon afterward a party of villagers assailed Miner's house at night with rags, hung him in effigy, and ordered that he be tabooed and leave town. His daughter Frances, by his first wife, was threatened with tar and feathers, and she was compelled to send to Stonington to get an officer to protect her. The persecuted lady applied Miner is still manifest. He is quartered in a hotel in this city, and is evidently afraid to visit his home in Mystic.

Mr. Beecher Does Not Talk Politics.

New York, June 9.—At Plymouth church Sunday night the services were brief, and, though Mr. Beecher delivered a well-worked personal discourse, many of the audience were greatly disappointed, for he did not once refer to politics in the most distant manner. His text was from the Epistle of James: "My brethren, count it all joy when you fall into divers temptations, knowing that the trial of your faith worketh patience." Mr. Beecher said it was difficult for a man to be joyful and have patience when his bones ached with rheumatism, and he suffered from the pangs of neuralgia, but the persistency in overcoming difficulties, both mental and physical, drives a man from a lower to a higher level. "Pains and penalties of the body don't improve a man so much as those of the mind," said Mr. Beecher, "except to teach a man the necessity of better hygiene."

Death of a Popular Song Writer.

Hartford, June 9.—Henry C. Work, the noted song writer and composer, died earliest evening of heart disease. He was a native of this city, and was visiting his mother. He leaves a married daughter in New York. He was probably best known as the author of "Marching through Georgia," which is played with slight variations in all parts of the world. The temperance song, "Dear Father, Come Home with Me Now," was written by Mr. Work. His "Old Nicodemus" touched the popular heart. "Slavery Days" and his "Grandfather's Clock" had wide popularity a few years ago. His gift of song writing was a peculiar one. A subject would suggest itself to his mind, and oftentimes he would neither eat nor sleep until the song was composed and set to music. He always wrote his own accompaniment.

Salvation Army Soldiers Fined.

Cleveland, June 9.—For some time complaints have been made by residents of Erie and Grove streets of a disturbance caused by meetings of the Salvation Army. Its leaders were warned by the police authorities to desist, but they refused to do so. Saturday night a squad of officers surrounded the meeting and marched twenty-four men and women to the Central station, where they were locked up. The police justice fined them in his denunciations, after which he fined the leader, Capt. Walker, $15, and said that the others might go on the payment of $5 each. Several of the accused persons refused to pay trials, and their cases were continued on bail. Florence Abell, a girl with the army, was arrested on a charge of incorrigible conduct, preferred by her father.

$50,000 Won.

Macon, Ga., June 9.—A walking match between a picked trio of Macon and an equal number from Atlanta took place on a half mile track. Over 10,000 people were present. The race was for six hours, in which the following time was made: Moore, Macon, 37½; Guerry, 33; Farmer, 31; McKay, 31; Williams, 30½; Hudson, 30. Atlanta six—Reilly, 37; Peel, 37; Mitchell, 32; Schuber, 30; Wade, 30; Myers, 30. The pool selling between Atlanta and Macon was lively. Over $30,000 was won by Macon people.

Shot and Killed by a Preacher.

Dallas, Tex., June 9.—Samuel Armstrong, colored, was shot and killed by Olin Mumford, a colored Baptist preacher. The latter was captured and jailed. Armstrong's step in a store that has twice been entered by burglars recently, and while talking about it Mumford intimated that Armstrong was the burglar. Armstrong resented Mumford's insinuation, and the wife of the latter handed her husband the pistol with which he shot his assailant.

Steamers for Two Thousand Miles.

Chicago, June 9.—Contracts were executed between the Illinois Central railroad company and the Tallahatchie Valley Car company under the terms of which the valley company has the service of over 2,000 miles of line in the Mississippi valley. The above is the contract in fifteen years. The Illinois Central Railroad company has for the past twelve years operated its own sleeping cars.

THEIR SUMMER HOME.

A Domestic Idyl in Which Four Women Figure.

Life in a Flat—A Brief Season of Happiness and Gratitude—Then Sighing an Insatiably Widish.

The Ideal and the Real.

Four professional women determined to escape the homelessness of New York by combining their financial forces and taking a flat. They had a friend in the city who all had been homeless. Their co-operation was a revolt against the lonely and malo-mestic life of boarding houses and hotels. Anything that promised even the wavering image of a home they were ready to take to their hearts. They were all familiar with the privations of making their own living, a privilege to which women who know nothing about it attach a romantic value. One was a story writer, one a landscape painter, and the other two were in the dramatic profession.

It is said that you can find anything you want in New York if you will only search for it. Anyway, they found a flat that was perfect enough to have been designed in dreamland. It was daintily furnished with easy chairs, rugs, draperies, portieres, pictures, curtains and bric-a-brac of such variety and rarity that visitors were amazed at the tasteful magnificence.

The day they moved in was an eventful sun in their lives. They didn't plunge into the perilous experiment of living together without due deliberation. They had talked it over and decided on the best method of preserving harmony. They had all had experience in getting along with others, both the foolish and wise, and they had a common object in hand—a home.

The first dinner they ate in their new quarters was more exhilarating that a banquet. They couldn't be thankful enough. They belabored over with congratulations. It was the same every hour of the day and even of the night. Each one, before she left, always drew aside from the others to look at the places of business. Their hunger for a home atmosphere could not be appeased. Every hour within those walls was precious because, for after all, they were only homeless on earth.

The flat was only attainable through the summer. This fact added to their appreciation of it. The winter would bring changes to some, perhaps all of them, permanence of either residence or business being something the gods only bestow upon a chosen few in New York.

As they looked about their cozy little quarters it dawned upon them that the furnishing of a small flat might not be an impossibility, even for them, so very little was needed. Stained floor rugs in dark red and green, some fine linen and a few other well-chosen articles, and the outfit was complete. They figured up. At frequent and irregular intervals one would pathetically exclaim, "Oh, how little it would take to furnish a flat." Another would as pathetically answer, "Oh, how little!" Then one would grab a pencil and bit of paper and they would all recreate by "figuring up" again. Each article of furniture would be estimated upon; every room in the flat considered. The items would mount fast of the future became a never-ending source of interest to their present. They rested themselves with it when weary, and they dwelt upon it when happy. They made it the subject of conversation at every day. Occasionally they expended 15 by 10 on three rooms when their financial skies brightened or promised to brighten. Sometimes they invited their friends for a month's visit. They stacked the floors themselves; they brought their beloved ornaments from their former homes; others got out their stored goods and put them on mantels and shelves. They even picked out certain pieces of furniture and in fancy stored them away for use when they should come into their kingdom, otherwise the purchase would be in this moment and pleasure was imaginary; but they dwelt upon it till it seemed that it was actually a reality; that somewhere behind the city's solid walls that flat existed, furnished as they had furnished it from the exhaustless stores of their fertile and artistic fancy, and some day they would walk in and take possession.

One day it struck them that they had a cause for self-gratulation which had been overlooked. This was that they were free from masculine society. They had not the widows they know the exact value of and domestically polarized. The single-eyed stated the objections to the animal man as an indoor companion; and the others agreed with her. They were so much better off they had the best part of the dinner, their shirts and collars; they never hung but one garment on the same peg. On Sunday morning they sit in the middle of the floor and growl if either wife or servant goes about armed with a rag wishing to dust or take away anything. They growl at the food when they have no appetite and make every body miserable.

When this topic was exhausted the four women went back to flat furnishing. They rarely ever talked of the help. Each was their business and they all managed it as well and rods away with great spirit. They enhanced their enjoyment by contrasting the flat with past boarding house experiences. The contrast drew graphic pictures of the discomforts of the past and served to fill the future with roseate hues. They could not have been more delighted if they had been the heroes of cold fairy tales and the flat a palace of gold.

Gradually came the reaction into the tranquility which visits contentment. The story-writer found her subjects no longer in the boarding house table, but in the flat. Her heroines were not harboring a thought of possessing them. Any discussion of the future of the flat was dismissed from their minds as the disciples of self-denial. They congratulated themselves that they are not the owners of the lucky treasures in the house of their friends. They would have "no place to put them." Even their newspaper scraps, the poetry and other sentimental stuff usually preserved in the form of clipping and saving, is collected for a while and then regretfully sacrificed some day under the pressure of a selfless cleanup of rubbish and consequent destruction of trifles. Everything bulky become forbidden fruit, on which to feed the eye to the penalty thereof is death—death to comfort.

The dream of the permanent flat was never realized. Like most cherished dreams it had wings and flew away at their first efforts to chain it to earth. Yet it did a help-ful work. It lingered in a lull of home around them through the summer, helping to make the hours beautiful with the glory of anticipation, and their died, strangled by the perverse hand of destiny.

The story-writer married; one of the winter winds drove her south to die. The artist unexpectedly became heir to a little money and gratified the dream of her life by going abroad. One actress married, and by so doing increased rather than diminished her professional duties. The other went to live more away from her kind, and slipped off to live in the fenced seclusion of an apartment house. Yet there was one garden in the hills of memory sacred to the flat. It was the vision of the flat they daily furnished in their leisure hours, but which was never to be a material fact.

PAPERING THE SOUTH.

Bill Nye Tells the Story of the Advance Agent.

We were talking of the show business the other evening, an actor and myself. That is, he was doing most of the talking and I was doing the heavy listening. He was chuck-full of reminiscences, and they were good ones. Casually we began to drift toward the subject of the road, and naturally as a result we were soon discussing the advance agent. I have not any more use for the advance agent and the newspaper man can run upon locals and profitably it is the advance agent.

In answer to a remark of mine that the average advance agent lacked assurance and childlike faith in himself sufficient to successfully run a show, my friend said this: To illustrate that feature I will tell you a little incident that occurred prior to the war. The Viola Vaseline company was organized in Chicago, and it was cast for the heavy villain. I remember it was in the fall of 1860. St. Louis and Kansas City, taking all the small towns and working my way back to New Orleans and through the South to Washington and New York. We were to be billed by a modest young man named Milo Hemingway. He was a Yale college graduate, and used to be opposed all the time with his own inferiority, like most advance agents. He had been all over the world, somethings in a special car with a piano, and again, locked up in a box car loaded with sugar-cured hams. He had been in "Uncle Tom's Cabin" companies and acquainted with grief. He rode across the continent once in a Pullman car and had to work his way back touching on phrenology. I suppose he used to travel on phrenology. I never was able to get a clear description of him by letter or telegram.

Well, Milo Hemingway started out on the 28th road with $100 and an overcoat, clear of good paper, with instructions that the company will meet him at his home in Chicago with a town to paper. He was to settle frequently to the manager and superintendent, also to keep him posted as to what kind of bill he ordered in order to meet the requirements of the show.

Now, I was the leading comedian of the company broke his leg before we could get away from Chicago, and the contract carried a penalty, and fast. The manager had got an opera. His letters during the opening year came mainly back from the dead letter office, but Milo did not come back. He had kept himself to the front, so he informed us by letter. He was billing the show with extraordinary success. He was in the South, and darkness the windows of ninety every southern grocery with red and yellow hangers, announcing the peerless Viola Vaseline and her great company of artists and a carload of special scenery. He was billing the show in the South, and he was doing it successfully. Every town he struck he papered the town with a lithograph of the Viola Vaseline company with a realistic picture which was almost calm in repose. Then he would put up a few hangers announcing that the company would appear on the following night, and then he would go to the next town

THEIR SUMMER HOME.

A Domestic Idyl in Which Four Women Figure.

Life in a Flat—A Brief Season of Happiness and Greatness—Furnishing an Emergency Room.

The Ideal and the Real.

Four professional women determined to escape the homelessness of New York by combining their financial forces and taking a flat. They had all had homes, and all had been homeless. Their coöperation was a revolt against the lonely and independent life of boarding houses and hotels. Anything that promised even the wavering image of a home they were ready to take to their hearts. They were all familiar with the privilege of making their own living, a privilege to which women who know nothing about it attach a romantic value. One was a story writer, one a landscape painter, and the other two were in the dramatic profession.

It is said that you can find anything you want in New York. You will only search for it. Anyway, they found a flat that was perfect enough to have been designed in dreamland. It was daintily furnished with easy chairs, rugs, Nagivas, portieres, pictures, curtains and bric-a-brac of such variety and rarity that visitors were amazed at the tasteful magnificence.

The day they moved in was an eventful one in their lives. They didn't plunge into the perilous experiment of living together without due deliberation. They had talked it over and decided on the best method of preserving harmony. They had all had experience in getting along with others, both the foolish and wise, and they had a common capital of sense to bank upon.

The first dinner they ate in their new quarters was more refreshing to the inner spirit. They couldn't be thankful enough. They babbled over with grace fulness. It was the same every hour of the day and even of the night, until they slept. They hated to leave even when they went to their work. It was a home-coming. There was for a home atmosphere could not be supposed. Every hour within those walls was precious to them; for after all it was but a brief taste of heaven. The flat was only attainable through the summer. This fact added to their appreciation of it. It was the world's long changes to some, perhaps all of them, permanence of either resilience or business being something the gods only bestow upon a chosen few in New York.

As they looked about their cozy little quarters in the dawn upon them that the furnishing of a small flat might not be an impossibility even for them, so very little was needed. Stained floors, rugs, a few good pictures, some fine linen and a few other well-chosen articles, and the outfit was complete. They agreed to it. At frequent and regular intervals one would pathetically exclaim, "Oh, how little it would take to furnish a flat," and the other three would echo still more pathetically, "Oh, how little!" Then one would grab a pencil and paper and declare she would all recreate by "figuring up" again. Each article of furniture would be estimated upon; every room filled and replenished. The possible permanent fad of the future became a never-ending source of interest to the group. They rested themselves with it when weary, and they dwelt upon it when happy! They made some changes in it every day. Occasionally they expended it by two or three rooms when their financial skies brightened, and they added to it over the world sometimes in a special car with a whoop, and again, locked up in a box car loaded with sugar-cured hams bound for Texas. Milo was familiar with nearer and acquainted with grief. He rode around the city behind one in a Pullman car and had to work his way back lecturing on phrenology. I asked him how he came to lecture on phrenology, and he said it was first suggested to him by hunger in Memphis.

The four harmonies started out on the Ahem road with $100 and an overflowing box of good paper, with instructions to bag the company well and to use his best judgment about the towns to paper. He was to paper the aristocratic quarters of the large congress, also to keep him posted as to where letters should be addressed in order to reach him as he journeyed on.

Milo was a success from the beginning, and Mr. Hemingway. The leading question of the company's private log for the first week was, "Where is Milo?" Then they would get away from Chicago, and the scoffers married a minister and fled. The company would get to Cincinnati, and Milo would be there to get on early. His letters during the spring year came safely back from Utah, Texas and Little Rock. Milo was the only one who had long journeys to see the world, so he became the company's correspondent. Dixie all over with their short poems, and darkened the windows of nearly every southern grocery with black and yellow announcements of the marvelous Violin Vanity. He had his portrait sent back to the company, and it was a picture of solemnity, tone and tenderness. Milo was a success. He was a success financially and professionally. He gracefully drove his orders in. He traveled the Viola Vanilla Company with a vengeance which only showed what he could do. He got

Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, the eloquent Plainfield Baptist divine, has been engaged to fill the pulpit of the Second Reformed Church during July. The Second Dutch Church does not stand on denominational differences in inviting men to its pulpit—a healthy sign and a good example. We like to see this fraternal feeling.

Fire Department Matters.

Last evening the new patent drop harness in the stable of Engine No. 2 was put to a test in position by Mr. Rigel, of the repair house of the New York Fire Department, and the horses were tried. The harness is suspended from the ceiling, a fireman takes each horse by the head, and leads him to the pole of the engine, when the driver who has meanwhile jumped on the engine, seizes the reins, which causes the harness to drop on the horse, when it is fastened by spring catches. One of the horses, the dark one, acted as if he had been there before. The time occupied in the test this evening, during the horses first visit to the stable and getting them attached to the engine ready to start, was about forty-five seconds. The engine company turned out in force to witness the trial, and among others present were ex-Chief of the Fire Department Voorhees, and the present Chief, Carney. Everybody seemed well satisfied.

The harness, horses, truck, and equipments were provided from a fund of about $1,000, subscribed by the citizens of Plainfield, solicited by a committee, consisting of Messrs. William Wright, Charles Hand, and Eugene Laing, who have had the entire matter in charge, and seem to have performed their task very satisfactory.

They have arranged for two gongs which when pulled, not only arouse the driver but also unloosen the straps holding the horses. These gongs are to be in position within a few days.

The committee have not exceeded in their expenditure the amount subscribed, all of which, with the exception of about $100 has been paid by the subscribers, and the $100 will probably be collected within a few days to enable the committee to close up the account and report.

The Bicycle Race.

About ten members of the Bicycle Club started Saturday evening from the corner of Park avenue and Seventh street for the race to New Brunswick. Each one had been given five minutes start, and succeeded in reaching the destination three minutes ahead of the others. The time made was about 45 minutes. Mr. Sorrell the last man of the gongs to start came in second.

The Plainfield men on their arrival in New Brunswick were met and entertained by a number of bicyclers of the latter place who also accompanied them a part of the way home.

The Republican Nominee for President of the United States.

James Gillespie Blaine was born January 31, 1830, in Union Township, Washington County, Penn. His ancestors were Scotch-Irish. He graduated from Washington College with the first honor, and subsequently filled his class in 1847, and became a professor in the Western Military Institute at Blue Lick Springs, Kentucky. He studied law for a time in Pennsylvania, and in 1853, having married Miss Gahwood whom he met at Kentucky, he went to Augusta, Me. The following year he became editor of The Kennebec Journal, and in 1857 of the Portland Daily Advertiser. In 1858 he was elected to the Legislature, and served two years on the floor and two years in the chair. In 1862 he was elected to the House of Representatives, and remained for seven years. He was then elected to the Senate in 1876. He was Speaker of three Congresses. In the Republican Convention of 1876, Mr. Blaine came within 99 votes of securing the nomination. He was also a leading candidate in the Convention of 1880. He was appointed Secretary of State by Garfield, but for several years has been out of active politics.

Acts of the Council and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, from the establishment of the present Government, and the Declaration of Independence of the same, and of the first sitting of the eight usual ones, on the 24th day of December, 1703 with the Constitution prefixed. As also the Articles of the Articles of Confederation of the United States, etc., with two alphabetical tables and an index. Compiled under the superintendence of the Legislature, by Peter Wilson, Al. M.

SERIES I.

Whereas, all the constitutional authority ever possessed by the Kings of Great Britain over these colonies, or their other dominions, was, by compact, derived from the people, and held of them for the common interest of the whole society; allegiance and protection are, in the nature of things, reciprocal ties, each equally depending upon the other, and liable to be dissolved by the other's being refused or withheld. And whereas George the Third, King of Great Britain, has refused protection to the good people of these Colonies; and, by assenting to sundry acts of the British Parliament, attempted to subject them to the absolute dominion of that body; and has also made war upon them in the most cruel and unnatural manner, for no other cause than asserting their just rights; all civil authority under him is necessarily at an end, and a dissolution of government in each Colony has consequently taken place.

And whereas in the present deplorable situation of these Colonies, exposed to the fury of a cruel and relentless enemy, some form of government absolutely necessary, not only for the preservation of good order, but also the more effectually to unite the people, and enable them to exert their whole force in their own necessary defence; and as the honourable the Continental Congress, the Supreme Council of the American Colonies, has advised such of the Colonies as have not yet gone into the measure to adopt for themselves respectively such government as shall best conduce to their own happiness and safety, and the well being of America in general; We, the representatives of the colony of New Jersey, having been elected by all the counties in the freest manner, and, in Congress assembled, have, after mature deliberation, agreed upon a set of charter-rights, and the form of a Constitution, in manner following, viz:

I. That the government of this province shall be vested in a Governor, Legislative Council and General Assembly.

II. That the said Legislative Council and Assembly shall be chosen, for the first time, on the second Tuesday of August next; the members whereof shall be the same in number and qualifications as is herein after mentioned, and shall be and remain vested with all the powers and authority to be held by any future Legislative Council and Assembly of this colony, until the second Tuesday in October, which will be in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and seventy-seven.

III. That on the said second Tuesday in October, yearly and every year forever, (with the privilege of adjourning from day to day as occasion may require) the counties shall severally choose one person to be a member of the Legislative Council of this colony, who shall be and have been for one whole year next before the election an inhabitant and freeholder in the county in which he is chosen, and worth at least one thousand pounds, proclamation money, of real and personal estate within the same county: That at the same time, each county shall also choose three members of Assembly; provided, that no person shall be entitled to a seat in the said assembly unless he be and have been for one whole year next before the election an inhabitant of the county he is to represent, and worth five hundred pounds, proclamation money, of real and personal estate in the same county. That on the second Tuesday next after the day of election, the Council and Assembly shall separately meet; and that the consent of both Houses shall be necessary to every act; provided that seven shall be a quorum of the council for doing business; and that no law shall pass, unless there be a majority of all the representatives of each body personally present and agreeing thereto. Provided always, That if a majority of the representatives of this province and council in general assembly convened shall, at any time hereafter, judge it equitable and proper to add to or diminish the number or proportion of the members of the said or any county or counties in this colony, then, and in such case, the same may, on the principles of more equal representation, be lawfully done, any thing in this charter to the contrary notwithstanding; so that the whole number of representatives in assembly shall not at any time be less than thirty-six.

POLITICAL MATTERS.

Opinions of Representative Men in Washington.

Began Confidence—Flowers' Boom. Hendricks and Tilden Chosen—Cleveland and McDonald.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—The chances of Republican success in the coming campaign, with Blaine and Logan as standard bearers, was the one topic of interest in political circles here. Many of the Republican senators and representatives who attended the convention have returned to Washington, and the sentiment is more than complimentary for the ticket, Original Blaine men are cheerful, notwithstanding the fact that many of them expect there will be an organized bolt of the Independents. Even Democrats and friends of the bolters will cast votes for the Democratic nominee or not another candidate in the field, but in other contingency claim that they will be more than compensated for by large gains.

Representative Long, of Massachusetts, whose opinion, owing to the doubtful position of some of the Massachusetts Republicans, was eagerly sought, said there was no room for doubt about that state. It will certainly cast its vote for Blaine. He also said that much would depend upon the discussion in the Democratic ranks, and if Senator Bayard should be the nominee quite a number of Republicans would vote for Cleveland in preference to their candidate in July.

On the other hand, Democrats talk confidently of the success of Hendricks and Logan. Each side of this confidence is based on the belief that Indiana will be carried, and when it is known Blaine will not receive the support of the Independents in that state, they claim the election will be decided in favor of the Democrats. Democrats here are jubilant over the nomination of Hendricks and Logan, and say that the ticket is a strong one. Senator Voorhees, of Indiana, remarked that the Republicans carrying that state. The Democrats will be very much disappointed if they do not carry it. The Democratic state ticket will be elected by a handsome majority.

Senator Williams, of Kentucky, stated that Blaine and Logan are a strong ticket, but one that the Democrats can beat.

Assemblyman Lang, of Ohio, said that 7 of that state. All along the route from Boston they were greeted by cheering crowds, and at the depot in this city a large number of people were assembled to welcome the delegation with cheers. Cannon and band played during stay and cannon fired as they left. A reporter approached one of the Californian delegates, and the crowd, also Judge Wright, of California. Every word the latter said was applauded to the echo. He said that the general impression people was that Blaine and Logan full of popularity and that the Democrats would be defeated. Gen. Cox was introduced to speak for the Californians, and he received hearty cheers in closing the latter said: "The Pacific coast will be a Democratic state by that will more than offset the glum looks wardness of some Republicans who remind him of the story that tried to jump a fence, but landed midway on the top rail, and when the kind souls caught on the other, and there remained unable to go forward or backward. I need not say that I refer to the Massachusetts delegation.

Congressman Dunnell, of Minn., followed. Then the Swedish college students cheered the candidates and the speakers and the crowd, and the band played "Hail Columbia." A band serenaded the delegation at the Parker House last evening. Manitoba Desires Annexation.

Ottawa, Ont., June 10.—E. W. Thomson, a leading Canadian journalist, has just returned from Winnipeg. He says that Manitoba would not be a month in the confederation were its independence declared, because separation from England would leave Manitoba without that appeal from Ottawa to Downing street, on which her people base their main hopes. Long maladministration has deeply impressed them with the opinion that their interests are disregarded by the eastern provinces, and scarcely to be reconciled with eastern interests. They have reason for fear that the land laws can never be properly administered from headquarters 1,000 miles distant. Nothing but sentiment for British connection and hope for British intervention have kept the province on the constitutional path. He thinks a commercial union would suit them admirably. Annexation is much discussed. He imagines we may see an independent Canada result from a successful organization for a commercial union with the states.

The Wedding was Postponed.

Cincinnati, June 10.—An exciting scene occurred at the Cathedral last evening when Wm. Patterson arrived in a coach with Ella Keating to be married. Anna Flynn, a woman with whom Patterson had been living, was in waiting, and when Patterson stepped out of the coach she seized him, tore off his collar and cursed him roundly. The police took her to the station, but the clergyman refused to marry the waiting couple. Patterson is under indictment for a murder committed eighteen months ago.

A Salvation General Arrested.

Chicago, June 10.—Rev. A. H. Kirkland, who runs the "Adelaid Gospel theatre," in this city, was arrested with his party of Salvationists, while making a tour of the city with an organ in an express wagon. He was, however, turned loose by the police captain, on the condition that he confine himself to the side streets. Kirkland glories in his martyrdom, which is similar to that which he suffered at the hands of the Brooklyn police year or two ago.

Death of Ex-Justice Swayne.

New York, June 10.—Noah Haynes Swayne, ex-justice of the United States supreme court, died here at the age of 80 years. A BRILLIANT GATHERING.

The Seminary Commencement and Soiree.

The annual commencement exercises and soiree of the Young Ladies' Seminary, on Seventh street, took place last evening. The seminary building was tastefully decorated, the owl of the young ladies' society occupying a conspicuous position.

The alls of the city filled the school chapel at eight o'clock when the exercises were commenced by the "call of the roll" which was responded to by each member of the school with an appropriate quotation.

A salutatory of a somewhat novel nature was delivered by Miss Hendren. In parts it was very piquant, and was delivered in a very easy manner.

A nocturne was executed by Miss Dorman in the excellent manner for which the Seminary is noted.

The event of the evening was the giving of a French play, La Treille Du Roi, by the students. It was attentively listened to throughout by the large audience, though at a moderate estimate not one out of ten understood what was being said. For the benefit of the nine, however, a very good argument of the play in English was given by one of the young ladies. However, as THE NEWS reporter was fully up on all the modern languages, not to mention a number of others, he fully appreciated the painstaking care evinced, and the amount of dramatic art displayed by the young ladies. The following was the cast.

ATTENDANTS.

Edith Potts	Lilian Erskine	Edith Clark
Frankie Waring	Mary Brunson	Mary Outerbridge
Mabel Potter	Minnie Wilson	Helen Lithgow
	Laura Van Derbeck

The second part of the program was opened by a recitation by Miss Gussie Murray, entitled, The Well of St. Keyne. Miss Murray acquitted herself in a very creditable manner, and the audience manifested approval in a good round of applause.

An essay on "The Red Cross" was delivered by Miss Carrie Milliken. The essayist traced the rise of the Order of the Red Cross from its inception, pointed out the benefits to be derived from a full appreciation and use of its methods, and closed by expressing the hope that the order would spread into every town and village of the country. Miss Milliken seemed thoroughly aroused, and handled her subject in a masterly manner.

Miss Frankie Waring recited "Flying Jim's Last Leap" in a fine manner, giving evidence of a powerful voice which with training could be made to appear to great advantage.

A violin solo, "La Grande Duchesse," No. 9, (J. A. Geiza,) by Miss Ella Clark called out the first encore of the evening. Miss Clark handled her instrument in a manner which showed her thorough familiarity with it, and she rendered her selection in a fine manner.

The valedictory was delivered by Miss Addie Lewis. It was not as plentifully sprinkled with tears as such productions usually are, in fact the fear element was conspicuously wanting, but it was none the less a meritorious production, and did the fair writer great credit. The burden of her essay was that there were themes for thought lying all about us, and that they but needed expression to bring "fame unto lagging Milton" from his hiding place to everlasting fame and renown.

The Rev. Dr. K. P. Ketcham then presented the Seminary diploma to the one graduate, Miss Lewis, in a few well-chosen remarks.

Miss Alice Fairbairn rendered the Rhapsodie Hongroise of Liszt in her usual fine manner, and the young ladies sang their society song which completed the program.

The audience then passed into the parlors, and the chapel floor was cleared for dancing. The first strains of a waltz brought the young people back, and the floor was soon filled with whirling figures. The dancing was kept up until a late hour.

Prominent among those present last evening were Corporation Counsel Marsh, the Rev. Drs. Lewis, Ketcham, Kenyon, the Rev. Mr. Murphy, and the Rev. Mr. Goodrich, Dr. C. M. Field, Mr. Vose, of Boston, ex-Councilman Warling, Messrs. Murray, Parkhurst, Craig, Aldrich, Ackerman, Hallock, Grossbyle, Yates, Stewart, Brooks, Tyler, Atwood, Hancock, Squier, Tracy, Depew, Wyckoff, and Tomes; Misses Groendyke, Kirkner, Kellam, Marsh, Ackerman, Foster, Murray, Atwood, Lewis, Tyler, Depew, Quinn, Van Zandt, Waring, Milliken, Clark, Fairbairn, Sanders, Lithgow, Dorman, Tracy, Hayes, Ketcham, Wilson, Gardiner, Potts, Kenyon, Van Derbeck, Outerbridge, Kemper, Erskine, and Yates.

JOHN A. LOGAN,

The Republican Nominee for Vice-President of the United States.

John Alexander Logan was born near Murphysboro, Jackson Co., Ill., Feb. 9, 1826. He enjoyed but slight educational advantages. He was engaged in the Mexican war as private, lieutenant, adjutant, and quartermaster. He studied law, was a prosecuting attorney, and was three times re-elected to the Legislature. He was at this time a Democrat, and was a Presidential elector in the Buchanan Campaign. He was elected to Congress in 1858 and 1860. At the breaking out of the war he joined a Michigan regiment as a private, and participated in the first battle of Bull Run. He then returned to Illinois, and raised a regiment of his own. He rose to the rank of Major-General of Volunteers. He declined President Johnson's offer of the Mexican mission, and was again elected to Congress in 1866, where he remained until his election to the Senate in 1871. The Republicans not controlling the Illinois Legislature in 1877, he was succeeded by Judge Davis. He was, however, returned two years later. His term expires next March.

FIRE BOARD MEETING.

Assessor's Books Examined. The Treasurer's Bond Accepted.

Badges Distributed.

The Board of Managers of the Fire Department met in regular session last night. All the members were present. Mr. Morris, Secretary pro tem., moved that the rules of order be dispensed with, which was carried.

Mr. Morris moved that the Assessor's books be presented and examined by the Board, carried.

Assessor J. A. Hubbard presented his books, and a communication stating that the amount of taxable property in Plainfield and North Plainfield was $7,070,600 over that of last year, and recommended that the fire tax be 22 cents on every one hundred dollars. After some deliberation it was fixed at 23 cents, the same as last year.

Mr. Cutter's bond for Treasurship was then presented and accepted. His bondsmen were Messrs. J. S. Cutter, L. L. Compton, Carman Parse and Jasper G. Cadmus.

The following Committees were then appointed:

Committee on Repairs and Supplies, Messrs. H. L. Morris, J. S. Cutter and E. H. Depew. Committee on Wells, Mr. Wm. Jones.

When the meeting reached this point Mr. Depew asked to be excused as he wished to go to the Commencement exercises being held at the Seminary. His request was granted.

The communications from the different companies were then stated to be in order.

The following companies presented names for membership, viz: By Gazelle Engine Co., No. 1—Messrs. Thomas Anderson and James G. Connelly.

By Plainfield Engine Company, No. 2,—Messrs. Edward VanWinkle, Alonzo Ayers, Thomas Dwyer, Dennis Daly, Horace VanNess and Chas. W. Tallman.

By Zephyr Hook and Ladder Company, No. 1—Messrs. F. W. Cougot, and Wm. H. Mumford.

All the names were laid over for thirty days.

Gazelle Engine Co. expelled for non-payment of dues the following members: Messrs. Henry Litts, Thomas Price, Lawrence Green, and A. Murphy.

The same company dropped from the roll for being absent from the city, Messrs. Dresslear Voorhees, S. C. Dunn, and S. A. Vell, and reinstated Mr. A. H. Martin. Messrs. M. J. McCarty, Wm. Newman and D. J. Ackerman were elected members.

Zephyr Hook and Ladder Co., sent the name of Mr. Wm. Tobin, for expulsion from the company for the non-payment of dues, and he demanded a trial which was granted.

The Foreman of Gazelle Engine Co., No. 1, and Plainfield Engine Co., No. 2, reported that their companies were full and no more members could be taken in at present.

Warren Engine Co., No. 3, presented the names of Henry Bilyea and Louis Weigel, which were confirmed.

The same company also applied for Charles Sabbie's exemption papers, which were granted.

Mr. Morris, stated that the by-law adopted by the Board in regard to the Treasurer's salary was not in accordance with the law and moved that it be amended. Carried.

The badges were then distributed to the companies in the following order: Gazelle, No. 1, Plainfield, No. 2, Zephyr Hook and Ladder Co., No. 1, Alert Hose Co., No. 1, and Warren Engine Co., No. 3.

The Chief Engineer was authorized to keep the horses for Gazelle Engine Co., and Zephyr Hook and Ladder Co., on duty until the next meeting of the Board.

The Board then adjourned to meet again Thursday evening in the parlors of Engine Co. No. 2.

THE BADGES.

The badges given to the members of the Fire Department are made of nickel, have a coat of arms on it, and the inscription "Plainfield Fire Department."

When a member received one he was obliged to sign an agreement, acknowledging the receipt and promising to return the same to the Board of Managers when he ceased to be a member of the Fire Department. Mr. J. A. Moore, the Foreman of Gazelle Engine Co., No. 1, received Badge No. 1, and he prizes it highly.

Badges were made for the reporters of the Constitutionalist and Times, which were the only papers in existence at the time they were ordered, President Van Winkle stated, and badges for the reporters of THE NEWS would be ordered at once. The members of the Department are very much pleased with the badge.

Sons of Temperance.

Howell Division, No. 97, Sons of Temperance, was visited last evening by the Grand Worthy Patriarch of the State, J. H. Hoagland of New Brunswick. Dunellen Division also paid a fraternal visit, and the Washington Section Cadets of Temperance of Plainfield, were also present. The evening was a very enjoyable one to all. The Grand Worthy in his address spoke of the activity of the order in other sections of the State, and gave some very excellent advice to the boys of the Cadets and urged the members of the Sons to constant activity in their work for the order. Several recitations were then rendered in a very effective manner, among which were two from young lady members of Dunellen Division which deserves special praise. Short addresses followed by members of both divisions, making the evening one of pleasure to all.

THE DRUNKARD'S WIFE.

In a hospital ward a woman lay,
Patiently gasping her life away;
So feeble and beaten you scarce could trace
Womanhood's semblance in form or face.
Yet the hair that over the pillow rolled,
In a tangled mass was like threads of gold;
And never a sculptor in any land
Modeled a daintier foot or hand.

Cold sat who ministered to her need:
"None but a coward could do this deed;
And what bitter hate must have nerved the arm
That a helpless creature like this could harm!"
Then the dim eyes, hazy with Death's eclipse,
Slowly unlocked, and the swollen lips
Murmured faintly: "He loves me well
My husband—'twas drink—be sure you tell
When he comes to himself—that I forgive;
Poor fellow—for him—I would like to live."
A shudder, a moan, as the words were said,
And the drunkard's wife on the couch lay dead.

Oh, fathers, who hold your daughters dear,
Somebody's daughter is lying here.
Oh, brothers of sisters! come and see
What the fate of your precious ones may be.
Oh, man! however you love your home,
Be it palace or cottage, 'neath heaven's blue dome,
This demon of drink can enter in,
For law strikes hands and bargains with sin.
You have legalized crime, you have the gold,
Now hand them over, the sons you sold—
Keep pushing them forward. Drink, boys, drink!
Your fathers are paid for your souls they think,
And in the great starts where Mammon strives Cheapest of all things are human lives.
—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Comforting a Poetess.

Put your arms around me, dearest,
Draw me closer to your breast;
I am sad and very weary,
On your true heart I would rest.
—Minnie C. Ballard.

Don't despair, O dearest Minnie,
With your request we will comply;
We will put our arms around you,
And we'll—kiss you on the sly.
—Orange Observer.

Minnie, don't you be uneasy,
Rest your head upon this breast;
But if your ringlets should be greasy,
Don't soil our coat, but grease our vest.
—Richmond Baton.

What is a little grease, my darling,
On our coat or on our vest,
To the joy, so great, of having
Such a sweet face on our breast?
—Gotham Mountaineer.

Sweet-girl Graduates.

O boy, give me the daily paper quick!
For I would read and know what now is Fame's;
I want to see what's writ of each dear chick,
The sweet-girl graduates with baby names!

Of Nellie, Susie, Fannie I would read;
Of Nellie, Lillie, Minnie, and the games
They play at composition; much we need
The sweet-girl graduates with baby names!

Do Mamie, Birdie, Sallie write this year?
And Mattie, Lizzie, Jennie? Language tames
In telling just how each of these appear—
The sweet-girl graduates with baby names!

And what of Lottie, Hattie, Carrie too?
And Maggie, Tillie, Sillie? Will so tames
All savage men and makes them good and true,
As sweet-girl graduates with baby names?

Yes, give me, quick, the daily paper, boy!
Just hand it over ere impatience maims
Your youthful limbs! Ah, here's my joy!
The sweet-girl graduates with baby names!
—Louisville Courier-Journal.

What is Love?

Unless you can muse in a crowd all day,
On the absent face that fixed you;
Unless you can love as the angels may,
With the breadth of heaven betwixt you;
Unless your cool dreams rise but faith is fast,
Through believing and unbelieving;
Unless you can die when the dream is past—
Oh, never call it loving.

TILDEN WILL ACCEPT.

It Is so Stated on the Authority of Randall.

The Talk of McDonald and Stevens.

Protection to be the Battle-cry of the Republican Campaign.

NEW YORK, June 11.—The Star says: "Quite a harrowing chapter of the Democratic gold fright among political speculators. It has been definitely ascertained that Samuel J. Tilden will accept the nomination of the Democratic party, if tendered regularly by the Chicago convention. The letter reporting the Gubernatorial

"OF course it serves," said Mr. Randall, "I think I can do it, sense, and in character, that will not be very consoling to the friends of Jim' Blaine, while I have no hesitation in saying that it will be very pleasing to the Democratic party."

"What is the nature of your information, may I ask?"

"I communicate directly from Sam Randall; no more authority, I should say, as he is supposed to be in close proximity to the old man in political matters than any one else."

"Then when did Mr. Randall make that statement?"

"By two congressmen, who told me, and who were willing to put it liberty to use at present. It occurred in the Hoffman square about a week ago, when Mr. Randall was there. One by my friends put the question directly to him, asking what he thought of Tilden's letting Mr. Tilden, and he answered that he had been positively assured that Mr. Tilden would accept the nomination."

While the latter was in conversation with Mr. Stewart in his office, one of the reporters and stormed stopped in.

"I will ask you and him to say no name," he modestly requested, "but just give Mr. Stewart as the authority. I will tell you very frankly, however, what Mr. Randall said and you can use it as you see fit. I don't desire to draw the line closely between the two parties. They are so greatly that now I am not sure which party to belong to. The Republicans are saying that they intend taking possession of the civil corporations of the country, and are trying

TWENTY HOUSES WRECKED.

A Serious Cyclone Sweeps Over Mount Vernon, Ohio.

Wrecking Trains Rushed to the Scene—Ten persons reported killed in the vicinity of Mount Vernon—A small moving village and the Kenyon College building at the latter place badly damaged—Many persons injured.

Mount Vernon, Ohio, June 11.—The people residing in the vicinity of Mount Vernon, this county, were startled from their slumbers last night by a loud report resembling the discharge of ten thousand cannon, accompanied by the crashing of falling buildings, and the foundations of the earth seemed to tremble. It was at once known to those who were unable to sleep a moment longer that a cyclone had struck the city, and the alarm was given. Lanterns were procured, and the work of investigation began. It was learned that the cyclone was of more than ordinary dimensions, and that the path of destruction in the north, running in a southerly direction, was from one to two miles wide. The cyclone struck the Ohio & Kentucky Division of the Pan Handle road, and in nearly every instance it is spoken of as having struck one acre, where many frame dwellings are situated, the full force of the greatest. The foundations of all the houses, about twenty in number, were completely knocked from under them, so that they settled down. Behind the houses in the path of the cyclone, the air literally was awakened by the terror stricken people rushing out of bed. The giving way of the foundations caused the house to go over on its side. The family were removed as soon as possible to a place of safety. McDougall Mansell received serious injuries while attempting to prop up the gable end of his house. The house is a complete wreck and the others are in bad condition. All the families have moved out and at present find quarters in their neighbors' houses. The approach of daylight drew a large crowd of spectators to the scene of destruction, and the excitement was intense. The bottom of all the wells had fallen out during the night, and the waters rushed into the ruins below. It was considered by experts that a further drop of the earth might be expected at any moment, and the inmates of the wrecked houses were warned not to return to their places of abode under any circumstances. As soon as the news of the cyclone reached the city by the Pan Handle road, Lieutenant Governor Warwick, Chief Lockwood and Adjutant General Axline, with a corps of surgeons, left for the scene of the disaster, and will render all assistance possible.

Drowned While Bathing.

Mount Vernon, Ohio, June 11.—Special dispatches received here from the scene of the cyclone say that Kenyon College, at Gambier, is badly damaged. The college building is a large stone structure, and the roof was blown off and the walls badly shattered. The Episcopal church at Gambier was also damaged. The cyclone struck Gambier at 11:30 last night, and was followed by a heavy rain storm. The path of the cyclone was about one mile wide, and it struck the village of Gambier, which is a small moving village, and the College town of Kenyon, which is a suburb of this city, were shorn of their fine shade trees last night by a local report resembling the discharge of ten thousand cannon, accompanied by the crashing of falling buildings, and the foundations of the earth seemed to tremble. It was at once known to those who were unable to sleep a moment longer that a cyclone had struck the city, and the alarm was given. Lanterns were procured, and the work of investigation began. THE BLIND AT PLAY.

How Wonderfully the Senses of Touch and Hearing Serve Those Who Have Lost Their Sight—Blind Boys at "Peg" on the Playground—Relief Measures.

[New York Mail and Express.]

Blind boys at play would astonish any one not thoroughly acquainted with the sense. Their movements differ in no way from others. Objects in their way are intuitively avoided, even when there are strange obstacles on their own premises that were not present the day before. They run and play and dodge quickly right and left, as if they were looking into each other's eyes, and tumbled over the four-foot balustrade into the covered playground without effort or breaking their heads against the posts, which were quite near enough together to make them dangerous.

THEIR ACUTE PERCEPTION.

"How do they do this," asked the reporter.

"They are, in the first place, on home ground," said Superintendent Waite, "and know every step almost as well as they could see. When they come to a corner they feel the touch of the last bit of wind, and can tell when the direction of the wind changes. It begins before the change. Then almost unconsciously follow such a guide. When one appreciates an object he receives a warning from the increased pressure of the air before striking it, and of the slight changes in, and delicate as the sense of touch must be to detect it. Children who have been blind from infancy are the most rapid and practised in their perception of the first equivalents only about 5 per cent of the blind. They are of course more cheerful than those who have been able to see, and have lost the sense of sight."

"Some of these boys apparently see!"

"Yes, a great many of them see to a certain extent, can tell daylight from darkness, can distinguish an object, but can not tell what it is; some can even see that a thing is a book, but they can see nothing in it. They are the most troublesome class of scholars we have. They learn nothing in of any use or value to them, but they know too much to be teachable, and have little of the ambition to learn shown by the totally helpless, who will bend any and every chance to great information."

There are 235 scholars in the asylum, which is free, as a State school, and is crowded whose support nearly $50,000 annually is appropriated. The private contributions, since its establishment, have, however, reached $200,000, and the total is from $70,000 to $80,000 per annum are completely covered. To feed and clothe and warm these little folks for last year, only $22,940 was required, a little over 2 per cent of the whole sum. The salaries of officers and employes. One death in the year, and that from disease contracted outside, shows the healthy condition of the institution.

The following communication explains itself.

To the Mayor of the City of Plainfield,
Union County, State of New Jersey.

DEAR SIR—I, Chas. E. Austin, one of the Justices of the Peace of Somerset County have this day given the following order to the Overseer of the Poor of the Township of North Plainfield.

To Daniel I. Smalley, Overseer of the Poor of the Township of North Plainfield in said County.

I, Chas. E. Austin, one of the Justices of the Peace of said county of Somerset by this my order do warn all persons selling intoxicating liquor to desist from selling liquor to Stephen Lester Horton, James Fallon, James Cashen, and Sarah Warren who have been convicted before me of being common drunkards.

Can you take any action in the matter to prevent these men from getting liquor from persons selling intoxicating liquor in Plainfield.

Yours truly,
CHAS. E. AUSTIN, J. P.

A PLAINFIELD ART MUSEUM.

What Several Public Spirited Citizens are Quietly Doing for the Public Good.

On the southwest corner of Park avenue and Eighth street an excavation was dubbed about three weeks ago, May 20th, for a new brick building, and the walls of the basement are so far advanced as to be ready for the first-floor beams soon. The building is to be of pressed brick, 50 feet front on Park avenue and 75 feet on Eighth street, two stories and basement, the lot having 100 feet frontage on the Avenue, and extending back 500 feet to the City Park. The building is to be completed by the Fall, and the cost is to be from $30,000 to $50,000.

To interested appearance there is nothing extraordinary about all this, but that building is destined to become one of the most popular in the city and most famous in New Jersey. It is the result of a little chat by the seaside last Summer, between Mr. Job Male, the first Mayor of Plainfield, and Mr. A. C. Baldwin, of the firm of Scheelle, Baldwin, Twomey & Co., to both of whom Plainfield is largely indebted for many of the new enterprises which so greatly add to the many charms it already possesses.

Mr. Male, the Peter the Great of Plainfield, now well advanced in years, concluded to do the crowning act of his life for the enjoyment and advancement of the community in which he has spent so many useful years and in which he has always been so highly esteemed.

His benevolence formulated into donating to the city of Plainfield the building referred to for a free Art Museum, provided that the sum of $30,000 was subscribed by citizens of Plainfield toward the purchase of books and works of art, which with the co-operation of Mr. Baldwin and a number of other gentlemen, in sympathy with the noble enterprise, has been obtained.

Messrs. George H. Babcock, Mason W. Tyler, H. P. Talmadge, A. C. Baldwin, and J. B. Dumont, the present Officers and Directors of the "Plainfield Public Library" were appointed a committee to receive the subscriptions, and among others the following gentlemen responded to the amount set opposite their respective names, viz.:

C. Potter, Jr.,	$1000 00
The Board of Directors of the First National Bank, per C. Parmly Cashier.	500 00
Mason W. Tyler	500 00
A. C. Baldwin	500 00
J. Evarts Tract	500 00
J. Kirkbride	500 00
John H. Evans	500 00

John Taylor Johnson	500 00
Abraham R. Dunlap	500 00

George H. Babcock	500 00

John W. Manning	250 00

Henry F. Talmadge	250 00
James Mount	250 00
W. H. Young	250 00
Martin I. Cooley	250 00

We cannot at this time furnish the complete list of subscribers but hope to do so at some future date. Suffice it at present to say, that the sum thus contributed amounts to $11,000, and that besides this, Mr. Baldwin has accumulated in several upper rooms in his elegant residence in Park avenue, contributions to a large amount of real art treasures, in the form of paintings in oil and water colors, fine engravings, statuary, brie-a-brac, and matters and things generally likely to interest and please visitors at the museum, whether man, woman or child, Mr. Baldwin himself being probably among the largest contributors in this direction.

A partial list of these treasures are given below that some idea may be formed of the magnificent collection.

The oil paintings which will be placed in the main gallery are by both foreign and native artists, old and modern, and all of them are excellent examples of their work. They range in size from 8x10 inches to 6x8 feet.

"The Great Fire in London, 1666," by Nicolas Baur, is probably one of the best and most ambitious efforts of that master, among whose patrons was the King of Holland. Painted in 1786.

"The Puritan's Daughter, 1685," by S. Leutze, belongs to the best period of his career. It was first purchased by Mr. Lawrie, the well-known art dealer, for the sum of $3,000. It possesses all of Mr. Leutze's characteristic strength, telling a fine story of those early days.

"Lucretia Borgia, 1883," By Petro La Cortona. A blood curdling picture. He must have had a veritable murderess for his model.

"Baby's Christmas," by F. W. Sohns, and A. Thomsen's "Little Girl Digging Sand by the Seashore," together with "Wooing by the Sea," by Harguelot, will attract the young, as well as the old. They are pretty impressions of young life from the cradle to early maturity.

Mr. H. Alexander's "Words in Vain" is a story well told; and we find great pleasure in studying a "Shepherdess and Sheep" by F. deBeul. It is a faithful transcript from nature.

"An Old Chateau in Normandy" is the name of a picture by E. Swingly. It is in a winter twilight, and is attractive in its wierdness. A careful winter wood scene by G. Schneider, and the work of Holland by J. J. Spohler are quite pretty.

Lovers of cattle will linger with an excellent representation by E. Van-Dam-Silva.

Meister Rosa's "Grapes" will make one's mouth water.

"Moonlight" by R. de Molzaro, "La Perseguse Fisherman," artist unknown, but painted in the best manner, and "A Sea View," by B. A. C. Jacobs, are good works.

There are many water colors and engravings, which are unnecessary at this time to describe, except to say that they contribute to the general attractiveness of the collection.

Among the pastelles and crayons are portraits of Job Male and Peter Cooper. Mr. Male's was executed and contributed by Sydney E. Flower, Mr. William C. Clegg, a rising young artist in this city, executed Mr. Cooper's likeness, and has also contributed to the gallery a most faithful delineation of "A Lion's Head," in pastelle, which will be one of the attractions of the collection.

In the Statuary group is a life-size bust in Carrara marble of George Washington, by Hiram Powers, one of the most celebrated sculptors of modern times, and another of the same size, of Abraham Lincoln.

A large terra-cotta plaque of Michael Angelo of very ancient date is quite a curiosity as well as a work of art.

Life size busts of Webster and Clay are expected before the museum is opened to the public.

There is also to be donated "The Battle of Cedar Creek," by Mr. Julian Scott of this city, a battle scene 8x3 feet, a reproduction from the same scene on a larger scale for which he received from the State of Vermont the sum of ten thousand dollars. Mr. Scott has certainly succeeded in describing about the works of other eminent artists, less emphatically objects for obvious reasons, to any statement of his own work, which we believe everybody will rank among the first, whether he permits us to say so or not.

Nearly every artist in town has contributed something, and these are gentlemen many of whose works hold honorable positions in the most famous art galleries in the country, including the New York Academy of Design.

Mr. Schaeffin is having a landscape painted in Europe which he designs to donate, its cost not less than one thousand dollars, and several of the paintings already received and to come are even more valuable.

The building is to be arranged somewhat as follows: In its basement a large, airy and finished basement with high ceiling. To the left of the main entrance to the building there is to be provided a reading room for ladies, a reading room to the right of the entrance to be for gentlemen. The library is to occupy the rear portion of the floor, and between it and the gentlemen's reading room is to be the president's room.

The second story will be divided into three apartments, the largest of which is to contain oil paintings, statuary, and the like, a second room to contain water colors, and the third, etchings and engravings.

All the rooms in the building are to be lighted from the roof, as all modern libraries are, and in every other respect the first and only free library and art museum in New Jersey to be the institution which every citizen of Plainfield will feel proud of.

The library will contain upwards of 10,000 volumes, including the contents of the present library on Front street, and will become entitled to copies of all publications of the United States free, by virtue of an act of Congress to the effect that all libraries of 10,000 volumes and upwards would be entitled to receive such copies upon application from the member in Congress in whose district the library is located.

The donation of the ground, by way of perpetuating the name of the noble benefactor who has done all the building, have decided to name it and to make Mr. Male the president for life, a fitting tribute to the people of Plainfield who know Mr. Male hopes he will be long spared to enjoy with them the scenes of his many good works.

New contributions of various works of art of the most varied character continue to arrive from time to time. To-day there was received a number of unique Japanese figures, and Moorish staves.

The head of a buffalo, the head of a wild boar, a magnificent peacock with tail spread, a gigantic owl, an eagle and a large turkey, are among the collection which have recently been received from sportsmen and admirers to the happiness of the beneficiaries of Plainfield's philanthropist, Job Male.

Personal.

Mr. William A. Dunning, of this city, was yesterday made a Master of Arts by Columbia College.

Mr. John F. Plummer and wife, of Nethergood, sailed the past week for a short stay abroad.

Mr. R. V. Stockwell is gradually recovering from an attack of remittent fever.

The Rev. T. Logan Murphy and wife have gone to Newport, R. I., to take part in the semi-ante-nuial services of Trinity Episcopal Church of which Mr. Murphy was for several years rector.

Reform Club Festival.

A festival for the benefit of the Reform Club was given in the lecture room of the Seventh Day Baptist Church last evening, under the auspices of the Band of Hope. There was a large attendance, the room being crowded. The Plainfield Cornet Band furnished music, and gave some pleasing pleasing selections. A sacred concert was also given, led by Messrs. Green and Titsworth.

Fire Matters.

Members of Engine Co., No. 2, last evening were drilling their horses into the new spring harness, and reduced the time of getting ready to start for a fire from 45 to 19 seconds. The drill has been kept up until the horses now respond to a signal and run to their positions alone. The Fire Board and President Van Winkle, who were present were highly pleased with the progress made.

ARISTOCRATIC AGONY.

"What fools these mortals be." The English aristocracy are profoundly moved over the fact that in the Government Commission appointed for the purpose of inquiring into the condition of the poor the name of Cardinal Manning has been written down next to that of the Prince of Wales and ahead of several noble dukes. This question of precedence is a momentous one in England. The Marquis of Lorne, for instance, is not allowed to take his wife in to tea. He must follow behind the princes and princesses in the batch of the lords. The Manning matter has been brought to the attention of the House of Lords, where the explanation has been made that, as a Prince of the Church, the Cardinal ranks them all according to the canons of court etiquette. Some day, when an American Cardinal sends his card to the Queen the cakes and ales will have to wait in the ante chamber while he is ushered into the presence of royalty.

LAYS DOWN THE HONORS

Mr. Tilden Positively Refuses Any Nomination.

The Republic Independent of Any One Man—"I Submit to the Will of God in Bowing My Public Career Forever Closed."

NEW YORK, June 12.—The following letter has been furnished for publication:

NEW YORK, June 10, 1884.

To Daniel Manning and Others, Democratic state committee of New York:

In my letter of June 18, 1883, addressed to the delegates from the state of New York to the Democratic national convention, I said:

"Having now served faithfully my full share of labor and care in the public service, and wearing the marks of its burdens, I do not desire to be a candidate for any public office."

I wish to lay down the honors and toils of even quasi party leadership and seek the repose of private life.

I therefore decline the consideration for the presidency. I do so with no doubt in my mind as to the vote of the state of New York, or of the Democratic party. But I believe that it is a renunciation of re-election to the presidency.

To the vote cast by my fellow citizens at my previous inauguration I am an affectionate recognition of the right of a people to direct their rulers—violated in my person—I have accepted as long a course of duty as I can be justified, by the vote, to exercise. My reasons cannot be enter into a new engagement which involves four years of constant toil.

The dignity of a position of public office is above a personal ambition, but it increases in me as illusion. Its value is as a great power for good to the country. I said four years ago, and repeat now, in other words: 'Knowing as I do, therefore, from fresh experience, how great the difference is between gliding through an official routine and wrestling with the forces and perils of a time, it is impossible for me to contemplate what may be to be done in the federal administration without an anxious sense of the difficulties of the situation. If I am invited by the suffrages of my countrymen to attempt this work, I shall endeavor, with God's help, to go wisely and firmly in the path of duty. I shall carry no resentment or remembrance of injuries, seek a reform of systems and policies, to which I shall cheerfully have sacrificed all that remained to me of heated personal ill will, is now I regard my strength."

My purpose to withdraw from further public service, and the grounds of it, were at that time well known to my friends. I said to them when at Cincinnati, though requesting my wishes, you yourself communicated to me an agreement by which friends of no public office should purpose a reference of my name for selection unconditionally.

That wise forbearance, my self-denial, nothing has occurred to weaken but every thing to strengthen, the considerations which induced my withdrawal from public life. To all who have addressed me on the subject, my intention has been frankly announced. Several of my most confidential friends, under sessions of their own names, have publicly stated my determination to be irrevocable. To the public opinion now to be considered the question is an event for which I have no responsibility. The appeal made to the people in 1880 was to their highest manhood, to serve them other than personal considerations, and would inspire a disposition to do anything desired if it were consistent with my judgment of duty.

I believe that there is no instrumentality in human society so potential as its influences upon manhood for the use of the governmental machinery for administering justice and for making and executing laws. Not all the colleges and institutions of private benevolence in which philanthropists may devote their lives, are so fruitful in benefits as the rescue and preservation of this party from the perversions that make it the instrument of conspiracy, fraud and crime against the most sacred rights and interests of the people.

For fifty years as a private citizen, never contemplating an official career, I have devoted at least as much thought and effort to the duty of influencing aright the action of the governmental institutions of my country, as to all other objects. I have never accepted official service, except for a brief period, for a special purpose, and I have always considered it to require from me that sacrifice of private preferences to the public welfare.

I undertook the state administration of New York because it was indispensable to me that way only could the executive power be armed on the side of the reformer, to which, as a public citizen, I had given three years of my life.

I accepted the nomination for the presidency in 1876 because of the general opinion that my candidacy would best present the issues of reform in which the Democratic majority of the people desired to have worked out in the National government as it had been in that of the state of New York. I believed that I had strength enough then to prevent the administration of the government of the United States, as a mere closing of my hand over the ground from which success failed to the same party. Though success to seek the repose of private life I never could have entered the great struggle of 1876 and 1877 with the spirit of a partisan, but with the deepest sense of my responsibility to the whole country. I entered upon the duties of the office of President with my feelings in engaging in it to those of a soldier entering battle. But LEE got within and the entire concentration of my powers to the public service.

Twenty years of continuous calumniation, under the demoralizing influences of party conflicts, and of the war, have, I believe, fixed the whole governmental system of the United States with the rancorous growths of false suggestions and corrupt practices. Powerful classes have come to regard these retreats in official abuses, and the moral standards of the people have been indurated. To redress these evils is a work of great difficulty and labor, and cannot be accomplished without the most energetic and efficient personal action on the part of the chief executive of the republic.

The canvass and administration which it is desired that I should undertake would embrace a period of nearly five years. Nor can I satisfy myself that I am free to shirk burdens. Three years of experience in the endeavor to reform the municipal government of the city of New York and two years of experience in the reform administration of the state of New York have made me familiar with the requirements of such a work.

At the present time, the considerations which, indeed any citizen is liable to become imperative. I ought not to assume a task which I have not the physical strength to carry through. To perform the administration of the federal government to make my own ideal, and to fulfill the just expectations of the people, would indeed portend, as they could alone accomplish the objects which the undertaking would involve. But, in my conviction of advancing years and declining strength, I feel no assurance of my ability to accomplish such objects. I am therefore constrained to say, decisively, that I cannot now assume the labors of an active canvass.

Understanding, as an ample assurance, that the views which I have expressed in these communications as finally for good and all, I am equally bound all words in my fellow-citizens who would assign me a task beyond my powers. I submit to the will of God in bowing my public career forever closed, neither the Democratic party nor the Republic for whom justice and party is the best guarantee, is now, or ever can be, dependent upon any one man. The nation abundantly yet grow in the path of a noble destiny.

Having given to their welfare whatever of health and strength I possess, and having received from that fortune, and having reached the term of my quantity for such labors as those which now demands, I feel entitled to the will of God in demanding my release and forever closed.

SAMUEL J. TILDEN.

Democratic Mugwumps.

NEW YORK, June 12.—The Tribune says: "The result of the visit of Mr. Daniel Manning, chairman of the Democratic state committee, to Mr. Samuel J. Tilden, at his country residence in Graystone, was to bring the representatives of the different Democratic organizations in the city, Mr. Manning declined to tell anything whatever that transpired between him and Mr. Tilden."

Free Comments.

NEW YORK, June 12.—The following are the comments of some of the morning papers:

The Times says: "It would be but a slight recognition of Mr. Tilden's motives and character to say that his act is an unselfish one. It is more than unselfish. In the present situation of affairs of the Democratic party it is not of great consequence who becomes its candidate, but the withdrawal of Mr. Tilden from the contest will be a serious misfortune. Even if they do not nominate a candidate they can vote for Blaine or Butler."

The Sun says: "In words that convey as well as words can the unalterable resolution of a mind lately in full possession, Mr. Tilden declines the nomination of four years ago to the Democratic party. The considerations that moved him then are those which now determine his conduct. If it was necessary for him to sacrifice what remains to him of health and life, but because he feels himself unable to undertake and perform the duties of the great trust, he declines the nomination of the party which twice voted for him by majorities of enormous size. The party stands ready to give him by its nomination."

From The World: "However this document may be accepted by the Democratic party it is certain to increase and intensify the esteem in which Mr. Tilden is held. Even when at Cincinnati, though requesting my wishes, you yourself communicated to me an agreement by which friends of no public office should purpose a reference of my name for selection unconditionally.

That wise forbearance, my self-denial, nothing has occurred to weaken but every thing to strengthen, the considerations which induced my withdrawal from public life. To all who have addressed me on the subject, my intention has been frankly announced. Several of my most confidential friends, under sessions of their own names, have publicly stated my determination to be irrevocable. To the public opinion now to be considered the question is an event for which I have no responsibility. The appeal made to the people in 1880 was to their highest manhood, to serve them other than personal considerations, and would inspire a disposition to do anything desired if it were consistent with my judgment of duty.

I believe that there is no instrumentality in human society so potential as its influences upon manhood for the use of the governmental machinery for administering justice and for making and executing laws. Not all the colleges and institutions of private benevolence in which philanthropists may devote their lives, are so fruitful in benefits as the rescue and preservation of this party from the perversions that make it the instrument of conspiracy, fraud and crime against the most sacred rights and interests of the people.

For fifty years as a private citizen, never contemplating an official career, I have devoted at least as much thought and effort to the duty of influencing aright the action of the governmental institutions of my country, as to all other objects. I have never accepted official service, except for a brief period, for a special purpose, and I have always considered it to require from me that sacrifice of private preferences to the public welfare.

I undertook the state administration of New York because it was indispensable to me that way only could the executive power be armed on the side of the reformer, to which, as a public citizen, I had given three years of my life.

I accepted the nomination for the presidency in 1876 because of the general opinion that my candidacy would best present the issues of reform in which the Democratic majority of the people desired to have worked out in the National government as it had been in that of the state of New York. I believed that I had strength enough then to prevent the administration of the government of the United States, as a mere closing of my hand over the ground from which success failed to the same party. Though success to seek the repose of private life I never could have entered the great struggle of 1876 and 1877 with the spirit of a partisan, but with the deepest sense of my responsibility to the whole country. I entered upon the duties of the office of President with my feelings in engaging in it to those of a soldier entering battle. But LEE got within and the entire concentration of my powers to the public service.

Twenty years of continuous calumniation, under the demoralizing influences of party conflicts, and of the war, have, I believe, fixed the whole governmental system of the United States with the rancorous growths of false suggestions and corrupt practices. Powerful classes have come to regard these retreats in official abuses, and the moral standards of the people have been indurated. To redress these evils is a work of great difficulty and labor, and cannot be accomplished without the most energetic and efficient personal action on the part of the chief executive of the republic.

The canvass and administration which it is desired that I should undertake would embrace a period of nearly five years. Nor can I satisfy myself that I am free to shirk burdens. Three years of experience in the endeavor to reform the municipal government of the city of New York and two years of experience in the reform administration of the state of New York have made me familiar with the requirements of such a work.

At the present time, the considerations which, indeed any citizen is liable to become imperative. I ought not to assume a task which I have not the physical strength to carry through. To perform the administration of the federal government to make my own ideal, and to fulfill the just expectations of the people, would indeed portend, as they could alone accomplish the objects which the undertaking would involve. But, in my conviction of advancing years and declining strength, I feel no assurance of my ability to accomplish such objects. I am therefore constrained to say, decisively, that I cannot now assume the labors of an active canvass.

OUTSIDE PARTY LINES.

Honest Men Anxiously Looking for Good Candidates.

Movements of the Massachusetts Independents—The Greenbackers Raise General Butler, who Promises a Reply.

ROCHESTER, June 12.—The mayors of two great cities were here yesterday, Mayor Hewitt, of New York, and Mayor Seth Low, of Brooklyn. Both of them were interviewed on politics. Mayor Edson said:

"I believe, and the expectations are, that the political parties will be so evenly divided as not for any personal reason to defeat any one named. I don't think there will be a Republican landslide. We have had enough of that. We have just now a chance to get a combination usually come to the support of the regular candidate.

"Of course the present dissatisfaction is more serious than usual. There will be many of the best men who will never support a party ticket. In this state, and in this combination, the success of the Independents will be clearer. Even if they do not nominate a candidate they can vote for Blaine or Butler."

In answer to the question:

"Do you think there is a possibility of the Democrats nominating Hewitt?"

He replied: "I am not the one to say. The nomination lies for governor in Massachusetts, but Massachusetts is one thing and all the states together another."

Mayor Low's opinion about the fun of independent voters, and Brooklyn's youthful mayor replied: "The time is fast approaching when the independent voters will be a strong element in politics, and will refuse to be controlled by party lines on national questions. The government of cities must be viewed from local standpoints. In Brooklyn, I think I can safely say, the Democrats will be in a majority of 10,000 on election day. This is more pronounced this year than it has ever been in the past. The day will come when this will be the case in many cities."

Mayor Low said he was not yet ready to deliver an opinion on Blaine as a candidate.

A Revolutionary Programme.

BOSTON, June 12.—The Transcript says: "The Independents propose a programme which shall revolutionize the Democratic party and result in an organization such as is capable of encouragement. They will ask the Democratic convention to declare for civil service reform, extending into every department of the government; for reforms to the extent of removing the burdens of war taxes; an honest currency, good the world over, and sound at home; for such purposes and wise and far-seeing, Mr. Tilden's position and character as leader in opposition to better advantages than in this letter, and it is in the completest sense a justification of the confidence reposed in him by his party."

From the Herald: "Mr. Tilden's letter to Washington's farewell address, says:

"We are in doubt whether to give most praise to the timeliness and wisdom of Mr. Tilden's letter, to the modesty and dignity of its tone, to the manliness and candor of its form. No American will doubt that in putting aside the duty which the people would impose upon him in spite of his physical infirmities he is actuated by the highest sense of duty which prevents him from attempting a task to which he was unequal. That the people will regret it, we have the assurance that we might expect from the old man who is honored by his countrymen with their supreme confidence, but compelled to lay down for ever his high trust."

"Mr. Tilden's letter, in itself a proof of an intellect unimpaired, will long be treasured by his countrymen as a specimen of American patriotism."

WASHINGTON, June 12.—The Post in its editorial comment to-day upon the fact of Mr. Tilden's withdrawal says that his positive announcement on June 3 that Mr. Tilden would not be a candidate before the Chicago convention, and would even accept the nomination, practically disposed of the matter, and confirms by Mr. Tilden's positive declination.

The Democratic field, The Post says, is now left clear to Bayard, Cleveland, Carlisle, Morrison and McDonald.

ANOTHER CAVE-IN.

Great Danger in the Lackawanna Mining District.

WILKESBARRE, June 12.—As was predicted, the earth has caved in and ruined 24 acres of colliery of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad, situated at Pole Hollow, Plymouth. There is further danger, causing more danger than Tuesday's disaster.

While a party of miners with their families were eating their breakfast, a loud rumbling noise, like that of distant thunder, was heard, and immediately the foundations of their houses began to crumble away and the dwellings themselves to turn over. Without waiting for their clothing the terrified men, women and children fled from the ill-fated spot to a place of safety.

The greatest excitement prevails, and the people in the vicinity have been warned to keep away from the scene of the disaster. Fully an acre of the south side of the street sunk and a water famine is imminent. The cave-in covers an area of two miles in circumference and every dwelling house also sunk about the basement floor, and is liable to fall into the mines, 400 feet below, as the least commotion of the earth's surface.

HURLED FROM A TRAIN.

A Philadelphian Roughly Treated by Three Tramps.

READING, June 12.—Three tramps on a coal train coming up from Pottstown to-night attempted to steal a ride. They were put on the train who was also stealing a ride. The stranger drew a revolver and shot one of the tramps dead. Seeing this the other two closed upon and grabbed the stranger, hurling him from the train. He tumbled headlong down a bank and was severely hurt. He was taken to the hotel here and cared for. He is Philadelphian, and a lady friend who was severely shot in the abdomen, was laid in a coal car until the train stopped, after his companion got over. The stranger left his companion and went to Pottstown, where he missed a regular passenger train at a point below Pottstown, and jumped on a coal train which was also stealing a ride. The Philadelphia and Reading Officers Boehm and Kerns chased the two tramps, but they jumped into the Schuylkill at Monocacy, swam across and escaped.

We Spend the Summer.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—The time of adjourning the present congress is fixed upon the 20th inst. is assured by old experienced members. FROM BEYOND THE SEAS

Dynastic and Discontent Everywhere Prevalent.

Anarchists Victorious Among Fleyton and Narvarry, Europe Better—Gen. Wolseley Cannot Succeed—Restoration of Liberty.

LONDON, June 12.—A hot and bitter campaign is in progress in Athlone, Ireland, over the election of successor to Sir John Lentaigne, the late Liberal member of Parliament. Both the Liberal and Tory parties have always been a wonderfully close one. In 1876 the vote was a tie and the election had to be decided by lot, which fell to Sir John, and in 1880 Sir John was elected by a majority of one vote only over Edward Shell, Home Ruler. To-day's contest for vacancy the Parnellites have put forward Mr. Richard Sheridan, brother of Mr. McCarthy, member of parliament for Longford. Ireland, and he is just now making a target for the shots of those from both the Liberal and Conservative parties. The latest device of his opponents is the publication of a pamphlet, which has been widely circulated in the constituency of late, and in which seeks to prove that the McCarthys, both Justin and son, are atheists and consumers of both the Catholic and Protestant religions.

The Jury Stampede.

DUBLIN, June 12.—The testimony in the Sheridan case was concluded to-day, and the case was committed to the jury. After an absence of several hours, during which time the crowd in the court room awaited the delivery of a verdict, a report was brought forward reported that the jury were unable to agree. They were accordingly discharged, and preparations for a new trial will be begun at once.

A Central Revolutionist.

LONDON, June 12.—President Strand, of the African society, writes to the British African Navigation company, stating that the society will make an attempt to levy duties on commerce along the frontiers, and will grant concessions to any nation recognizing the society's rights to its laws, and requesting their privileges. Consuls will be free between its territories and all the world.

A SON'S VENGEANCE.

Murder Following the Treatment of His Mother and Sister.

GREENSBURG, Pa., June 12.—The people of Westmoreland county are excited over a murder which they are already comparing to the Dr. Dodge affair. Louis McLelland, a young man belonging to one of the most prominent families of the county, recently married a New York city, where he had resided in the capacity of assistant manager of a southern road. His elder sister is the wife of ex-Lieut.-Gov. Latta; the other, Mrs. Kenney and husband, young women of twenty-four years, residing with their father and mother. Some time ago the younger daughter was married to a man named St. Clair, from whom she was divorced.

Since her return to her parents' home she has gone quietly into society, and Edward Kenney has been a constant visitor. They were soon together frequently, and the social acquaintance of the McLellands made Kenney's more noticeable. Shortly before young McLelland's return a coolness seemed to have developed between Kenney May and young Kenley, and the latter's visits ceased. Soon it was rumored that Kenney had married another lady friend of the McLelland family, another sister or daughter being spared, and that he had even gone so far as to write infamous letters regarding the scandals to E. B. McLelland, the father.

Louis McLelland on Wednesday night met Edward Kenley in Brown's drug store in this city, where the two were joined by that McLelland, in a towering rage, demanded of Kenley why the latter had circulated such scandals about his mother and sister. Kenley fled before McLelland could deal him a tremendous blow across the head with a cowhide, knocking him to the floor. He then rained blows over the prostrate man's arms and face. The most desperate efforts are being made to conceal the facts.

THE POTOMAC'S ARMY.

Boston Calls that Brought Back Old Memories.

BROOKLYN, June 12.—The annual public reception of the Army of the Army of the Potomac was held last night in the Academy of Music. There was an immense audience and the meeting resembled a Republican national convention. The stage was arranged so as to represent a camp scene and looked very natural, probably more so by the presence of the 165th Infantry which occupied the stage in uniform. Boynton, Members of the organization mounted guard, and paced the platform as in sentry duty.

Gen. Howard called the meeting to order and expressed his regret that Gen. Grant could not be present. Prayer was offered by the Rev. Isaac H. Foster, chaplain-in-chief of the army. Dodsworth's band then gave a collection of bugle calls, etc., such as are given in camp life.

Mayor Low delivered an address of welcome and spoke of the glorious record of the Army of the Potomac and of Gen. Grant as the hero of Appomattox. The soldiers cheered Grant's name during the remarks of Mayor Low. Following the remarks of Mayor Low, Sheldon Hall, who was a drummer boy picket duty, fell in a fainting fit, having become exhausted by the long march. He was carried out of the armory.

Gen. Newton responded to the address of Mayor Low.

An original poem was read by Mr. John Vaughn.

Gen. Horace Porter made the formal closing address.

NEW YORK, June 12.—At a meeting of the Society of the Army of the Potomac for 1884-5 the following officers were elected: President, Gen. U. S. Grant; treasurer, Gen. McMahon; secretaries, Gen. George E. Stephens and H. C. Wood.

Gen. Grant made a few remarks, returning thanks for the honor. The next meeting of the society will be held at Baltimore.

A Flight and a Mystery.

KANSAS CITY., Mo., June 12.—The disappearance of Sheldon, of this city, president of the Blue Springs (Mo.) Milling company, which was noted some weeks ago, has become more mysterious. Sheldon is a Congregationalist minister and is the man who when he disappeared there were rumors of shortage in his accounts. Mrs. Sheldon has since received two letters in a hand which she recognizes as her husband's—one from Kansas City and the other Blue Springs—in which Sheldon says he's held in durance by a party of members of the milling company, who claim a shortage of $5,000 in the settlement. Friends of Sheldon in England have referred the matter to the British government and the authorities have instructed the English consul at New York to investigate the matter. Letters of inquiry from the consul have been received here by the police authorities.

Members of the milling company deny all knowledge of Sheldon's movements, but express the opinion that he has gone to England.

Bustle in the Rapids.

PORTLAND, Ore., June 12.—Four men, Gen. W. Freeman, G. Merkle, Marks Caldwell and Gardner Caldwell, left Spokane Falls, Monday, in a row boat and started down Spokane river with the intention of descending the stream to Columbia. In attempting to run the famous Spokane rapids the boats capsized and all were thrown into the water, clinging to the boat for a time, and drifted a distance of two miles. The boat was finally swamped, and after wonderful danger the three men were thrown upon a large drift, almost chilled to death and exhausted by submersion. Gardner Caldwell was drowned. The body was not recovered. All the parties were old settlers. Two of the men are not expected to survive.

The Fire at St. Paul, Minn.

ST. PAUL, Minn., June 12.—Travellers are crowded to the last accommodations for them all to-day and hotel keepers are making extraordinary accommodations. Many are compelled to wait until a new depot can be built arrangements for which on a much larger scale than the old one is understood to be under way. The loss by the fire, which is $250,000, is well covered with insurance, all placed in Eastern companies, but the amounts and names of the companies cannot be learned owing to the safe not be opened, or Mr. Bronson, the president of the Union Depot company, returns from Montana.

Rather Cool About It.

CLEVELAND, O., June 12.—At the close of banking hours last evening George C. Gardner, cashier of the National Bank of Commerce, counted the $400,000 reserve fund of the bank and found $100,000 short. As Mr. Darrow, assistant cashier, is thought to be the guilty party, were the only employes of the bank that knew the safe combination, Gardner asked Stanley for an explanation. Stanley replied that Darrow had gone to Canada, taking the money and lost it in wheat speculation. Stanley has been arrested and locked up on a charge of embezzlement.

An Ex-Governor's Reception.

RICHMOND, Va., June 12.—Count Hardy Von Borke, the Prussian who fought for the Confederates, arrived in Richmond and was met at the depot by a committee of reception and escorted to a hotel, and was entertained in royal style last night.

HAPPY VASSAR GRADUATES.

The Young Ladies Astonish Their Teachers at Commencement.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 18.—This town did not rest any sensitive yesterday. It was commencement day at Vassar. Two hundred young ladies, in the purest cotton fabrics, stalled upon thrice as many visitors until the ladies alone were forgotten. Trains on the New York Central and West Shore brought many visitors during the morning, and the spacious buildings were filled with gay promenaders long before the hour of the opening exercises. They wandered through the hallways, gazed at the wonders of the laboratories and cabinets, stared at the remarkable telescope and read by the motion of the fannies of brides which hangs 400 young ladies supplied with hot cakes as fast as healthy appetites can consume them. Then, at 10 o'clock, the bell rang, the band played the march of the graduates, and the class of 1880 marched in.

The college alumnae occupied the tiers on either side of the graduating class, facing the platform upon which the trustees were in range, behind which the wearer reasted the loveliest flower.

President Caldwell delivered a short and appropriate prayer. Then came the music, the waving of a hundred fans, which fluttered like the wings of so many butterflies, followed, and the audience settled down for the exercises of the hour.

"The Theology of George Eliot" was the subject of the first essay. It was presented by Miss Kate Ainsworth Atwood, of Wyoming, England, and "Egypt for the Egyptians" were the subjects discussed by Miss Alice Blanchard and Miss May Amanda Chapman.

BROUGHT TO BAY.

Cincinnati's Criminal Lawyer in a Tight Place.

CINCINNATI, O., June 12.—T. C. Campbell, the criminal lawyer, whose methods laid bare much to light in Judge Hagans' days here, has been on trial since Monday before Judge Johnston, on a charge of attempting to bribe a juror who was summoned as a talesman in the case of Mrs. Mary Ann Hagans, wife of the late Judge Hagans, charged with the murder of Mrs. Kate Hagans, a relative of the family. Campbell was defended by Judge Hagans, one of the two vital points in the case. Judge Foraker is defending Campbell. It is thought that a disagreement of the jury is probable, and a conviction impossible. A year ago nothing but an acquittal was the thought of, it not being deemed possible that such a charge could be sustained against a man whose faculties for continuous delivery sort of evidence he wants here has long been the town talk.

NEW YORK, June 12.—Hatch & Foote, bankers and brokers, of 12 Wall street, who suspended during the recent panic, are negotiating for a quiet settlement with their creditors. The assets which were not liquidated to be placed in the hands of a trustee to dispose of them when the market improves. The members of the firm decline to give any particulars of the terms for publication until they have heard from all their creditors.

An Old Settler Gone.

Death of Isaac Cooper, Esq.

While Barney lived in northern Michigan, some of his northern Democratic friends and neighbors had asked him to run for the legislature, but Barney wrote a letter in reply stating that his political views would prevent him from being of any use to his district. After Barney had been defeated by the third party in Virginia, the Whigs published what purported to be lithographic copies of Barney's letter of acceptance of this nomination by Democrats.

In this letter he was made to say that he sympathized with the Democratic party and its aims. Copies were circulated by the thousand, and the effect was to hold the free soilers in the Whig line. Wright had been abroad, and he first heard of the letter from Daniel Webster, whom he met on his way to Boston. Wright at once said the letter was a forgery, but Webster maintained that it must be genuine. So confident was he of this that he bet Wright $50 (the blue blood) all said pounds, instead of dollars in those days) that Barney wrote the letter as it was published.

Wright asked the Whig leader what would convince him of the contrary, and Webster replied in a spirit of banter, "Get Barney's own signature. When Wright reached home he found a letter from Barney denying that he ever wrote the letter, and had been the victim of a trick. That letter was carried to Webster, but he insisted that Barney ought to send him a copy of the letter he did write. This was promptly done, and Wright, at a time, had Webster withdraw his statement as to belief in the genuineness of the letter, and gave Wright $200.

Wright said he paid to Ike Appleton to the amount of $300, and taking the money paid him by Webster he went to 16½ his note. He explained to Appleton how he came by the money. Appleton, on breaking into a laugh, said: "Thus is poetry good. This is my money. Some of my property made up a purse for Webster, and I put in this $300. Now half of the same money comes back to me in payment of another man's debt." But Webster and the other Whig leaders gave Wright the laugh, and the joke was the last he did not much of a figure in the campaign.

The Greatest of Newspaper Correspondents.

"CASS"—GEORGE ALFRED TOWNSEND.

The most continuous and continuously independent correspondent of American journalism in the country came from a quiet and overlooked nook, the Delaware state peninsula. He was born at Georgetown, Del., Jan. 30, 1841.

From Rev. Mary Mitchell Townsend, Wright inherited his historical curiosity and antiquarian enthusiasm. She was a great romantic collector. She was a great reader of old books, and formed dudded views upon them, and had a phenomenal memory. Through her the boy became a student of the Methodist Episcopal church, and after he was married, and by the time "Cass" was twelve years old Rev. Stephen Townsend was given a church at Philadelphia, where the boy attended one of the public schools and the other a journalist, and the father also graduated in medicine and philosophy, and combined practice with study and preaching. A gentle and positive, witty guide, ramblingminded, a lover of books and original research, quick intellectual sympathies and literary judgment. He never ceased to speak there which he did not comprehend himself.

Though he had published much while at school, he might never have entered a newspaper office but for the fact that he was known to the people through the position of school master. He was sent for by the Harding family the only witness to the tragedy of the Philadelphia Press he did more reporting than all his reporters and more traveling than all its correspondents. Frederick Hudson, of the New York Herald, heard of him and in time sent him to the war.

After seeing McClellan's and Pope's campaigns, Mr. Townsend resolved to take a rest and study. He went to Europe at the age of 21. On the other side, without introductions of any nature, he rapidly made his way into the periodical press. The Cornhill Magazine, Chambers' Journal and other periodicals published his articles. He wrote a book in England, and then published it in this country, under the title of "Campaigns of a Non-Combatant." He was in the British Museum library every day as soon as it was opened, and lived in Bedford Square. Hyde Park he generally read in the St. Genevieve library, near the Sorbonne. He went to Holland, Germany and Rome, and returned home in 1865.

A few months in the New York periodical press again electrified him with the contact of prying fanaticism and small rivals and found himself in Baltimore in the Grant campaign from Petersburg, for The New York World, and closed the war with the best battle writing ever known in this country. Absolutely lively, unaided and unknown, he not only beat in the descriptions, but in time, and got the news in first. It was said at that time "Glenn he was a whole staff, and in a whole staff alone."

His letters at the close of the war, widely copied, and for the first time over the left coast, gave the people their first small knowledge of the writer, who was destined to be known for several years and went to Europe in the summer. He married in December, 1868.

Perhaps the most newspaper gold mark his existence that money he can't you was to be in debt on a false position. Mr. Townsend refused the position of editorship of the World and the Herald paid him a salary of $ week of twenty thousand dollars and never dropped. In 1868 he settled in Washington city, and there showed the full heart of his capacity and influence by writing daily letters for a newly founded paper. Drawing unusual interest on public men and movements. Taking no salaries, he wrote per column, and his choice of campaigns, and published books in the midst of extraordinary newspaper productiveness. The signature of "Cath" he adopted in 1868, from the desire to have his name less conspicuous. He was the author of the Impeachment History, overpowerment who ever lived at the national capital, and extended the work all over the country, often speaking and writing for days. He was the Lowery Lizards in North Carolina, The Pope County Emeute in Arkansas, etc. He did the great national conventions which nominated Hayes and Tilden and pacification of the country was free from his feet. Men he studied in their homes, as Audubon or Wilson studied the habits of the birds.

In 1874 Mr. Townsend considered that commercial and financial life had been overlooked by him, and he went to New York to reside, where he has ever since been. His latest book was an American Romance, published in May, by Harper & Bros., called "The Entailed Hat, or Patty Conner's Times."

Prides of character, the instantaneous seeing of the main point of a piece of work and the grouping of its parts to produce the fullest and plainest impression, indifference to public clamor, ready sympathy for a fallen man or one oppressed by numbers, a full mind and a well known literary style, primary delight in the ludicrous into men, an abstract personal instinct to discern and a most unconscious one to express, constitute portions of the delicate and effective material upon which Mr. Townsend works. He seems like one playing with the newspapers for the uses of some profession into which they may be absorbing him.

A Distinguished Lawyer.

CHARLES O'CONOR.

The father of Charles O'Conor, belonged to the Irish gentry, whose blood he claimed from the last of the Irish Kings in a very good dispute. He inherited a handsome fortune, which he brought with him to this country from Ireland in the opening of the present century. Being more charitable than prudent, he was not long here before he lost all, thus preventing his son Charles, who was born in New York city, April 22, 1804, from having the benefit of a liberal education. It was his ambition to absorb everything. Young Charley learned all he could whenever he could get a spare hour. His mother, who died when he was but twelve years old, probably taught him the primary English branches, and from his father he received the rudiments of the Latin. At fifteen, though his resources were such as scarcely to afford him a book to learn from, he was admitted to the bar at the age of 20 years.

Mr. O'Conor's father, a political exile, had his retirement he was remarkable for his humility, with no desire for notoriety; he never lectured or made a public exhibition of himself without the greatest reluctance, consequently he avoided politics.

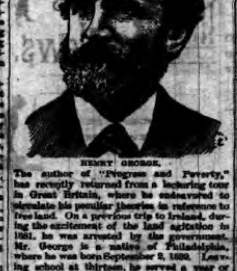
Being a member of the New York state constitutional convention in 1846, to revise the constitution, he opposed the section of the constitution relative to the separate property of married women; now, in view of the fact of seven-eighths of the property of all kinds between man and wife, it will be seen the predictions he made then have been but too literally fulfilled.

Mr. O'Conor made himself decidedly unpopular in the north during the war, through his espousal of the cause of the slaveholder. This no one knew better than he. The Tribune, the Times and the Evening Post, with even the Lieutenant will case, the Madison Journal and the Tribune divorce case, were greatly the cause of the prejudice which he aroused.

His last prominent appearance before the public was in 1872, in the defense of Lyman Walworth for the killing of his father, and the prosecuting counsel in the Tweed ring suits.

Mr. O'Conor was in religion a conscientious Catholic. He recently retired to the Island of Manhattan, where he died on May 18.

The Apostle of Free Land.



HENRY GEORGE.

The author of "Progress and Poverty," has recently returned from a lecturing tour in Great Britain, where he endeavored to circulate his peculiar theories in reference to the land question. A portion of his time during the excitement of the land agitation in 1881, he was arrested by the government. Mr. George is a native of Philadelphia, where he was born September 2, 1838. Leaving school at thirteen, he served a year or two in a counting house, then went to sea, and after roving for a time finally settled in California in 1858, and entered the printing office. In 1867 he became a reporter on the newly-started San Francisco Times and six months later was promoted to the position of editor. After a year he resigned to become editor of the Sacramento Reporter, an editor. The San Francisco Post was his next effort, which he started in 1871, but lost control of in 1873. His book "Progress and Poverty" was published during portions of the years 1877, 1878 and 1879. In 1881 he published a pamphlet entitled the "Irish Land Question," which was followed by a visit to Ireland, during which he was the world over. Mr. George is now a resident of New York.

N. Y. Graphic: "Will you have a cream-puff?" said the waiter to the fat man. "Yes," replied the fat man, and he ordered the pastry without the slightest hesitation. He ordered the pastry without the slightest hesitation. He ordered the pastry without the slightest hesitation. He

—Mr. Frank S. Hartz, an actor with one of Dion Boucicault's stock companies and a somewhat expert tennis player, a son of Bret Harte, visited the new opera house yesterday and says that the stage is as large as the majority of those in New York theatres. It is forty feet deep, by thirty-nine feet in width at the proscenium. There are to be 18 sets of scenery.

—Engine Co., No. 2, are getting ahead. The engine boys s by constant practice are getting the thing down fine, yesterday 19 seconds was the quickest time in which the company with their new patent harness could get ready for a fire. Now the time is reduced to 15 seconds. Last evening when the town clock struck seven the horses mistook it for the fire alarm going, and tried to get down to business at once.

Fire Board Meeting.

The special meeting of the Board of Managers of the Plainfield Fire Department was held in the parlors of Alert Hose Co., No. 1, last evening. There were present, President VanWinkle, and Messrs. Morris, Cutter, Livingston, and Jones. Absent, Mr. Depew.

The meeting was for the purpose of examining the Assessor's books, which were found to be correct and Mr. Livingston moved that they be accepted. Carried.

A resolution was then offered by Mr. Morris that Mr. Vincent L. Frazee be appointed as Collector of fire taxes for the Board, his compensation to be the same as any township collector. Carried, all voting aye but Mr. Jones, who voted nay.

Mr. Morris moved that they retain as Counsel for the Board the present incumbent, Mr. Wm. B. Maxson. Carried.

Mr. Morris claimed that according to the statutes the Board of Managers of the Fire Department have no power whatever to offer a reward for the discovery of incendiaries.

The meeting then adjourned to Tuesday evening, June 24th.

The Methodist Festival.

The lecture room of the Methodist Episcopal Church was filled last evening on the occasion of the strawberry and ice cream festival given by the Ladies' Aid Society. The ladies had evidently taken great care to make the festival a success in every way. The decorations were something fine. The windows were banked with flowers and ferns, the lemonade was most delightfully arranged in one corner, the flower tower occupied the centre of the room, several stands for fruit and other delicacies held forth on the sides, and the refreshment rooms which were crowded during the evening took the place of the infant class room and the parlor. The music consisting of a violin, cornet, and piano was from New York, and added no little enjoyment to the occasion. The ladies undoubtedly cleared a handsome sum by the festival.

The Theory and the Practice.

Sunday afternoon, the Salvation army was holding an out-door meeting at the corners of Irving and Hamilton streets, and Central avenue, in Rahway. The hymn they had selected was, "We'll stand the storm" etc. One verse was sung, and just as they began the second verse a thunder shower began. The rain was a little more than the salvationists could stand, and the result was that they had a regular go-as-you-please race for their barracks on Seminary street.

The Cornet Band Festival.

The Plainfield Cornet Band will hold a strawberry and ice cream festival at Cutter's Hall, on next Thursday evening. Tickets entitling the holder to berries and cream have been placed at the low price of twenty-five cents. First class string and brass music will be furnished.

Hop at the Park House.

The opening hop of the season at the Park House will be given next Thursday evening. Invitations are now being sent out for the event, Mr. Johnson, the proprietor, will spare no pains to make the occasion an enjoyable one to all.

Falling From a Roof.

Mr. Charles Graves, the sinter, while slating a roof on Mr. Hayslger's place on Union avenue, on Wednesday, fell about twelve feet. No bones were broken, but he was injured internally, probably about the spine. Mr. Graves is at present confined to his bed, but thinks the injury will soon pass away.

Run Over by a Train.

Between one and two o'clock this morning a man named Edward Toms of Rahway, aged 21 years, was run over at Rahway by an East bound freight train. His left leg and right arm were severed from his body, and the doctors say he cannot live. It is supposed that he was walking on the tracks.

Reform Club Notes.

At the business meeting of the Reform Club held last evening it was announced that all the money necessary for the purchase of the old church building had been raised, and that the deed would be transferred at ten o'clock to-day. Sufficient money was also said to be on hand to pay for the furnishing of the building, but about $2,500 more will be necessary for the repairs needed. A resolution was passed authorizing 2000 circulars to be sent to the people of Plainfield asking for this amount. It is hoped that it will be speedily subscribed in order that the Reform Club may have a home.

A very beautiful picture of the "Old Oaken Bucket" hanging by the well was presented to the club by Mrs. Chauncey Schaffer.

On Sunday evening the meeting will be held in the Methodist Episcopal Church. The business meeting next Thursday evening will be held in the lecture room of the same church.

A delegation from the club will go to Metuchen on Sunday and conduct a meeting there.

Not the Man.

A couple of young fellows were crossing Park avenue in the vicinity of North avenue last evening when one of them was suddenly saluted with a good sound rap on the head from a knob-headed cane. He was just gathering his senses together preparatory to laying the hitter out, when the latter fellow came to the rescue with an explanation. He said that a fellow was just laying for him about when they were and that he had determined to get the best of him so he cracked over the first fellow that came along in order not to miss his man. The injured young man, hardly satisfied, departed for the nearest drug store to take out the knockout that was beautifully settling about his eyebrows.

AFTER TILDEN, WHAT?

Who Shall be the Nominee of the Democratic Party?

Everybody's Opinion, with Various Reasons—Expressions Unique and Commonplace, of Every Sort. Friendly Expressions.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—Among the Democratic leaders there it is conceded that the declination of Mr. Tilden is final. Hon. S. S. Cox, when approached by a friend this morning, declined to discuss the matter, and subsequently issued the following statement:

"It remains one of the schoolgirl's definitions of chaos: 'A great big lump of nothing, and no place to put it.'

The Post refers to Mr. Randall's candidacy in terms not only pointed, but emphatic. Talking about the Republican platform, which Mr. Randall characterizes as a masterpiece of cowardice, "it leaves no way to induce Mr. Randall to support it? We shall really be suspicious of the Democratic platform if it does not contain a Randall plank, and not yet we know that its declaration in favor of tariff reform will be as strong as words can make it. But what will the honest Democrats of Pennsylvania do when Mr. Randall's name is deliberately presented to them as a proper candidate for the presidency?"

Senator Morgan, of Alabama, Senator Jones, of Florida, and Representatives Tucker, of Virginia, Farley, of California and Cassidy, of Nevada, are conspicuous in praise of Senator Bayard's candidacy. They urge that he is a great statesman, thoroughly fundamental in the roots of the country, and would certainly command the respect and careful thought of every honest elector. They say that his Dover speech has been for a score of years misunderstood, and that a perusal of it will show that it is in fact a calm, all double and argument as to its candid patriotic motives. Occasionally a far southern or western member of congress, who has met Mr. Cleveland during the past few days, expresses the opinion that Grover Cleveland would make a good race for the White House. They urge his terrible majority over Folger.

It is whispered about the lobbies of the Arlington and Willard's that ex-Mayor Edward Cooper, of New York city, has his down here fishing a small boom of his own. The ex-mayor was circulating about pretty freely, and he gave out that the object of his visit was to confer with the latter's tariff measure, which is under consideration in the ways and means committee room. It is stated that Cooper is working, not for himself, but for some one else. He was down here thinking a small boom of his own. The ex-mayor was circulating about pretty freely, and he gave out that the object of his visit was to confer with the latter's tariff measure, which is under consideration in the ways and means committee room. It is stated that Cooper is working, not for himself, but for some one else. He was down here thinking a small boom of his own.

Dispatches from every state and all principal cities deplore the letter. While it was feared that something of a like nature would be received, it was still hoped that it would be less decisive in tone.

Mr. Edward McPherson, secretary of the Republican congressional committee, speaking from his standpoint, says it must be pleased with the letter. He voices the general sentiment of the Republicans in Washington on the subject when he says: "Tilden is the only man who could receive the vote of the Democratic convention without more or less sensational opposition."

All Sorts of Opinions.

NEW YORK, June 13.—The following are some of the most mixed opinions of politicians on Mr. Tilden's letter.

County Clerk Keenan declared Cleveland to be the most available man after Tilden, and this opinion was echoed by ex-Assemblyman Maurice B. Flynn, who said that twenty-five per cent. of the Republicans with whom he had conversed recently declared their preference for Cleveland over Blaine.

A legislative pair—and that means the equal of three of every other kind—gave their opinions on lower Broadway. Said Hon. James Oliver, of Paradise Park:

"Cleveland is our only hold now; with him we can win easily."

"It's quite a small bet," put in Hon. Edward Moore, of Staten Island, "that Flower will have the state convention, which means that he will be New York's choice at Chicago."

Collector Robertson, when approached on the question of the letter, said: "I have not read it, and I don't intend to. I am more than a cursory perusal. It appears, however, to be a carefully prepared document, and is evidently final." Mr. Tilden, doubtless, means what he says, and, while he speaks like a statesman, he evinces the astuteness of the trained politician. Unlike the proverbial enthusiast of his kind, of following the dead horse, he sees the fatality of attempting a hopeless campaign against such a man as Blaine, who will certainly be elected now, and, I doubt not, would be in any event. But the letter, considered aside from these reflections, is the writing of a statesman."

Col. Fred. Grant, assistant treasurer of the United States, said: "I am a Republican—a black Republican, if you please—but I am willing to admit that Mr. Tilden is a great man. His ability and sagacity have been shown in many ways during his long and eventful political career. He has the respect and admiration of all honorable men who are not of his political creed, I have read his letter, and I regard it as a masterly production. When he writes that he submits to the will of God and to the public, his career forever closed he means what he says. No amount of persuasion can bring him out of his retirement."

Mayor Grace said: "I consider Mr. Tilden's letter a magnificent one, such as might have been expected from such a man. It is the most elegant piece of English I read in the morning newspapers. The White House is open to any good Democrat."

Ex-Senator Thomas J. Creamer said: "Mr. Tilden is an abler man than most people think. He will be 70 years old next September. While he can write an admirable letter, it is better for the Democrats that they put in nomination a live, energetic Democrat against the very lively card the Republicans have nominated."

Commissioner Sidney H. Nichols said: "I regret exceedingly that Mr. Tilden should have resigned. I was and am prepared to support any candidate put in nomination by the Democratic convention at Chicago with money and influence, who can get the most and wherever he may come from. I think Tilden would have gone in with a vote that would have astonished the country. The ticket must be headed by a man from this state."

Ex-ex-Senator Maxwell said: "Cleveland is now the man. To a certain extent he is the legatee of Mr. Tilden, and I am morally certain that he will be nominated."

ALEXANDRIA VIEWS.

My own personal preference would be either Bayard or Cleveland.—Thomas Sheets.

That was a wonderfully able letter of Mr. Tilden's, and I'm very sorry he ever wrote it. If he had been elected, I believe he would have done before it was begun. Bayard is my next choice, but Payne and Cleveland are good men. I am for Bayard first.—Judge Underwood.

I am for Flower or Payne.—Patrick Keeher.

I am in favor of Thurman and Flower. That ticket would win the race.—M. F. Mc. Loughlin.

Ex-Senator Grady said: "We've been expecting it, and to me it is no surprise. It is timely, and no doubt the result of mature thought, and many sleepless nights. I will not be a candidate. 'Twas never certain that he would be, but as to who will succeed to the political cloak of the statesman of Gramercy Park, I cannot say. It may be Cleveland; it may be Flower; it may be one of a great many Democratic statesmen; any one of whom could easily be elected, and who would fill the office with credit. Mr. Tilden's letter is a masterpiece, and his strength has been silently but surely growing."

When Sheriff Davidson was asked if he had read Mr. Tilden's letter, he said:

"Yes, I have read it, and am sorry that Mr. Tilden has such cogent reasons to urge for relegating himself to private life, for in every respect we have found him entitled to our confidence. The letter is probably the last public document of a great statesman, and is the characteristic production of a great man. He has been the leader of the reform wing of the Democratic party, and is a great many Democrats who believe that such a ticket as Cleveland and Hoadley would win."

At his office in the postage place Hon. Roswell P. Flower, the man of all others in the city most peculiarly affected by Mr. Tilden's valedictory, was found by a reporter. He had received a telegram from Senator Charles G. Cowsell to express this opinion:

"Like every paper emanating from Mr. Tilden, his letter published this morning is a clear, comprehensive production. It comes from a man of wonderful ability—a man who has been terribly wronged by the Republican party. It is cause for the most profound regret that Mr. Tilden cannot finish what I feel a movement to right that wrong."

Senator Cornell said that there was no question in his mind but that he could construct that Mr. Tilden had selected his heir. "I believe," continued the senator; "that the state outside of New York city is very largely in favor of Mr. Flower as the presidential candidate."

"That the letter is a masterpiece is as unquestionable as that it is a finality," said Mr. Cahill, the late Hon. Augustus Schell's successor on the state committee. "From a friend of mine, who saw Mr. Tilden on Wednesday last, I learn that the grand old statesman's mental condition is as reflected in the letter. Who will be his legatee? Speculation on that subject just at present must be purely guesswork."

The acknowledged leader of the County Democracy, Commissioner Hubert O. Thompson, spoke thus: "Every line of the letter is full of meaning. It is the last of the documents ever written. As to the succession in leadership I speak for myself only when I declare very strongly in favor of Gov. Cleveland for the nomination. I would be satisfied in his interest and to throw all the influence I can exert on the nominee of the County Democracy and on the delegates at Saratoga in his favor."

Mr. John E. Develin, chairman of the County Democracy county committee, spoke for himself and his friends when he said: "I am in favor of Cleveland because he was the only man who could beat Blaine in this state, notwithstanding all the talk about the Plumed Knight's weakness here.

Butler Would be Friendly.

NEW YORK, June 12.—The Star publishes the following letter, said to be in the handwriting of Mr. John W. Seymour, who had written: "I want you to run for the presidency, with or without a nomination. The only platform your record."

June 8, 1884.

My Dear Sir: I have received your very courteously kind note and while I have to pass by many unanswered in the pressure upon my time, yet I snatch a moment to give you a deserved reply.

I thank you first for your expressions of regard, I take leave to say that there is one view in which I think my possible election to the presidency, of which you speak, at this time, would be inopportune. I would, though running upon the Democratic ticket, or, in any event, as a Democrat with my views, stand but little chance to be Democratic electors. In regard to the Democratic party measure subjects, I should receive a fair, would believe, a very large colored vote at the south. The colored men know me. I have commanded their confidence, and of them, as soldiers, so that my election as a Democrat would wipe out the color line at the south by bringing the two races together in a political band, and this I do not believe to be a very great desideratum, and would be the greatest service to the country, in a matter of which I could not myself reap.

The Democratic party of the south would be obliged to acknowledge me as a Democrat, the colored men would know me as a Democrat, and I should be nominated and elected, as that I can't see why even as firm a Republican as yourself might not feel justified, as you say you would do, in voting for me for president. Thanks, I am, very truly, your friend and servant,

BENJAMIN F. BUTLER.

John W. Seymour, Esq., New York City, New York.

A Pension Better Than a Husband.

NEWPORT, June 12.—The divorce case on trial in the supreme court at Providence, R. I., the divorce case of Mary E. Stockett, alias Wright, vs. Jeremiah Stockett. This is a petition for a decree of divorce. The petitioner was a soldier's widow, drawing a pension, and married in this city the respondent, who was a colored pastor residing in Providence, and married her for a single man. By this marriage she has lost her right to draw the pension, and now, as the petitioner alleges, the respondent has a living wife, to whom he was married long previous to the pretended marriage with herself, she has petitioned to have the marriage set aside and declared void, so that the payment of the pension may be resumed. Heard in part, and further hearing postponed to enable the petitioner to obtain satisfactory proof of the two marriages.

Hear-Downs.

CONCORD, Mass., June 12.—Samuel Bowles, of Springfield, Republican, was married this evening to Elizabeth, daughter of Judge H. Rockwood Hoar, ex-congressman and attorney general in President Grant's first cabinet. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Grindall Reberts. A reception was held at the residence of the ex-attorney general. The house was illuminated throughout and was a field of roses. There were 1,100 invitations. Among the guests were some of the leading lights in literature, arts and politics. Mrs. William M. Evarts was present and Gen. George F. Hoar and family.

GEN'S LABOR BOOM.

New York Workingmen Name Him for President.

The Massachusetts Statesman Declines—John Swinburne Candidate—The Democratic Platform and Resolutions.

NEW YORK, June 12.—A meeting, pursuant to a call made by a body of workingmen at a gathering held a week ago at No. 83 First place, was held last evening at Clarendon hall to declare for Gen. Benjamin F. Butler's candidacy as president. Hand bills were circulated, at the top of which was a picture of a spade, and the words "Labor Reform" and "Butler the coming president." "He will vote the coming president." "He will vote the spade if he is elected." It was essentially a meeting of workingmen, among whom were Mr. William McCabe, of the Workingmen's Union; Richard Morrell, of the Workingmen's Union; Dr. J. E. McGuire, Chris Malcom, of Bricklayer's Union; J. Langan, of Stonecutter's Union; John Durns, of Painter's Union; H. Weston, Henry Hoffman, of Cigarmakers' Union No. 6; William Mendenham, of Newark; Robert Blissel, John W. Brown, of the Tinroofers' Union; John McClelland, Fred Haller and many others, all of whom spoke.

Mr. Sylvester Sullivan, of Bricklayers' union No. 4, was elected chairman. He had always like Butler, been a Democrat; but when a question arose in which the party passed to stick to principle. Of all men, Butler had shown himself to be a true Democrat, and he urged the delegates of New York to throw their influence in favor of a man who had shown himself to be essentially the workingman's friend. Butler had sustained Fernando Wood's "veto power" by issuing a proclamation twenty-two years ago in the city of New Orleans that no widow of any soldier in the Union army would pay taxes for a period of twenty months.

Louis F. Post announced himself a Jeffersonian Democrat. He could not say that he was "inflated" to-night, but he could say that he was "deflated" when Hon. Benjamin F. Butler had. (Applause.) But the stories had all been washed away like the water off a duck's back. The speaker had the pleasure of witnessing the last election in Butler's Indianapolis, and it was by the ensh-in of the "spoon" story that Butler's friends would go to victory. He eloquently reviewed the financial condition of the country, because interest at which the money was borrowed by the government to carry on the war. They began by saying that money in the vaults which they should be counted it. But the monopolists wanted "hard money," and that was still the cry. He condemned the national banking system, which, he said, cost the country $10,000,000 a year, and explained its method of operation.

Of the Democratic party he declined to speak until after the convention. The platform of the Republican party looked like good eating, but he was afraid a good deal of it was egg shell. He charged Cleveland with going back on the Democracy. He claimed that the Greenback party had done more than any other party had dared to do, for they had nominated for president a man who had fought for the Union on the one side, and for vice-president a man who had fought for the Confederacy. They could well afford to shake hands across the bloody chasm.

Mr. Benjamin F. Bowen, editor of The Labor Advocate, Scranton, Pa., said he had worked for Butler in 1878, and in the Butler clause of this country, and on behalf of Greenback principals. [Applause.] They were on the point of pivotal crisis which would turn the scale in the history of this country. If the working people, by a system of unification, realized their own strength, they could elect their own president. [Applause.] The time had arrived when it was necessary to hurl invective at monopolies, but it had come when the workingmen must unite. They could make it a solid phalanx, and practically demonstrate that they were the government itself.

Robert Blissett said that he had made up his mind to vote for Butler. He was no politician again, but when Benjamin F. Butler's name was mentioned, and afterwards contrasted with others, he could not help throwing his influence in that direction.

Professor Cushman sang a stirring Butler campaign song entitled "Turn the Rascals Out," to the tune of "Old Brown's Body," in which the audience joined. After a concluding speech by Mr. William McCabe, in which he presented plans for a campaign organization, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That we are resolved to vote for Butler.

Resolved, That we will do our utmost to have him elected President.

German Reform.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., June 12.—German society in this city to-day was disturbed by the editorial announcement in Der Herald, the leading German paper in the Northwest, that it would not support the Blaine and Logan ticket, and that in the event of the nomination of either Chandler or Logan by the Democrats it would support such a ticket, without prejudice to a return to its allegiance to the Republican party in future campaigns. Dr. Rellner, editor of Der Herald, said to-night that he believed that this view represented the sentiments of the great mass of German Republicans.

New Banks in Newark.

NEWARK, N. J., June 12.—Two new banks for savings have been organized here, one under the name of the Security Savings bank, of which Thomas B. Peddie, Dr. H. Thomas, Thomas Dunn, Thomas Hayes, Jr., Long, Benjamin Allen, John D. Harrison, J. Frank Fort, James N. Arbuckle, John Dreyer, Edward Spencer, Charles M. Thebaud, Oscar D. McCutchen and Sylvester A. Battin are the incorporators, and the other is the Franklin Savings institution. Its security bank, Jersey City, will continue the business of Daniel Dodd's bank. The chancellor should decline to reopen the doors of the suspended concern.

Irreconcilables.

BOSTON, Mass., June 12.—A call signed by 2,000 Republicans who declare that they refuse to vote the Blaine and Logan ticket is published this morning, for a meeting at Young's hotel at 4 o'clock this afternoon, to which opposition societies among the signers are Chas. R. Codman, who presided at the last Republican state convention, ex-Congressman Henry L. Pierce, who was a delegate to Chicago, William Endicott, Samuel Hoar, and Prof. William Everett. The names of many prominent citizens, bankers, merchants and shippers appear in the list.

The President's Movements.

NEW YORK, June 12.—President Arthur, accompanied by Secretary Lincoln and Congressman Burleigh, arrived at the Fifth Avenue hotel last night from Washington. The president leaves this morning for West Point, where he will be a guest at the Academy commencement exercises. He will return to this city in the evening and remain till Monday, when he goes to Washington. The president declined to talk on politics.

HERCULEAN MISS FORET.

The Girl of Phenomenal Strength on Exhibition.

WASHINGTON, June 13.—In response to an invitation from the parents of the so-called Georgia prodigy Frank Hilgard and Taylor, of the Smithsonian institution, a private exhibition was given at the Metropolitan hotel, for the purpose of witnessing an exhibition of the powers of the young woman. It is claimed for Miss Hurst that she is able to toss cats at will nervous strength sufficient to overcome the efforts of the strongest man.

The exhibition was in the presence of Senator Mason, Congressmen Reagan, of Georgia; Congressman Wheeler and wife, Judge Harris, of Virginia; Richard Townsend, of Indiana, and other well known people in Washington politics and society. The result of the performance was sufficiently mystifying to make Miss Hurst very popular with the spectators, after the new and inexplicable.

In the clear light of a blazing chandelier, in the presence of about fifty watchful people, the little Georgia girl showed the full presence of many curious strength. With her hands resting lightly upon the handle of an umbrella held by a stout young man, and using the speaking end as a pole to shoot the umbrella through space by a simple exercise of her will. Congressman Reagan, of Georgia, who is a very powerful man, tried to hold the umbrella while Miss Hurst contested her hands lightly upon it. The result was forced down in spite of the most violent struggles of the man. The umbrella point was then about two inches from the floor. "Now push the chair down to the floor," cried Father Hurst. ——r. Rose changed his position somewhat and Miss Hurst performed the feat without moving her arms at the elbow. LILIAN SPENCER'S SAD STORY.

Her Life Threatened—Her Money Spent in Intemperance.

TRENTON, June 13.—In the divorce suit of Lillian Spencer, the actress, against her husband, Edward Clayburg, Mrs. Clayburg has filed a bill of particulars, telling what she expects to prove on the trial of the case. She says:

"My trouble with Clayburg began in the spring of 1880. At that time my husband threatened my life. I was then living my own living and his too. This was about twelve weeks after our marriage. I was obliged not only to keep myself, but was obliged to keep him in his extravagance and display, and consequently at the end of that season at the Madison square theatre all my earnings were spent. He refused to give me the proceeds of an engagement here in Pittsburg shortly after that.

"I was compelled to leave home after this, although in poor health. On my friends interfering with his brutal conduct, he threatened to shoot me or anybody else who interfered, and said that he would leave me only over my dead body. He followed me to New York with him, and he informed me that all communication with my family must cease, and afterwards he intercepted all letters and telegrams sent to me. When I was there a few weeks old he told me to "get out and go home as soon as I liked.

"While I was with the 'White Slave' company he traveled with me, and collected my salary, and out of $170 a week sometimes only handed me $2. My child was with my mother, and I gathered together $90 to send to my nurse. He discovered that I had sent it by express, and demanded the receipt. When I refused he drew his revolver and watch, and gave me two minutes to produce the receipt, or die. As I feared losing my position, and was greatly in need of money, I let the matter pass at the time."

It is also charged that Clayburg used his wife's money for all kinds of dissipation.

DYNAMITE AT KEY WEST.

A Cuban Provided with Material for Its Manufacture.

KEY WEST, Fla., June 13.—Upon the arrival of the Mallory line steamer from New York, Federico Gil Marrero was arrested on a charge of having explosives in his possession. While the quarantine boats the Mallory steamers have not come to the wharf, but anchor at the quarantine ground, and the passengers and freight are brought ashore in boats. Upon Marrero's stepping into the boat he was arrested by the United States marshal and lodged in jail. The information in the case was probably received from officials in New York.

Marrero is a resident of Key West. He went to New York a few weeks ago, and his mission was evidently known through detectives. Upon searching his baggage fuse was found, detonating caps and books of instruction upon the manufacture of dynamite. The articles were submitted to an expert, an officer of the United States frigate Galena, and the conclusions arrived at were that Marrero had the articles and books of the instruction for making dynamite and such other articles to be used in connection with it as could not be made here. Marrero was arraigned before Commissioner Locke and held until $2,000 bail. He is a Cuban, and affected not to speak English until the officers commenced to search his baggage, when he exclaimed: "I did not think that baggage was searched here, coming from an American port." The vigilance of the officials has doubtless caused the dynamiters to pursue this course, to import materials separately and manufacture dynamite, etc., here.

Trial Trip of a New Motor.

NEW YORK, June 13.—Yesterday morning a trial trip of the new motor of the Pneumatic Tramway Engine company was made on Seventh avenue, between First and Nineteenth streets. Mr. Edwards, the secretary of the company, and a number of friends who are interested in the success of the enterprise, occupied seats in the car. The trip was made in ten minutes. Each day a trip of this motor will be made on Seventh avenue, and as soon as it gets in thorough working order Mr. William Richardson, the president of the Atlantic Avenue Railroad company, will give permission to the tramway company to use all his tracks in the city. The building at the corner of Seventh avenue and Fourteenth street, where it is at present located, was crowded with a number of gentlemen, who expressed their opinion on the new motor very freely.

Reluctant Mr. Rae.

QUEBEC, June 13.—Yesterday having been a legal holiday, the Rae case stands adjourned till this afternoon. The motion made to take it to Montreal will be then decided. There are no special new features in connection with the case, although it is reported that, if unsuccessful in getting the case to Montreal for trial, the prosecution will abandon it and throw the onus on the Canadian government. This is given color to by the fact that no witnesses or evidence lawyers been brought on. The story about the case assuming international importance is looked upon here as childish. Even the American consul is without instructions from the government on the matter, which is a pretty sure indication that the Washington cabinet has satisfied itself there is no case for extradition.

CONVENTION CHARACTERS.

JOHN R. HENDERSON.

Mr. Henderson, the permanent chairman of the convention, was not considered by any means a success in that capacity. His voice, which during the reading of his first speech was shrill enough to pierce every part of the hall, was strained so much by the effort that later it could scarcely be understood ten feet away.

JUDGE WEST.

the blind orator of Ohio, who nominated Mr. Blaine for the presidency. He spoke while sitting, but with a voice as clear as the tones of a bugle. His speech was classic and metaphorical, the long cloak he wore adding to the effect of the general appearance. His speech created, probably, the greatest enthusiasm of any during the convention.

MARTIN P. TOWNSEND,

who nominated President Arthur, is said to resemble M. Thiers. During the delivery of his speech he gesticulated violently, and in his calmer moments stood with his thumbs in his trousers pockets. When the Blaine galleries hissed he did not appear to be at all disconcerted, and acknowledging the tumult, which was gradually growing louder and louder, he concluded in good shape.

A Pathetic Statement.

How Some Curiosities are Made.

[New York Sun.]

A mulatto girl, with a remarkably pretty but peculiar face, was engaged by a several western showmen. He had a tooth extracted from each side of her mouth and inserted a pair of long fangs, covered her ears with false ones like a bear's, bleached and tangled her abundant hair, and instructed her to utter an unintelligible jargon. Thus she was transformed into a valuable curiosity, but her wages of $15 a week did not satisfy her. On the arrival of the show in Indianapolis she attempted to quit it, and a row resulted in an exposure of the fraud.

Nothing Hard About It.

[Middletown Transcript.]

Oh, yes, John Henry; writing funny paragraps is as easy as falling down stairs. All you have to do is to sit down and think out your funny things and write them down. You can write them just as fast as you can think them out.

In a Nutshell.

[Rehoboth Sunday Herald.]

Little son of a bill broker to his papa: "Papa, what is business honor?" "Business honor! Well, Alphonse, my boy, suppose one of our customers send 1,000 francs two months before they are due, and—" "Yes, papa." "Well, I pocket the money, my partner, 500 of it." "Oh!"

Too Mean for Utterance.

[Budget.]

It's a very mean man who, on a divorce lawyer to follow a wedding party to obtain for the purpose of distributing his cards.

IN THE FOREST.

Lem Patterson's horse had been stolen, and the neighborhood of Rock's Cove was greatly excited. A band of pursuers was immediately organized and led by old Nat Parker. The violent death of a citizen would have caused a few days of disturbed quiet, but the sudden disappearance of a well-known horse struck the flint of high excitement against the steel of deep indignation.

Lem Patterson was beside himself with rage: Dark Sevier, familiar in a fight which in point of reckless fury and utter disregard of consequences the Marshall boys bowied for blood, and to increase the general demand for gore, Nat Parker said:

"Fellers, this here's the first outrage that has been committed in this here neighborhood since the sudden withdrawal from circulation o' John Stovenll's colt. As citizens o' Arkansaw, an' unchul voters, we kain't stand no sich a spurt as this here. Why, gentlemen, our wives an' darters ain't safe 'long as these here outrages is allowed to go unpunished. Come on, all hands."

In grim silence the avengers followed their grizzly-bearded leaders over rocky points and along narrow, winding bridle-paths. With that strange faculty, almost intuition, characteristic of mountain people, they struck at once the right trail. About noon they saw a man, with a small boy behind him, riding leisurely along.

"Hold on thar," called Nat Parker.

The man stopped and turned around. The horse was at once identified as the property of Lem Patterson.

"Whar'd you git that hoss?" asked Nat Parker.

"Bought him from a man early this mornin'. I used to live in a feller county to this, but my wife died o' fever, an' I sellin' everything I had; an' my little boy struck out, not carin' much whar we went. Early this mornin' a feller lotched up with me, and said he'd like ter sell me a hoss. Told him I didn't have much money, but he offered me one for fifty dollars, an' as my little boy was tired, I closed the trade."

"You air a ole liar!" exclaimed Miles Jones. "You stold that hoss, an' you know it. If you bought him, show us the man you bought him from."

"I'll see'n quite a good day light when I bought the man, gentlemen, an' I don't think I'd know the man if I wanter see him."

"That's a fine tale," said Nat Parker. "You stold that hoss outen Lem Patterson's stable. Get down."

"You mean murdered,

"Gentlemen," said he, "you don't know me, of course, but I'd like to say that Buck Daniels never stold nothin' in his life."

"We know all about that, ole man," said Miles Jones. "We've heard men talk thicker an' faster than you, an' they hanged 'em."

The little boy had been looking on curiously, but when he heard his father pleading and saw the angry men tying a rope around his neck, he dropped on his knees, and in a voice, quivering in childhood's extremity, exclaimed:

"Oh, please don't kill my poor pa. My ma's dead, an' my pa has been crying for three days. He didn't steal the horse, for we bought him from a man."

But Nat Parker turned and looked at the child:

"Oh, Mister, don't let 'em hurt my pa."

"I kain't stop it, little feller," replied Nat, wiping his eyes.

"Oh, Mister, encouraged by the old man's kindness of expression, "have you got any little boys, an' would they if didn't have any ma—"

"Their ma's dead, little feller."

"Then they would pray to keep you from bein' hung. Oh, please don't let 'em hurt him."

"I kain't stop it, little feller," said the rope. "I don't believe that little feller would tell a lie. Lem, you've got your hoss an' that ought'er satisfy you."

"No it oughtn't," clamored Miles Jones, and he turned one end of the rope over a limb of a tree under which they were standing.

"Here," exclaimed old Nat, "turn loose the end o' that rope or you won't eat as much at supper as you did at breakfast."

"Come on, fellers," vociferated Miles Jones. "Don't be'n him stuff you."

"The man that pulls on that rope ketches somethin' mighty unfrien'ly with life but mighty nachul with death," and the old fellow drew a pistol. The little boy clasped him around the knees.

"Then, little fellow, I must cry. I must be rough lookin' an' not dress to set down in the governor's table, but I've got a heart as nuse big'ew than a calf."

"You won't let them hurt him, will you?"

"He while the present cow's in motion, honey," and he placed his hand on the child's head.

The boy turned, looked searchingly at Miles Jones and cried:

"Pa, that's the man that sold you the horse. You be in; don't you go."

Buck Daniels regained Jones closely and said:

"Gentlemen, I believe the boy's right."

"Is a d——d lie," exclaimed Jones.

"Maybe so," said Daniels, "but, mess. I'd like for you to search him. The man what I brought the hoss from took in payment five ten dollar bills. One o' them's got a corner tore off, an' on another corner is a red spot blotched."

"No livin' man can earch me."

"Wen," said old Nat, with grim humor, "reckin we'll hafter git a dead man to do it, an' the way the thing's runnin' just at the present time, that'll be one here afore a great while."

"Hope, you all know me," Jones replied in a voice almost softened to implorium: "you know that I wouldn't steal a hoss outer my own neighborhood."

"How about other neighborhoods?" asked old Nat.

"I wouldn't steal a tail."

"Search him, men."

He struggled wildly, but the men threw him to the ground. The described bills were found. He prayed piteously, but no one seemed to hear him.

"Swing him up here."

"Oh, for God's sake don't hang me; I can't stand it."

"Won't hafter stand it."

"I'll give Lem everything I've got. I needed the money or I wouldn't have stole——"

"Swing him up."

A hundred fingers and flew over the tree; a wolf howled away over on a hill. A party of silent men mounted their horses. A man swung slowly to and fro in the forest.

JOHN P. HEAR.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., June 8.

STRANGER.

There is a legend in some quaint old book
Of a lonely traveler, worn and pale,
Asking in vain for a shelter, at night,
Pleading from window, and clamoring at door,
Alms! none within in the room, hanged to a hook,
His own self-strangled self, grim, ugly, white,
And who struck sober by that livid sight
Passing his eyes, in tongue-tied horrid shock.

Has any man a fancy to peep in
And see, as through a glass, what in the past
His unbid self, self-damned, with coils of sin,
Or sloth, or folly, round the throat
The noose gives the face a softened grin.
"Its but a mask. Look well. Why to agitate?"

High Style of Wheels.

[The Jeffersonian News.]

Perched Madison square and wanders far up Fifth avenue, with the palaces of the millionaires on either hand. Here there was a change of scene. There were not a great many people on the sidewalks, but the street was crowded with superb equipages, in which the wives and daughters of the millionaires were airing themselves. The carriages were all of the open sort, so that those who rode in them could get the full benefit of the fresh air and sun and be seen to the best advantage. I perceived no disposition to hide any lights under a bushel. The horses were such as would fill the heart of a connoisseur with delight. Their well-groomed skins glittered in the sun almost as brightly as the gold and silver trappings on the harness and carriages.

Almost every carriage had one or two postilions behind—I believe that is what they call them—and a driver in front. All of these were dressed in handsome frock-coats of black cloth, buttoned up to the throat. They wore snowy white gloves, and silk hats with cockades of black feathers, which were fastened to the hats with large buttons of silver. Their pantaloons were also called knee pants, I believe—after the style of Oscar Wilde and the revolutionary fathers. They were generally of a yellow color, being made of glistening buckskin cloth, and were so fitted so tightly that they seemed to me to be constantly on the point of bursting. Of course, they wore stockings below their knees. They wore long boots, with low and broad tops, from which a number of pretty silk tassels hung down.

The postilions sat like statues on their seats, with their arms crossed in an extravagantly dignified manner on their breasts. They seemed never to speak a word or to move their heads, or even bat their eyes. They looked absolutely proud, and so majestic that I couldn't help but wonder what they were thinking about. They seemed to me the very picture of dignity on a monument yet, for all of that, they had to help be-lieve that they felt themselves to be asses. I am sure I would feel so if I were in their places. Their sacred duty, so far as I could make it out, seemed to be to march up to the heads of the horses and stand there like statues while the carriages stopped. The ladies then condescended to get out, with a good deal. On the contrary, they left all the solemnity and dignity to be used by the postilions. They chatted and laughed merrily, and bowed and waved graceful recognitions to their acquaintances whom they saw on the street. Bless me! it was all fine, very fine, even including the solemn postilions.

The English Premier.

[Scenes in the Commons.]

There, in office on the treasury bench, sits the first lord of the treasury and leader of the house of commons, stretched out, with his legs straight before him, and his toes turned up to the lantern roof. His hands lie listlessly crossed on his lap. His head droops over his right shoulder. His face is pallid. The corners of his mouth droop as if in pain. His scant gray hair clings like a fringe of floss about the base of his great skull. His eyes are closed. The powerful features, touched with a tinge of sweetness, and overworn with half a century of politics, mutely engender pity. His ill-fitting clothes hang loosely about his body. Only his head and nose live in motion, and with the free stride of a wild thing of the woods. (But when Mr. Gladstone is overwhelmed by attacks of the opposition) "the last fighting man" stands up, suddenly sits both upright, chin in the air, and hands clasping his knees. There are only three fingers on the left hand, the bony knuckles being concealed with a circular black patch kept in its place by a narrow black ribbon drawn back and front of the palm. His head is erect, his eyes flash, the eyes, large and luminous, brow and gray, rest with slight upon the enemy. The nostrils dilate, the lips, still close, work impatiently, the body leans forward, the hands glide upon the knees pressed outward.

"In a moment Mr. Gladstone is on his feet. Sept. 24, 1879, he had been up late the night before from some political reception. He wears evening clothes and a flower. When he comes down to the house decorated with the spoils of the night before, the tired members, their pencils and members' guide about the lobbies to hear him. By what process the liberal chief ramples the fronts of his dress shirts, is a secret known to that of the age of the world. With a couple of quick steps he comes to the dispatch box at the corner of the table, and for an hour and a half he wields the brass. Then he opens the flood-gates of his oratory, and deluges the commons with assertive eloquence."

The Romance of a Newspaper Office.

[Laurenceville (S. C.) Herald.]

There was published in Laurenceville, before the war, a paper called The News. It was the newspaper, that A. H. Stephens, then of Atlanta, enlisted for service in the Confederate army, and, as a soldier did not have much time to write a paper, and type, he left this office here in charge of Frank Lee, a relative, and the assistants of Yankee, removed it out to his home in the country, and in the garret of the house they hid out in the fields for safety. After the war it was gathered up and sold to a Carterville paper, but it seemed that all of it was not found. Last week Mrs. Burdett driver came across to be old type that had carried the news of the great secession movement and the war, and of the great peace between the states, while the glistening gold was simply brass rules.

Locals.

—Plainfield seldom looks prettier than now.

—The Scott press-works are progressing rapidly.

—There are 316 children of school age in Bound Brook.

—Somerville has raised $150 for a Basin and Logan banner.

—Vochl's New England bread, advertised elsewhere, is highly spoken of.

—The young people of Somerville migrate to Raritan of five evenings for a row on the canal.

—Strangers are abundant in the city, and yet we are informed there are "more to follow."

—According to The Fireside, Westfield is unable to accommodate the influx of Summer visitors.

—The Railway Savings Institution has commenced the payment of the additional five per cent. dividend.

—The horse committee desire to state that the horse, truck, and harness, of Plainfield engine, No. 2, are paid for in full.

—The ruins of the late fire of Cadmus' stable is an ugly sight, and we hope soon to see a handsome building erected there.

—The Rev. J. H. Hector will deliver a temperance lecture at Van Deventer Hall to-morrow afternoon at four o'clock. Admission free.

—In another column under the caption of "Extra" are some important facts we recommend our readers to examine, especially our lady patrons.

—At a meeting of the stockholders of the Music Hall, held in the Council Chamber on Thursday evening the stock of the company was increased $5,000.

—The Hon. Chauncey Schaffer will address a temperance meeting at Library Hall, Elizabeth, to-morrow afternoon under the auspices of the Red Ribbon Club.

—We have before us a copy of the EVENING NEWS, a new daily paper just started in Plainfield by Mr. T. W. Morrison. It is well printed and shows enterprise. We wish it success.—Westfield Fireside.

—The polo match at Gerdel's last evening drew quite a large crowd. The Newark player expected did not put in an appearance. Mr. Gerdel played with Mr. Lambertz, of New Brunswick, and won.

—The temperance boom having worked its sweet will upon Plainfield and gone on its way, that city has fallen victim to another reform. A Sunday-closing movement is the latest atrocity which it is there proposed to inflict upon those easy-going people who don't see why they should not disobey the laws so long as it doesn't interfere with anybody else.—Trenton Times.

You are a little off, young man. These people observe the Sabbath, and don't consider it an atrocity to "respect the Sabbath day and keep it holy."

Presentment by Grand Jury.

UNION CATTLE AND TRESPASS.

Union County, ss: to wit:

Presentment regarding diseased animals.

The Grand Inquest for the State of New Jersey and for the body of the County of Union, upon their respective oaths present, that whereas there has been called to the fact that in this county several cases of pleura-pneumonia have existed and that inoculation has been done in some instances without the sanction of the State Board and with disastrous results, this grand jury therefore desire to call the attention of the owners of animals subject to the attacks of such disease, also others who perform the inoculation in such cases, and the citizens of this county generally that the laws of this State prevent "THE INOCULATION FOR PLEURO-PNEUMONIA WITHOUT THE CONSENT AND APPROVAL OF THE STATE BOARD AND SUCH DIRECTION," and call the attention of the community to Sec. IV., page 192, laws of New Jersey of the year 1881, which reads as follows: That when any herd or portion thereof has been or is so exposed to any contagious or infectious disease, and the State Board of Health deem the disease likely to spread to that portion of the herd still unaffected although isolated or quarantined, said herd may with the consent of the owner or keeper and with such terms agreed upon between them and the executive officer of the State Board of Health, cause or allow said herd or herds to be inoculated for the prevention of such diseases as can thus be mitigated; provided that such inoculation for pleuro-pneumonia shall in no case be allowed without the consent and approval of the State Board of Health and by its direction.

This Grand Jury therefore demand that such surgeons and others who inoculate as above specified desist from so doing, and warn all who may have animals troubled with disease specified to at once notify the officers of the State Board, so that they may take such course in the premises as may be deemed advisable.

And the Grand Jury would also call the attention of the community to this fact, that under the law of this State, any person or persons refusing or neglecting to notify said Board of Health or any one of them of the existence of pleuro-pneumonia or any other contagious or infectious disease among their cattle shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by a fine or imprisonment or both at the discretion of the Court.

OUR POLITICS.

Our baby is twelve days old to-day. It was apparently borne to prosper. The undertaker despairs. The parents rejoice. With hosts of kind friends it smiles. It is as free as the mountain air, and as independent as a clam at high tide. It squalls every day at ten cents per week. It was born so. It will live so, for it has had in its birth-minds that only a short time ago a daily paper in Plainfield grasped and--died: that a mountain was in labor and brought forth--but a mouse, and shook their heads significantly at the birth of THE NEWS, now are foremost to shout "I told you so."

There are good Democratic friends who think it would be wise to adopt such an infant that it might squall tunes pleasing to their ears. The baubles have tempted it not.

Good Republican friends, no less alert, have likewise signified their wishes, but the baby heeds freedom better. It will hear the voice which God has given it to honestly express its own sentiments as best it can. It will toot no Democratic horn as its own. It will toot no Republican horn as its own. It will toot an independent horn only. But it will gladly permit the tooters of either party, within proper limits, to make music for its friends through its columns, and if the tooters of one side can make more captivating music than the tooters of the other side--good enough. There need not be any but good feeling on all sides. As time rolls on discordant squalling may become winsome prattling, research and reflection will enlarge its horizon of understanding, even if it gives some of the interchangers a horizontal inclination.

At present this infant can only scratch --and it has had to everlastingly scratch, during the passed two weeks, for a living. But it has scratched vigorously, and, having been well fed, lives to scratch some more. It will keep on scratching until it gets on its feet, and then it may do some kicking. Some day or other, as it gets on in years, it may find some improvement on nature's implements of offense and defense, but for the present the "hard in hand" it will hold to be "worth two in the bush."

In such a wholesome climate this infant hopes to thrive, and, as it thrives, be the medium through which its friends may thrive--its social and commercial friends; its religious friends and its political friends; and--as a matter of convenience--its mortuary friends.

Now these are our politics. We hope our political friends understand them. If they don't, perhaps if they will look wise, people will think they do anyhow.

A joint letter from a leading Plainfield Republican and leading Railway Republicans suggests to us a plan by the adoption of which the lion and the lamb may lie down together. It may be difficult to tell at present which is the lion and which the lamb, but the scales will fall from the eyes when the other county is heard from.

The annexed extract from the letter will tell the story:

June 13, 1884.

DEAR SIR--If you would drop your "independent" character, and come out for the Republican platform and candidates, it would be better for you as you are referred to remain politically independent if you preferred to be that possibly some arrangement might be made by which you and a few which we could hold daily communication with the public at our great expense, and at the same time have your columns open and perhaps your influence by your hiring to us some of your space daily, for the campaign, say 3 or 4 columns.

Plainfield is a strong Republican city and should give Blaine 800 or four hundred majority and defeated we think we will give him a hearty, zealous and unequivocal support. That it has not got. The Times gives him a very cold support. The Courier is going to be a lively one and something will be done to make it so. Any fancy that we had of reaching the people through and over the "correspondent" of your paper has been effectually dispelled. The article I wrote for you did not see its light of day and over a piece of Monday or Tuesday last. It should be quite stale on Monday, a week after it's composition, especially as the Tribune and some other papers have had strong editorials on two or three of the main ideas I had. It would now look as if I was a plagiarist.

I am not complaining, I only thought from the fact that you are certain of the ship and can take or refuse passengers, if you choose, but I am sure when you see where I have business--on the first train, and a fast one at that;

Let me hear from you on the business matter of this note at your early convenience.

Yours truly.

This is our reply:

1. We cannot agree to insert any communications on political politics to the exclusion of local news.

2. Communications of general interest will be inserted as our space permits, without charge.

3. We would not sell "three or four columns" of THE NEWS for politics at any price, because we have not that much space to spare. We don't believe that our readers --either Democrats or Republicans--want politics in such large doses. We require nearly all the space we now have to make an interesting newspaper, and by virtue of yearly contracts our advertisers have secured nearly all the extra space. We have placed a limit, beyond which we will not encroach upon the reading space, preferring instead to enlarge, as we shall be compelled to do if the advertising patronage continues as hitherto.

But the plan suggested by the above letter is this--that a column may be secured at our regular advertising rates, to be known as the Republican column, in which those securing the same may have daily communication with our Republican and Democratic readers, and beside it may be secured on the same terms a column to be headed and known as the Democratic column, under the control of the Democratic party.

Assuming that the leaders of such well-known Republicans as Henry L. Pierce, Charles R. Colman, William Endicott, jr., Henry Lee, who was in Gov. Andrews' council, and by repeated requests the six columns of names published were signed. The canvassers did not have to look far for signers. Men of all parties, creeds and colors were standing in and about Boston put down their names with expressions of satisfaction that such a movement had been undertaken.

Among the signatures are those

Mr. Uriah Welch, Innocently Enough, Comes Near Drowning Mrs. McElroy and Her Party of Lady Friends.

RICHFIELD SPRINGS, June 14.—President Arthur's sister, Mrs. McElroy, accompanied by twenty elegantly and richly dressed ladies, left the New American house for a twelve-mile drive around Canadarago lake yesterday afternoon. Shortly after 100 members of the State Board of Underwriters, who were also here, desired so witness the facilities for extinguishing fires at the Springs. Accordingly, at 3 o'clock, the regular fire department of the Springs turned out and gave an exhibition of their prowess, throwing seven streams clear over the Spring house. President J. H. Van Buren asked Uriah Welch how long it would take to get four streams of water from his roof.

"Oh, a minute and a half," said Mr. Welch. Then he went to the office and directed Chief Clerk Wall to ring the fire alarm for the roof, which was at once done. Consternation prevailed in the hotel. Heading the heterogeneous crowd who rushed to the roof was the clerk, Wall, himself. Close behind him came the fire brigade from the dining-room in swallow-tail coats, a squad from the cook-room in white caps and aprons, and a swarm of bell boys in the brand new uniforms, all whooping up the stairs to the scuttle. In a minute four streams of water through 2½-inch nozzles were set playing on the Park place house and two on the Davenport house.

"Front!" called Chief Clerk Wall to one of the bell boys, forgetting he was on the roof as a fireman and not posing behind the counter as a clerk.

The entire squad of firemen, taking the command to mean them, rushed in a body to the front of the house and elevating the hose threw four streams high in the air.

Just at this time Mrs. McElroy, with her party, oblivious of their danger, dashed up in gallant style in front of the hotel. They had no sooner arrived than tons of water began to fall into the street, the volume being kept up persistently, filling the carriage and nearly drowning the horses and the occupants. The water came down in a perfect deluge. The nodding ostrich plumes wilted, and the magnificent bouquets of her guests, who shrieked and gurgled their terror in a most agonizing manner. The ladies composing the party were Mrs. A. N. Burtis, daughter of President Heald, of the Home Insurance company; Mrs. R. D. Alliger, of New York; Mrs. C. C. Rise, wife of the editor of The Insurance Monitor; Mrs. Thomas Austin, of Albany; Mrs. D. J. De Camp, of Schenectady; Mrs. M. Hodges, wife of the president of the Star Insurance company; Mrs. A. Newton Locke, of Glens Falls, and Mrs. J. W. Barley, of New York.

When the water was turned off and the drenched ladies rescued profuse apologies were offered by Mr. Welch, and in half an hour they were were sitting around the old-fashioned wood fires in the main halls, most of them sipping hot punches and each of them carrying a magnificent fresh bouquet, presented by Mr. Welch. Mrs. McElroy took the thing as a joke, and after the ladies had talked the affair over they concluded that they had an awfully jolly time, although their toilettes were ruined. Mrs. McElroy left shortly after for Cooperstown. The drills of the hotel fire brigade will not hereafter be conducted by a clerk, for fear of mistakes.

THE SUPREME COURT.

Portraits of the Chief Judiciary of the United States.

Men Whose Influence is Second Only to That of the Constitution.

A Magnificent Array of Heads.

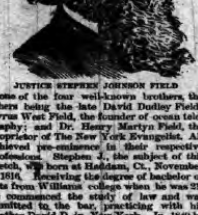
The supreme court of the United States consists of a chief justice, with a salary of $10,000, and eight associate justices whose salary is $10,000 each. It holds one session annually in Washington, beginning on the second Monday in October. The United States is divided into nine judicial circuits in which there is a resident circuit judge at a salary of $6,000. Our portraits were engraved from recent photographs by C. E. Ball, of Washington, D. C.

JUSTICE MORRISON R. WAITE.

The present chief justice of the supreme court of the United States, was born at Lyme, Ct., November 20, 1816; graduated as an A. B. from Yale in 1837. After his admission to the bar he removed to Ohio, where he practised successfully in Maumee City and Toledo. He was a member of the state legislature in 1849, and one of the arbiters of the Geneva tribunal in 1872. He was president of the Ohio constitutional convention in 1873, and on January 21, 1874, was appointed by President Grant to his present position. His course since has been singularly free from political or personal prejudice. He declined to serve as one of the electoral commission to decide the presidential controversy of 1876.

JUSTICE SAMUEL F. MILLER.

Justice Miller, who has for twenty-four years filled a seat on the supreme bench, is a sturdy example of the man he accomplished by unflinching determination, even late in life. He had studied medicine and was a practicing physician in Indiana and Ohio until he was thirty years old, when he commenced the study of law. Such was his success after being admitted to the bar that he was elected chief justice of Iowa, and in 1862 was promoted by President Lincoln to his present position, receiving his commission on July 16 of that year.



JUSTICE STEPHEN JOHNSON FIELD

is one of the four well-known brothers, the others being the late David Dudley Field; Cyrus West Field, the founder of ocean telegraphy; and Dr. Henry Martyn Field, the proprietor of The New York Evangelist. All achieved pre-eminence in their respective professions. Stephen J., the subject of this sketch, was born at Haddam, Ct., November 4, 1816. Receiving the degree of bachelor of arts from Williams college when he was 21, he commenced the study of law and was admitted to the bar, practicing with his brother David D. in New York. In 1849 he went to California, where after holding various legislative positions he was, in 1857, chosen a judge of the supreme court of the state of which, in 1859, he became chief justice. In 1863 he was appointed by President Lincoln an associate justice of the supreme court of the United States. In 1877 he was one of the fifteen members of the electoral commission, and one of the seven who voted that the disputed votes be cast for Mr. Tilden. Mr. Field is now favorably spoken of as a possible Democratic candidate for the presidency.

JUSTICE JOHN M. HARLAN, of Louisville, Ky., is about 49 years old, and is blessed with remarkable physical and intellectual powers. In 1859, when but 23 years old, Mr. Harlan ran for congress. When the war broke out he joined the Union army, and served two years as Colonel of the 10th Kentucky Infantry. The death of his father in 1863 caused him to return to civil life, and the same year he was elected attorney-general of the state. At the close of his term he removed to Louisville to practice law, acquiring at this time the reputation of being the best orator in the state of Kentucky. He was offered the command of brigadier general and declined the honor. In 1871 and again in 1875, he was the Republican candidate for governor, but was defeated by JUSTICE WILLIAM B. WOODS.

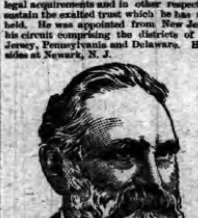
Justice Woods has had a distinguished public career. He was born in Newark, Ohio, and graduated from Yale college in 1845. After the usual course of legal study he was admitted to the bar and began to take an interest in politics, making political speeches as a Democrat, and was elected to office by that party. In 1858 and 1859 he was the Democratic speaker of the Ohio house of representatives. At the outbreak of the civil war he entered the Union army as lieutenant of the Seventy-sixth Ohio volunteers. When the army was mustered out in 1865 he had won the rank of brigadier general and brevet major-general. He had served in Alabama at the end of the war, and was so pleased with the country that he became business life again in Alabama, and was elected the state chancellor in 1868, which office he resigned on receiving his commission on the bench of the supreme court, December 21, 1880.

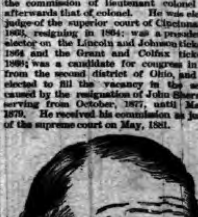
JUSTICE JOSEPH P. BRADLEY

Received the confirmation of his appointment by President Grant by the senate on March 21, 1870, after a long contest. The southern senators objected to the displacement of the only southern judge on the bench by one from the north. He has since proved that it would have been difficult to find a man better fitted than he by natural ability, legal acquirements and in other respects to sustain the exalted trust which he has since held. He was appointed from New Jersey; his circuit comprising the districts of New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Delaware. He resides at Newark, N. J.



JUSTICE STANLEY MATTHEWS

is a native of Cincinnati, O., where he was born, July 21, 1824; receiving an academic education he graduated at Kenyon college in 1840; after which he studied law, was admitted to the bar and commenced practice at Cincinnati; was elected judge of the court of common pleas of Hamilton county in 1851, and elected to the state senate in 1858, being appointed in 1858 United States attorney for the southern district of Ohio, he resigned in 1861 to join the volunteer infantry of the Union army receiving the commission of lieutenant colonel and afterwards that of colonel. He was elected judge of the superior court of Cincinnati in 1865, resigning in 1869; was a presidential elector on the Lincoln and Johnson ticket in 1864 and the Grant and Colfax ticket in 1868; was a candidate for congress in 1870 from the second district of Ohio, and was elected to fill the vacancy in the senate caused by the resignation of John Sherman, serving from October, 1877, until March, 1879. He received his commission as justice of the supreme court on May, 1881.



JUSTICE SAMUEL BLATCHFORD

Is a native of New York city, where he was born on March 9, 1820. He graduated from Columbia college when but 17 years old, afterwards studying law. He became secretary to William H. Seward when the latter was elected governor of the state of New York. In 1846 he removed to Auburn in the same capacity. Afterwards to New York city, continuing the practice of law in which he had first obtained a high reputation as a practitioner. In 1852 he commenced the compilation of Blatchford's Reports of Cases in the circuit court for the second district of New York which is still continued. On May 5, 1867, he was appointed judge of the district court in place of Judge Betts who resigned. On March 4, 1868, he was appointed judge of the United States circuit court in the room of Judge Johnson. Since the death of Mr.

JUSTICE HORACE GRAY.

At the time of Judge Gray's appointment on the United States supreme court bench December 20, 1881, he was fifty-two years old and unmarried. He graduated from Harvard at the age of sixteen. He travelled extensively in Europe, and afterward took a regular course in the Harvard law school and read law, being admitted to the bar in February, 1851. His first official action was that of reporter of the decisions of the supreme court of Massachusetts, which he held from 1854 to 1861, when he resigned. He was appointed associate justice of the supreme court of Massachusetts in 1864, and gradually rose, until upon the death of Justice Chapman in 1873 he was appointed his successor. In early manhood he attended as a delegate the first state convention of the Free Soil party, and was actively associated with Charles Sumner, Charles Francis Adams, Henry Wilson and other prominent men in that movement.

The Singing Evangelist.

IRA D. SANKEY.

The many thousand admirers of Mr. Sankey, who have been thrilled by his sweet voice in the rendition of religious melodies, will be pained to learn of his health breaking down in England while pursuing the evangelical work which has rendered his name, coupled with that of Mr. Dwight L. Moody, famous both in the United States and Great Britain. The birth of Mr. Sankey occurred at Edinburgh, Pa., in 1840, and at an early age he was religiously inclined, developing a taste for music and a fine capacity for teaching it. Later he became a Sunday school superintendant. This with his fondness for music on musical conventions afforded a further opportunity for musical advancement. Mr. Moody first heard Mr. Sankey sing at a national convention of young men's Christian associations at Indianapolis, Ind. Struck with the fervor and enthusiasm of Mr. Sankey he secured his co-operation in the religious meetings, which they conducted on three years at Chicago. Their success led them to visit other American cities and finally Great Britain, where they attracted considerable attention. They have since made several tours of the principal cities of the union and Great Britian, winning everywhere an enviable distinction.

A Noted Hotel Proprietor.

HARVEY D. PARKER.

The founder and proprietor of one of the best known hotels in New England, the Parker house, of Boston. Mr. Parker was in life an example of what can be accomplished by undying energy and perseverance, notwithstanding the more depressing of circumstances. Born in 1826, in Kennebec county, Maine, young Parker received but a meagre education in the district school in the country town in which his parents lived. Before reaching his twentieth year he started from home to seek his fortune with the long earned accumulated savings of $4 in his pocket. Reaching Boston, which was the Mecca for country boys in those days, he soon obtained employment, a portion of the time as waiter in a small coffee house. Seeing that under careful management the restaurant business could be made an extremely profitable one, we find him, eight years after his arrival in that city, the proprietor of his own restaurant, a very small affair, called the Transcript. From this time on, notwithstanding the competition and disadvantages of location, he was compelled to struggle against, his restaurant became a well known place for dining in New England. In 1854 prominent merchants and residents of Boston, realizing the advantage of having a really first class hotel in their midst, set about building one, and they called Mr. Parker to superintend its construction and when completed to become its manager. This hotel was opened in 1855 as the "Parker House," and became so successful as to necessitate its enlargement by numerous additions on several occasions since.

Some Simple Cyclone Stories.

(Hawkinsville (Ga.) News.)

One fellow was from Wilcox and the other resides in this county. The Wilcox man said:

"After our big cyclone, a year or two ago, a large number of birds and chickens were found from which every feather had been stripped by the terrible wind, in fact, they were picked as slick as an onion, but the fowls were still alive and kicking."

"Oh, that's nothing," exclaimed the Pulaski man. "One of my neighbors had his well blown so crooked by the same cyclone that he has not been able to get a bucket down into it since, and he was compelled to dig another well."

As this point the meeting adjourned to the nearest saloon.

The Temperance Lecture Yesterday.

A very fair audience greeted the Rev. John H. Hector, yesterday afternoon in Van Deventer Hall on the occasion of his lecture on temperance. Mayor Maxson presided, and introduced the speaker. On the stage with him were Dr. Thiers, A. I. Reynell, Mr. John H. Sayres, and also others. Mr. Hector stated that it was his custom on his lecturing tours to speak on temperance every Sunday afternoon at whatever place he happened to be, as well as his subject. "The Similarity between the System of Africa an Slavery and that of Rum Slavery." His chief, and seemingly pet, argument against the rum system was the novel one of its being in direct antagonism to the Constitution of the United States. While the argument commanded attention for the time being from its very novelty, some thought it did not do the temperance cause any good to make such wild and sweeping assertions. Mr. Hector is a pleasing, at times eloquent, and occasionally witty. His lectures this evening at the same place upon the story of his own life which is said to be thrilling and full of interest, under the auspices of the Whitfield Scott Post, G. A. R. The admission will be five.

A Slight Fire.

The accidental upsetting of a lamp from a chandelier in the store of Randolph & Son, on Front street, Saturday evening, about nine o'clock, by a young lady clerk therein, resulted in attracting a large crowd on the street in front of the store, and much confusion inside. The lamp fell a distance of about seven feet to the floor, breaking, and, causing the oil to ignite, the young lady poured on the flames a pail of water, kept as a preventive of fires, but only succeeded in spreading it. It was finally smothered out with a rubber overcoat by one of the men in the store, before any damage was done. We understand that there have been a number of fires in this store within a short time. Kerosene may prove more expensive than gas in the long run, and is far less attractive to customers.

Accident at Bound Brook.

On Friday morning about nine o'clock Francis Smith and his assistant, Charles Beutzler, tried to cross the lower crossing of the Philadelphia and Reading railroad at Bound Brook in Smith's ice wagon. The flagman, Philip Deal, was at that time a short distance away turning switches. Engine 384 which had just brought the morning express over from Philadelphia was bearing down on them, and the men were warned of their danger. The locomotive struck the horses killing them instantly. The two men were thrown from the wagon. Mr. Smith had two ribs broken and suffered internal injuries. It is thought he will not recover. Mr. Beutzler was somewhat bruised. The wagon was made a wreck.

Saturday's Arrests.

Saturday evening Lee Young was arrested for being drunk and disorderly, and was with some difficulty conducted to headquarters. This morning City Judge Good fined him $5.

Thomas Conway was also arrested the same evening on a charge of assault and battery. He was brought before Justice Nash yesterday morning, and was held in $100 bail to appear before him this morning. Michael Conway became his bondsman. This morning he waived examination, and was held in the same bond to appear before the Grand Jury.

A Prospering Hotel.

The cool weather which is making seaside resorts so uncomfortable, has apparently as effect upon pure mountain air resorts, at least upon Hotel Netherwood, as its present season will eclipse all former ones. Some idea of the rise of hotel it is may be formed by the class of people who are its patrons. A grand hotel is however of very little account comparatively without good management, which Hotel Netherwood has in an eminent degree, in the person of S. V. Woodruff, the proprietor.

The outlook at Netherwood is brighter than ever before in its history. If the capacity of the hotel were twice its size Mr. Woodruff would not be able to accommodate the present applications. Many extensive repairs and alterations have been made by the present proprietor; many rooms that were not available last season, Mr. Woodruff has been obliged to put in order and refurnish in order to meet the demand for engagements. This in view of no efforts being put forth on the part of Mr. Woodruff, for so early and successful an opening, speaks volumes for his success of last season and for his popularity as a landlord.

Suicide at Rahway.

Miss Mary E. Hopper, of Rahway, a sister of Mrs. C. M. Osborn, Saturday morning committed suicide by drowning, near the Milton avenue draw bridge. Her remains were discovered by a son of Wm. Housman, who was rowing when one of his oars struck against the lady's body. The news of finding the body spread rapidly and so numbereds of people gathered in the vicinity of where the remains were found. The facts are these: Miss Hopper lived with Mr. C. M. Osborn's family. About 12 o'clock Saturday night, one of Mr. Osborn's daughters heard Miss Hopper light a match, and asked her what she was doing. Miss Hopper said she wanted to see what time it was, and Miss Osborn did not hear any subsequent noise. At six o'clock this morning one of the family went to Miss Hopper's room, but found it empty and the lady could not be found any where around the house, and while they were searching in the neighborhood word was carried to them of the finding of Miss Hopper's remains in the river by young Housman.

The unfortunate lady must have climbed out of her bedroom window, which is in the second story of the house, upon a shed roof, and then lowered herself to the ground by a swing post, that was very close to the building, as none of the doors had been disturbed after she family had retired.

Miss Hopper had suffered for the past ten years, with an inward tumor, and the best specialists in New York city, pronounced her incurable, and said that an operation to remove the tumor would result in the death of the patient. Everything that could possibly be done in behalf of this sufferer had been done, and knowing that she could never get well, it prayed so heavily upon her that she has several times before attempted to end her sufferings. Miss Hopper made an attempt to end her life by cutting her throat with a razor, on February 20, and although she lost considerable blood, soon recovered. Justice of the Peace William B. Frazee, gave a permit for the removal of the remains, and ex-Mayor Ryno took the body to the morgue. Miss Hopper was fifty years old.

Dr. Green the county physician viewed the body at the morgue, and gave a permit for burial, after he had decided it would not be necessary to hold an inquest. His decision was that Miss Hopper committed suicide by drowning.

The Case of Muncksy vs. Palermo.

The case of William Muncksy against Vizinio Palermo, the peanut woman, for assault and battery which was disposed of Saturday has attracted some attention from the strange action of the Justice in the matter. A reporter of THE NEWS secured the statements of council for both sides and of the Justice.

The story of the case is substantially as follows: William Muncksy went to the home of the peanut woman in Stiger's Lane about eleven o'clock Saturday evening, June 7, to buy a pint of peanuts. Having bought the peanuts he asked the woman what she meant by talking about him. She said she did not want him to do anything wrong before her children. From this point the stories diverge. The man says the woman struck him several times about the head with a poker, and that he beat a hasty retreat. The woman says that she ordered him out, that he made a grab at her pocketbook, finally went out and that she closed the door. Whereupon he commenced kicking the door. On opening it he kicked her in the breast.

The woman immediately after the occurrence hunted up a policeman and endeavored to make a complaint, but not understanding the English language she could not be understood. She also endeavored to make a complaint Monday morning. The man did not make a complaint until Tuesday evening. The woman then made a counter charge. The man on his behalf had two witnesses, and the woman two.

Justice Nash before whom the case was tried decided that the assault and battery was committed against the man, and that the woman's charge was not sustained. He held the woman in $100 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury. By this action no bail could be obtained, the poor woman who has six little children dependent upon her for support would have to go to jail until the October term of court. Her counsel presented numerous arguments against the severity of this course, and Muncksy's counsel finally agreeing, the justice released her on her own recognizance. John Ulrich appeared for Muncksy, and Craig A. Marsh for the peanut woman.

VANDEVENTER HALL.

MONDAY EVENING JUNE 16th, 1884.

An Evening's Entertainment full of WIT AND HUMOR.

under the auspices of

Winfield Scott Post, G. A. R.

Rev. JOHN H. HECTOR,

Commander of David E. Small Post, No. 39, Department of Pa., will tell the thrilling story of his own life.

How his father and mother gained their freedom. Their tedious journey from Harper's Ferry to Canada and its sufferings. He starts for a new home in the west. How he was taken with one of his spells while driving a horse team, going 40 miles an hour. His walk of 14 miles and what he saw on the road. Finds his new home. His great love for life. How Circus Lessonade Is Made.

[Philadelphia Record.]

Signalling that it was all right, the circus man lifted up the flap of the tent for the supply to enter, and quickly followed him inside.

"This," he said, "is where all the circus lemonade is made, and if you will wait a bit we'll watch, "if you will wait a few moments you will see it done."

In the center of the tent stood a large box, and on one side rested a big galvanized iron tank, each with a spigot was placed on strong rests somewhat similar to a saw-horse. In a short time three men entered, and one of them proceeded to unlock the box, the sides of which at once fell apart, disclosing a very compact and solid-looking engine, the steam boiler of which was conducted through a pipe leading to one of the boilers in the cooking tent, while the other two brought a large tub, which they laid on the ground, and having filled it with water drawn from one of the tanks. A steel lemon-squeezer was then attached to two iron arms of the engine, and a very worn and dilapidated-looking half of a lemon placed in it, the squeezer then being lowered into the tub. Steam was turned on, and the squeezer began its work, the lemon emitting the most horrifying groans of agony from which either the water as the pressure became more and more severe. Gradually these doleful sounds ceased, and the liquid assumed a more pleasing hue, while a faint odor of lemons filled the air of the tent.

"That'll do; take it out," said the engineer, shutting off the steam and flipping the squeezer was withdrawn from the tub, the unhappy half lemon being carefully dried in a clean cloth and placed in a small iron safe which was then locked. The liquid in the tub was then stirred vigorously with an hermetically-sealed glass bulb fastened to the end of a stick, the bulb being filled with the best white wine. The man who stirred the mixture stopped at intervals to taste it, and, after remarking "there, I guess it's sweet enough, let's get it out," left with the help of the engineer to carried the tub away.

"This machine is the only one in the world," said the engineer proudly, as he untied the apron in which he had worked. Its secret couldn't be bought for $50,000. Why, with this here machine I can make more lemonade with one lemon than any other circus man can with 500 bushels of 'em. The pressure on that squeezer can be graduated from one pound to 250,000 pounds to the square inch, and one lemon will make lemonade for six months at the rate of 100 gallons a day."

JOHN BROWN'S SCAFFOLD.

Is It, at Last, to be Sold in the Shape of Mementoes?

SAN FRANCISCO, June 14.—It having been reported that the last piece of the relatives of the widow of John Brown, the martyr of Harper's Ferry, to remove his remains to Virginia for burial, Mrs. Brown, her daughter, who is employed in the mint here, states that the report is incorrect. The body has been buried in Mount Pleasant cemetery, Saratoga, Santa Clara county, a few miles outside of San Jose, and the family do not intend to remove it.

CHARLESTOWN, W. Va., June 14.—The rumor that the California, of which Brown's widow has grossed considerable discussion concerning the details of his execution. Everything connected with it is in the way of historical data of value. The scaffold have besides properties of considerable value.

The John Brown scaffold is owned by Messrs. Bohn M. Coyle & Co., of this city. Applications have been made for the purchase of the scaffold or portions of it by speculators. It is now proposed to publish a pamphlet form the evidence of the prosecution of the scaffold, taken from affidavits and court records. When this is produced it is further proposed to cut the scaffold into small pieces, which will be converted into all sorts of useful designs for watch charms, chains, finger rings, ear rings, etc., and to offer them for sale in all parts of the country. It is understood that the entire scaffold will be owned by Mr. F. W. Brown, of this city. It is proposed to send pieces of the instrument of death to the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe, the Tappans, the Garrisons and the Phillips families.

A Self-Confessed Crime.

NEW HAVEN, Ct., June 14.—George H. Jennings, a well known and prominent society man, employed as bookkeeper at J. B. Sargent's factory, confessed to the theft of silver used in the manufacture of toy plating purposes. Jennings went voluntarily to the city court and pleaded guilty and received a sentence of six months in jail. It is said Jennings has been speculating of late years. He was recently to have been married to a beautiful young lady of this city.

His Own Ticket.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—Post Office Inspector Sharpe is informed by the postmaster at Wilmington, S. C., that the mail carrier between Magnolia and Cedar River, while reported a few days ago to the department as killed by four negroes and robbed, has received his own ticket, and is not dead, but is now in custody of the United States authorities, and will be tried by them for the crime. He is said to have himself committed the robbery, and he has been arrested.

THE POLITICAL FIELD.

Tammany Hall Demands an Equitable Representation.

Blaine's Letter of Acceptance—Merchants Strike to support McDonald—The Cleveland-Flower Race—Preparing for the Conventions.

NEW YORK, June 16.—There was a well-attended meeting Saturday evening of the Tammany Hall committee on organization, John Kelly in the chair. Mr. Kelly referred to the way in which Tammany Hall had been excluded from state conventions, and said he thought it time that Tammany Hall was placed in the Saratoga convention. The political situation demanded it, and Tammany's fidelity to party justified it. Mr. Kelly hoped that there would be no opposition in the state convention, and that claims would be presented for an equitable representation for Tammany Hall. Resolutions were offered to the effect that Tammany Hall for the last two years had accepted a minority representation, and it had been demonstrated that a majority of the Democratic voters of the city was subjected in that organization. The acceptance of such a representation was a sacrifice of Tammany Hall's natural rights and a humiliation of the Democratic elements into which the party was then divided. As the various branches of the Democracy were now happily reunited it is considered that representation in proportion to numbers is a correspondence is a fundamental doctrine of sound Democracy. Tammany Hall accordingly demanded of the State Democratic convention that a representation in that body at least equal in numbers to that of any other organization in the city as a matter of right and justice to the voters, whose numbers entitle them to any invidious distinction as to regularity. As amendment was added that representation in the state convention equal to that of the County Democratic Central Committee, and that Tammany Hall would accept no other, and that if the demand were denied that Tammany Hall would appeal to the national convention.

About 400 Tammany Hall men are expected to go to Saratoga to-morrow morning on a special train. Justice Daly said that he expected to be the right man of the delegates would be Cleveland men, although Tammany Hall would support any ticket that might be nominated by the national convention.

Blaine's Letter of Acceptance.

NEW YORK, June 16.—A dispatch to The Herald from Augusta says "It is not known whether Blaine has prepared his letter of acceptance or not. The impression has it is limited what he will have to say in it; he keeps such an important secret as this within his own breast, but it is stated that in his acceptance of the nomination he will confirm all his views will fully accord with every plank in the Platform. The Californians who were here the other day say that they had a talk with they talked with him about the labor and tariff questions, and his views satisfied them. They said his utterances on the Chinese question, which followed the same lines, gave them satisfaction, and they in turn told him that his popularity on the Pacific coast was such that he would sweep Oregon, California, Nevada and all west of the Rocky Mountains like a tornado.

"There is no truth in the reports that Mr. Blaine is going to stump Ohio or Virginia or any other state. He will spend the summer here, making this city his headquarters for the campaign. His family will go to Bar Harbor, where he will have a cottage, and he may quietly slip down there once or twice during the summer to see them and enjoy a brief rest. His daily mail still continues to be very large, and he employs a large force of clerks to take care of it. He takes his outdoor exercise as usual, but works hard and late when he is in his library.

Preparing for the Convention.

CHICAGO, June 16.—The hall committee of the national Democratic sub-committee met at the Palmer house to hear the report of its special hall committee. The report in favor of removing the platform to the west side of the hall and making the changes such a removal would necessitate was adopted, and it was finally decided to recommend the plan to the national sub-committee, provided the financial committee could raise the $3,000 necessary to carry out the alteration. The matter of doorkeepers and ushers was considered, and Sergeant-at-Arms Bright stated that he would place 100 doorkeepers at each of the twenty-six entrances, about sixty ushers and twenty pages.

He should instruct the doorkeepers to admit no one without a ticket, no matter if it was the president of the United States. It was finally decided to employ men from Pinkerton's agency as doorkeepers, in order to shut out men who had been persuaded. Arrangements have been made with the management of Haverly's theater to furnish the delegates with 500 tickets for each session. In order that they may be comfortable and able to move about readily. The committee meets again on Wednesday afternoon.

The Cleveland-Flower Race.

ALBANY, June 16.—The managers of Mr. Cleveland's canvass continue to express confidence in the ability to control the convention. They say that Cleveland will have from seventy to 125 majority in the convention, and at least twenty-five of the thirty congressional delegates-at-large. The state committee will probably name William E Smith, of Clinton, Smith West's law partner, for temporary chairman of the convention. Judge Field, of Albany, is suggested for permanent chairman.

Mr. Flower's friends are very sanguine of success. They claim to have on a majority of the Brooklyn delegation, which the Cleveland canvass is sold for their main hopeful in case. The attitude of the Tammany men is also claimed to be favorable to Flower, and with equal confidence by both sides. There is no doubt but that the New York and Brooklyn delegates hold the key to the situation, and will be the last to declare for Cleveland or Flower with their 108 votes.

Hendrick's Supporting McDonald.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—It is understood here that Mr. Thomas A. Hendricks, of Indiana, will be chosen one of the delegates-at-large from that state, and that he will present the name of Governor McDonald to the convention for the presidential nomination. It will be remembered that four years ago, when Mr. Hendricks was an aspirant for first place on the ticket, Mr. McDonald refused to allow his name to be presented to the convention for either the first or second place. The friendly service now given by Indiana the united support of the Democrats of that state for Mr. McDonald.

Senator Bayard's Candidacy.

NEW YORK, June 16.—A special dispatch from Dover, Del., to The World says: "There are no disagreements among the Democrats of Delaware, and at the proper time to be held here on Thursday Senator Bayard will be presented as their candidate for the presidency without a dissenting voice. But few doubt that his chance is strong with New York delegates, and that he will stand a good chance of carrying that state against Mr. Blaine. Friends are already making active preparations in his behalf. The platform will be the famous Ohio declaration, which is a tariff for revenue only. Delaware is a little state, but has always been a power in the Republican, but the change of less than half a thousand votes would make it a Republican state now. This is what gives Mr. Bayard a better chance than any other, and his friends think that he will be stronger before the national convention than he has ever been."

To Support the Nominee.

NEW HAVEN, Ct., June 16.—The Republicans of this city are making arrangements to form a campaign club to support the nominee. The Republicans will issue a call in the Saratoga convention. The political situation demanded it, and Tammany's fidelity to party justified it. Mr. Kelly hoped that there would be no opposition in the state convention, and that claims would be presented for an equitable representation for Tammany Hall. Resolutions were offered to the effect that Tammany Hall for the last two years had accepted a minority representation, and it had been demonstrated that a majority of the Democratic voters of the city was subjected in that organization. THE EGYPTIAN PROBLEM.

Threatening the Life of the Gladstone Ministry.

The Government Accused of Trying to Conceal the Sores of the Khedive of Egypt—The Mahdi Spencer Warned.

LONDON, June 16.—The opposition are rapidly organizing for a final and prolonged assault on the government's foreign policy in the occasion of Mr. Gladstone's proposed agreement on Thursday next. Another question threatened to be pushed to extremities is the refusal of the Marquis of Ripon to permit false information to be circulated in England concerning the situation in the Soudan. On the 21th inst., Lord Edmund Fitzmaurice, under foreign secretary, in answer to a question by Lord Salisbury, answer, as stated in a Cairo despatch of June 2, that Berber had fallen on June 1, and that Khartoum was surrounded, adding, however, that it was not true. The under secretary went further, and said that information from the Khedive corroborated the statements alleged to have been made by the Mahdi and Dongola, to the effect that the siege of Berber had been actually raised, and the insurgent forces attack the town disorganized. An attempt was made to show that the government had in its possession knowledge of the actual state of affairs, and purposely arranged to conceal it, for fear of imperilling its negotiations with France.

The Suez Canal.

LONDON, June 16.—The question whether the present Suez canal shall be enlarged, or a second and parallel canal be cut, will come up for decision before the International Technical commission appointed to consider the subject. The commission, immediately after its appointment and organization, set special engineers to work to make estimates and reports upon all the plans proposed for enlargement of the present canal and for the new additions. The engineers have completed their work, and handed in their reports. The meeting of the commission is now called for the autumn. The report of the engineers is nearly all favor an enlargement of the present canal as the best and cheapest means of meeting the demands of shippers, and it is declared that the plans called for by the commission have been converted to the same view, and will recommend the enlargement plan.

The Earl of Spencer Warned.

LONDON, June 16.—The Standard warns Earl Spencer against going to Belfast. It says that the loyalists are going to the quick by a game of impudence, and without doubt, intend to take revolutionary measures. The writer of the article fears that the old feud between Protestants and papists is about to be renewed, and that the streets will be bloodshed at Belfast will mark its beginning.

They Can't Find McDermott.

PARIS, June 16.—Two agents of the Irish Invincibles, who were charged with the mission of putting the informer McDermott out of the way, have been arrested. They made search for McDermott throughout the capitals of Europe. They express the conviction that he has become a voluntary inmate of a British prison in order to escape the vengeance of his countrymen.

Ireland's Worst Enemies.

DUBLIN, June 16.—Mr. Staples, J. P., a prominent member of the Orange faction, writes to The Dublin Mail that Earl Spencer will partly be to blame for any outbreak. Timothy Weiss a furniture store on the first floor. The owner of the building is a Mrs. Winship, who lives on the upper floor, and of Mr. Weiss and the furniture of Tranda is about $1,000, and on the house $4,000. No. 66 was immediately opposite to 55 Grand street, which fell in January 9, 1881, killing nine persons. The remembrance of this disaster added to the excitement in the street.

Mrs. Taylor Recovers Her Children.

NEW BRIGHTON, S. I., June 16.—Mrs. Sarah Taylor recovered her children recently, after a separation from them of a couple of years. Mrs. Taylor and her husband, Adolphus Taylor, lived here, and the latter took charge of the children. Some months ago Mr. Taylor died. He was considered wealthy. Among the provisions of his will was one by which the children's guardian, Mrs. Brindley, should take charge of the children. Mrs. Taylor took steps to recover possession of the children and applied to the chancellor of New Jersey for that purpose. He was informed that they were at Montclair, N. J.

The chancellor decided that the father could not place the children under the control of a guardian without the consent of the mother, and as the former had died, he ordered that the children should surrender themselves to the surviving parent. Mrs. Taylor went to Montclair to get her children, but found that they had been removed. Detectives ascertained that the children of the late children were in Brooklyn, and that the other was working in a store in this city. They were restored to their mother.

The Fatal Sailboat.

CALAIS, Me., June 16.—A sailboat occupied by James Cranch, Cranchman, aged 27; Dennis Casey, wharfman, aged 25, and George Wheeler, aged 20, was struck by a heavy squall opposite Devil's Head Point, seven miles from this city, last night. The boat sunk immediately, carrying Christie and Casey down with her. Wheeler was saved after being in the water half an hour.

NEW HAVEN, Ct., June 16.—Edward Nugent, aged 13, and John T. Oleaser, aged 15, were drowned in the Quinnipiac river at Red Rock, above this city, by the upsetting of a sailboat. James Kelly, aged 25, was in the boat with them and made heroic efforts to save his companions, but in vain.

Suicide of a Gambler.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 16.—The court of appeals has decided an interesting case which was tried before the court of law and equity. It is that of a woman who sued gamblers to recover money lost by her husband at cards. The court decides in her favor, and awards her three times the amount lost. Many of the gamblers, this being in conformity with an old statute that has been practically a dead letter up to this time.

Saved From the Penitentiary.

PRINCETON, Ky., June 16.—The Court of appeals is now in session at this place. A new court in the case of Thomas Crittenden, nephew of Gov. Crittenden of Missouri, charged with and sentenced to the penitentiary for the killing of a negro. Illegal evidence was the ground for the reversal.

The Homeopathic Convention.

DELL PARK, Md., June 16.—The Dell Park hotel opened with the arrival of a large number of delegates to the homeopathic convention. The meeting occurs under the most favorable auspices, the weather being delightful. Robert Garrett and family and fifty guests arrived.

WHY THEY WERE PROTESTED.

Reasons Given for Refusing to Honor Vanderbilt Drafts.

NEW YORK, June 16.—One of the most unusual stories in Wall street Saturday was that the shrinkage in railroad securities was due to unfounded rumors. The real explanation for the report proved to be the fact that the notes of the Wabash railroad company, in which Mr. Gould is a large owner, figured in the rumors.

It is said that there are about $2,000,000 outstanding of notes of the Wabash company, issued for betterments, new rolling stock, maintenance, etc., and bearing the indorsements of President Solon Humphreys, Mr. Gould, Mr. Sidney Dillon and Mr. Russell Sage, and which have been distributed among the company. The railroad recently passed into the hands of Mr. Solon Humphreys, as receiver. The notes were issued from time to time within the past year or so, and the source, in the hope of aiding the company over its troubles.

About $30,000 worth of these notes were recently received in this city from the west for collection, as they matured, and came into the custody of the Union bank. Of the $30,000 worth of notes referred to $20,000 were drawn by Mr. Vanderbilt, and the rest by Mr. Gould.

"These notes of the Wabash company," said an officer of the bank, "are held all over the country by banks and individuals, and it would take a good deal to induce us to protest them all. When the notes reached the bank Mr. Humphreys, the receiver, was absent in Mr. Lewis. He had made no provision to meet the payment of the matter, when the names were on the back of the paper, the safest policy for the bank to pursue, in view of recent developments in Wall street, was to protest the paper.

The notes had not been paid before going to protest because if they had Messrs. Gould, Sage, Humphreys and Dillon might not have got their money back. Now that they have been protested the notes become a lien on the property.

FALL OF AN OLD BUILDING.

Sudden Collapse of a Tenement House in New York.

NEW YORK, June 16.—An old building at No. 68 Grand street, a tenement house used as a Grocer street, which for a number of years has been an eyesore to pedestrians in the neighborhood, fell with a crash on Saturday afternoon, and filled the air with dust and the street with debris. The building was a four-story brick structure and was occupied by nearly a dozen families.

Directly after the crash the neighborhood was wild with excitement. It was rumored that a dozen or more persons had been buried in the ruins. The police were notified at once, and Lieutenant Reilly, of the Eldridge street station, ordered the entire force to the scene. The police, as usual, were slow to act, and wild rumors of a fearful loss of life were current.

The firemen set to work to overhaul the ruins in search of bodies, but it was afterwards ascertained that all persons had escaped from the house without injury, will the exception of Mrs. Ida Hoyle and Mrs. Zumtag, who was slightly injured in the right arm. She was attended by Dr. Keese, and removed to St. Vincent hospital.

The accident was caused by an excavation in the lot adjoining.

The tenants of the wrecked building dwelled their loss. Mrs. Ida Hoyle had a candy store in the basement, and Christopher Weiss a furniture store on the first floor. The owner of the building is a Mrs. Winship, who lives on the upper floor, and of Mr. Weiss and the furniture of Tranda is about $1,000, and on the house $4,000. No. 66 was immediately opposite to 55 Grand street, which fell in January 9, 1881, killing nine persons. The remembrance of this disaster added to the excitement in the street.

Mrs. Taylor Recovers Her Children.

NEW BRIGHTON, S. I., June 16.—Mrs. Sarah Taylor recovered her children recently, after a separation from them of a couple of years. Mrs. Taylor and her husband, Adolphus Taylor, lived here, and the latter took charge of the children. Some months ago Mr. Taylor died. He was considered wealthy. Among the provisions of his will was one by which the children's guardian, Mrs. Brindley, should take charge of the children. Mrs. Taylor took steps to recover possession of the children and applied to the chancellor of New Jersey for that purpose. He was informed that they were at Montclair, N. J.

The chancellor decided that the father could not place the children under the control of a guardian without the consent of the mother, and as the former had died, he ordered that the children should surrender themselves to the surviving parent. Mrs. Taylor went to Montclair to get her children, but found that they had been removed. Detectives ascertained that the children of the late children were in Brooklyn, and that the other was working in a store in this city. They were restored to their mother.

The Fatal Sailboat.

CALAIS, Me., June 16.—A sailboat occupied by James Cranch, Cranchman, aged 27; Dennis Casey, wharfman, aged 25, and George Wheeler, aged 20, was struck by a heavy squall opposite Devil's Head Point, seven miles from this city, last night. The boat sunk immediately, carrying Christie and Casey down with her. Wheeler was saved after being in the water half an hour.

NEW HAVEN, Ct., June 16.—Edward Nugent, aged 13, and John T. Oleaser, aged 15, were drowned in the Quinnipiac river at Red Rock, above this city, by the upsetting of a sailboat. James Kelly, aged 25, was in the boat with them and made heroic efforts to save his companions, but in vain.

Suicide of a Gambler.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 16.—The court of appeals has decided an interesting case which was tried before the court of law and equity. It is that of a woman who sued gamblers to recover money lost by her husband at cards. The court decides in her favor, and awards her three times the amount lost. Many of the gamblers, this being in conformity with an old statute that has been practically a dead letter up to this time.

Saved From the Penitentiary.

PRINCETON, Ky., June 16.—The Court of appeals is now in session at this place. A new court in the case of Thomas Crittenden, nephew of Gov. Crittenden of Missouri, charged with and sentenced to the penitentiary for the killing of a negro. Illegal evidence was the ground for the reversal.

MEXICAN PENSION BILL

Prospects of a Lively Debate Before It is Disposed of.

Harrison Replies to James's Platform Platitudes—The Postal Telegraph Bill—The New York Stocks to Be Investigated.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—There is a bewildering uncertitude about Senate affairs. The Mexican pension bill has been up and down for several weeks. Amendment after amendment has been rejected, and ten days ago it appeared that the bill would be taken up again from the house. At first there was a hope entertained for this consummation, but the vice-presidential nomination is not known. The pension plank in the Chicago platform seems to have injured the equilibrium of the Republican senators. Mr. Morrill, who has been a substantial member of the party, says that he will not support the ticket unless the platform is changed. It seems to be the feeling of the Republican party as set forth in the platform of the convention. Mr. Sherman declares to ignore platform pledges is to postpone for necessary improvements to the great pension law. The caucus on Friday had no definite result. Among the probabilities is a determination on the part of the opponents to agree upon a definite plan of action. It seems to be the feeling of the last, but something has to be done sooner or later.

The Democrats of the body are getting restless. Some of them do not conceal the fact that they are willing to go out before than their opponents in the pension business. The appropriation money to meet the pensions may be is doubtful. The generally accepted theory is, that the bill will be amended in such a way that the Democrats cannot afford to reject it. But however this may be, is perfectly certain that there will be a lively debate, looking to campaign effects, before the measure is disposed of.

Mr. Hoar, it expected, made the first way. He will undoubtedly press the consideration of the Utah bill at the earliest possible moment.

Mr. Hill gave notice some days ago that he would call up the postal telegraph bill to-day. This, however, may prove a difficult task, since a number of senators are known to be willing that it should be laid aside for the present.

Mr. Butler's resolution calling for an investigation of the New York banks will undoubtedly be taken up to-day. If it is, then will be an interesting discussion. The senators on the Democratic side are prepared with attacks on the national banking system, supposed to be responsible for the immunity enjoyed by officers who have either defeated or looted other wise at fault in the official capacity. The experience of the past few days has made the conviction that most of the future business will be conducted on a plan calculated to affect the issues of the campaign, and without reference at all to pressing demands of national legislation.

The Largest of American Cities.

NEW YORK, June 16.—"Ugly" sends in the following to The Tribune: "I would not be surprised if Chicago yet become the largest of American cities. As I stood by the brink of the Chicago river and looked upon the wonderful was its situation at the terminus of the greatest internal course of navigation on the globe, with Lake Michigan conveniently open to the commerce of the world in the warmer latitudes. They are building two houses in Chicago which surpass in proportions any new private residences in New York. One of these is the new Tribune building. This is said to be permanently dead, but with all the tenacity of his characters he still remains by the ruins of his former home. The other building is that of Potter Palmer, who is said to clear $1,000 per day the year round in his hotel.

Sudden Death of an Actress.

SCRANTON, Pa., June 16.—Miss Julia Coventry, a well known actress, formerly residing in Troy and Saratoga, but whose more recent home was in New York, died suddenly at the Wyoming House this evening. When found she was in Dr. S. C. Grant's office, and all attempts to relieve her were unavailable. She was breathing stertorously when found, and before she could be laid down and crawled into the physician's office on her knees. She was very popular in light comedy parts and possessed much talent.

Older than Grandfather's Clock.

NORWICH, June 16.—Van Buren Chapman, of this city, in response to a request of H. P. Hall, editor of The St. Paul Globe, has sent historical woods to be employed in the manufacture of the gavel to be used by the president of the democratic national convention which meets in that city next month. He has also furnished a portion of the frame of the clock which did service in Jonathan Trumbull's house on Lebanon Green during the revolutionary war. The clock was the property of Gov. Trumbull on the maternal side, and possesses many relics of historical value. The clock frame is of mahogany and well preserved. Mrs. Taylor's child is in good running order.

The resolutions closed by affirming strong faith in the future of the road. Dispatches were received at the headquarters of the company here from the Louisiana National bank, the New Orleans National bank, and a large number of merchants and shippers there, congratulating the company on the election of Smith, commending in strong terms his efficient administration of affairs as vice-president and general manager, and pledging the support of New Orleans to the new administration of the Louisville and Nashville.

LUXURY ON THE RAIL.

George M. Pullman Gives Some Interesting Information.

The Popular Style of Palace Cars.

People Who Own Private Cars.

Sleeping Cars and Equipments.

[New York Sun Interview.]

"It is astonishing," said Mr. George M. Pullman the other day to a reporter, "to notice the luxury of railroad travel nowadays. Almost every railroad man of importance has a private car of his own. Take the Erie railway for instance. President Jewett has his car, the Ramapo, which cost $20,000; Mr. Blanchard has a car, No. 1210, that is a beauty, while Superintendent Benjamin Thomas has car No. 2121 also a beauty. Mr. Jewett's car was one of three built by the Pullman company—one for Henry Villard, and the other for Thomas W. Pierce, president of the Sunset route in Texas."

"What is the popular style of private cars?"

"The hard wood, Eastlake finish. Mr. Jewett's is a pretty one, but the coach recently built for E. H. Talbot, of The Chicago Railway Age, is the finest. Mr. Talbot's luxurious affairs ever put on a railroad track. It runs on twelve wheel, six of which were made in Germany, by Krupp. The observation-room, at the end of the car, is finished in oak, with plate-glass windows extending to the door, velvet carpets, and embossed leather furniture, including one of Turkish-room is finished in maple and ornaments, and opening into the parlor, the most elegant apartment of the car. It is finished in solid mahogany, with inlaid panels in the designs of cupids and costly woods from all corners of the earth, including the holy land. The butler's pantry, the kitchen, and the sleeping apartments for the servants, are models of elegance and comfort. To duplicate the car would cost $75,000 —it was a present to Mr. Talbot."

"Who own the most costly private cars in America?"

"That is hard to tell. Old Commodore Vanderbilt used to ride over his roads in a car that is thought too costly enough for a king. That car is now owned by the Pullman Parlor Car company, and is called the Iroquois, and any one may ride in it who chooses to pay the extra fare. People who do not own cars as many pinnies as the commodore did dollars, can ride in more costly and elegant cars than the elder Vanderbilt ever dreamed of. It cost at least $30,000 to build a handsome car nowadays; the Iroquois did not cost more than half that."

"What kind of a car has W. H. Vanderbilt?"

"He has a handsome coach; it is seventy-five feet long, nine feet wide, and about thirteen feet high. It has a kitchen in front; back of it is Mr. Vanderbilt's state-room. The dining-room, sitting-room and card-room come next, while the observatory, of course, is at the rear. The fittings are very luxurious, and on the sides of the car are four views, representing the New York Central's bridge at West Albany, the Grand Central depot at Forty-second street, Niagara Falls, and one other I don't exactly remember. The car cost a great deal of money."

"Do many people own private cars?"

"Very few. Patti, Nilsson, Mrs. Langtry, Mme. Gerster—just a few people like that, whose managers have built cars especially for them. Queen Victoria's private car is not so luxurious as the one recently finished at Utica for Mrs. Langtry, nor nearly so beautiful as the Manu bouloir car built for Miss. Field. The late Judge Henry E. Packer, of the Lehigh Valley, was having a magnificent car, the Minerva, made for him, when he died. It was all fitted up in mahogany, inlaid with carnation pinks and daisies, his favorite flowers. Parisian marble, cherry, bird's-eye maple and embossed leather were also used in its fittings, while all the hangings and tapestry were imported expressly for this purpose."

"How do American coaches compare with foreign ones?"

"There is nothing on the globe that can compare with our American rolling-stock. Any one who can pay his way in a Pullman can to-day ride as luxuriously as the emperor of India ever does. If a party of a dozen wanted to go to San Francisco, the rest is magnificent to which an hotel-car, with cooks and waiters, than it would be to ride in the ordinary coaches and dine at the eating-houses on the way."

"There are also hunting-cars, are there not?"

"About half a dozen. The Pullman company have two handsome ones, the Hank Winston and the Davy Crockett. The former was occupied by President Ravenal, of the Wilmington & Weldon railroad, and a party of friends during the Mardi Gras at New Orleans. They took the car right into the city and lived in it. The charge for these cars is $35 a day, which includes cook and waiters, all of whom are good cooks, however. These cars, though smaller than the ordinary Pullman coaches, accommodate ten persons very nicely, and are provided with gun-racks, kennels for the dogs, and all kinds of ingenious fixtures. They are in great demand. I am told that Jerome Marble, of Saratoga, has built a car of this kind for himself, and afterward had two more made to let by the day. President Arthur took his Florida fishing trip last year in a Pullman car. There are many couches made for the express use of families and private parties. These rent from $20 to $25 a day, and carry ten people. There are one or two cars for very high-toned parties at $85 a day, the fitting including a piano in the main parlor. These are used principally by California millionaires."

"How much money, in your opinion, is invested in private cars in America?"

"That is a difficult question to answer. Excludes of the Pullman company's cars, let us suppose there are sixty private cars at $25,000 each, thirty at $20,000 each, and 100 at $15,000 each; in all 190 cars, representing $3,000,000 each. That is a moderate estimate."

A Scarcity in the Family.

[Detroit Free Press.]

Little Florence C. was besieging her father to take her to visit her grandmother, who lived about a mile distant. To get rid of her importuning he said:

"It costs $10 every time we go to see grandma, Florence, and $10 don't grow on every bush."

"Neither do grandmas grow on every bush," answered the little girl promptly, and her logic was convincing. They went.

Good Will and a Garden Fence.

[Exchange.]

"Make it very strong," said close, Uncle John," said the lady of the manor to the negro who was building a new garden fence; "my Christianity can't stand the test of my neighbor's pigs and chickens." "I 'lieve you, missus," was the old man's emphatic response, "kase I bin allus notice dat dar was an end to all peace an' good will an' neighborliness, and 'tigion, whar dar warn't no fence."

Texas Siftings: A man can't realize how little his trust is till he tries her swindle a pill.

Two Hundred and Thirty Years.

[Chicago Herald.]

A correspondent writes that Count Feodor Tolstoi, a distant cousin of the famous Russian novelist, has just celebrated his 230th birthday. The old lady is in the enjoyment of good health, but complains of her deafness. Her hair is still long and plentiful, considering her age. She has outlived three husbands, and had a family of nineteen children, all of whom are now dead, the last one to die being a daughter of 99. She lives with one of her great-grandchildren, a man of 50.

The Result of Feeding.

[Boston Commercial Bulletin.]

An old economist's favorite doctrine is that "competition is the life of trade," but many manufacturers are finding that competition has become the death of profits. In search from a new theory passed—
And "Margaret" closed all forever.
But thought it wounded far more sweet
To call the baby "Margaret, too."
When years passed by the little pet
She called her "darling Margaret."
Next, Uncle Jack and Cousin Aggie
Used only "little Maggie."
And grandpapa the right name beg
To call the baby "Peggy."
[From "Margaret" to "Peggy."]
And now she's simply little "Peg."

Theology and Logic.

[Hartford Post.]

There is more theology and logic on tap in the brain of the small boy than in that of the dignified D.D., and it isn't every man who wears a seven and a quarter hat that gets the best of him.

"The lions didn't like Daniel, did they?" asked "Shavey Head," of his well-posted papa.

"Oh, yes, they did. The Lord made the lions like him, so they wouldn't hurt him."

"Well, when God makes me like anything I eat it, I do."

"Yes, yes. Go away, child. He made the lions hate Daniel."

"Then why didn't they bite him?"

"Well, I think that the people who are not so very wicked ought to go to the bad place only in the winter time."

Not Let a Woman Cross-Examine You.

"Let me give you my dying advice," said Rufus Choate to a young lawyer, with his accustomed solemnity, "never cross-examine a woman. It is of no use. They cannot distinguish the story they have once told; they cannot eliminate the part that is for you from that which is against you. They can neither combine, nor shade, nor qualify. They go for the whole thing, and the moment you begin to cross-examine one of them, instead of being bitten by a single rattlesnake you are bitten by a whole barrel full. Don't, excepting in a case absolutely desperate, dare to cross-examine a woman."

Temperance at Metuchen.

While the temperance reform is making such headway in the larger cities, the small places are by no means forgotten. The last place to feel the effects of the new awakening is Metuchen. At the suggestion of the ministers there a delegation numbering forty-six, of the Red Ribbon Club of Rahway visited that place on Sunday evening. The meeting was held in the Presbyterian Church which was crowded to its utmost capacity. Feeling ran high, and in less than twenty minutes over 200 names of signers for a red ribbon club were secured. The total number obtained during the evening was 124.

Last evening the Reform Club of this city visited Metuchen and held a meeting. The delegation on board of the Club Choristers, numbering about twenty-three, and the speakers, Mayor Maxson, John H. Flinch, John H. Sayres, Thomas Price, and Frank Dodge. About four hundred of the most intelligent people of the town of Metuchen and the surrounding country crowded the building. The meeting was very enthusiastic and an entire success. The speakers held the attention of the entire audie ce, not one leaving the hall while the addresses were being delivered.

While Mayor Maxson was speaking a lady presented him with a handsome bouquet. The meeting continued until 10:30, and 102 new signers were secured.

Base Ball.

The Crescent Base Ball Club, of this city, played the Jerseys at Jersey City yesterday afternoon, and were victorious by a score of 12 to 6. The game was very brilliant one on both sides. Malone pitched for the Crescents, and, as he is to become a regular resident of this city, will probably be their regular pitcher in the future.

The Crescents are to play the Rahway Athletic Club on the grounds above Richmond street the latter part of the week.

The Political Tournament.

The Republicans have signified their intention of securing a "Republican column" in THE NEWS, and the Democrats "Democratic column." From what we know of the gentleman to represent each side, we think they will be found among the ablest in their respective parties. The champion for the "Plainfield Knight" will probably throw down the gauntlet, eager for the fray. The Democrats are waiting for the challenge.

Mount Bethel Temperance.

The second temperance meeting was held in the Mount Bethel Church on Saturday night last under the leadership of ex-Councilman Lindsley. The following persons made addresses: Mr. Lindsley, the chairman, Thos. Price, John H. Sayers and Patrick Eagney. A number signers were added to the pledge.

A Local Artist.

Miss Ella Thorn, daughter of M. M. Thorn has just completed a fine painting, 18x20 inches, in oil, of a black and tan dog for a lady in White Plains, to whom it was to have been forwarded to-day. It stamps Miss Thorn as an artist of more than ordinary merit.

Jarrard's Stock Settled.

The New Brunswick House News says: "The Board of Freeholders this afternoon took the extraordinary action of authorizing the Finance Committee to accept the sum of $16,000 from Jarrard's bondsmen in full settlement of the $20,000 he stole."

Personal.

Dr. J. H. Vincent will speak on "The Every Day College" at the coming Fourth of July celebration at Rockaid Park, Woodstock, Conn.

Lecture by Rev. J. H. Hector.

Van Deventer Hall was crowded last evening on the occasion of the lecture by the Rev. J. H. Hector under the auspices of Winfield Scott Post, G. A. R. Commander Mattison presided and introduced the speaker in a few appropriate remarks.

The subject of the Rev. Mr. Hector's lectures was the story of his own life. In a very thrilling and telling manner he related how his mother and father escaped from slavery, going by the underground railway from Harper's Ferry, Va., to Canada, where the speaker was born. He gave a very amusing description of his early life and those who heard him will probably never forget his description of how he felt when he first saw a locomotive and had its first railroad ride. The story of his learning to drum was also highly appreciated by the audience. The speaker gave a very graphic description of the battle of Pittsburg Landing and the various "positions" he occupied during the battle. The lecture closed with the recitation of an original poem which received credit upon the writer.

Mr. Hector is a Methodist preacher and commander of a Grand Army Post in Pennsylvania. He is endeavoring by lecturing to obtain money enough to secure a year's schooling at Dickinson College. He has never had a day's schooling in his life, and yet is a very enjoyable lecture since that of last evening has evidenced. He is heard in Plainfield.

Malicious Mischief.

Plainfield, N. J., June 9, 1884.

To the Editor of The Evening News.

It is astonishing to see and hear of the impudence of the rising generation as put forth by the so-called "Boulevard Boys." They save themselves from arrest and yet commit blood stirring offenses. They play ball on the Sabbath and trespass on private property, only to steal fruit and anything else they can lay their hands upon.

A gang of these hafter-pieces threatened me in a row of cherry trees last Sunday, and when kindly asked to leave the trees broke out in a volley of curses and threats, and began to "show fight." A sharp dog assisted them off, but a sharper dose of pepper and salt will await their return.

The same gentlemen also owned the trees had a raid on his milk spring the previous night. He traces this theft to the boulevard boys and sixteen quarts of milk cannot be replaced without so no trouble. These boys are minors, by nature if not by name, so an arrest is useless.

Perhaps the offenders will be kind enough to bring back the twelve quart can and have it replenished. They will carry a heavier weight home with them. I hope the city authorities will not be satisfied in reprimanding the older ones of the gang, but will give them a taste of prison fare.

A Milk Dealer.

Another Accident on the Rail.

Sunday morning while freight train, No. 632, was running along on the Pennsylvania railroad, between Linden station and the tannery, a man was seen walking on the track just ahead of the train. The engineer blew his whistle, but a passing west-bound train must have drowned the sound, as the man made no attempt to get off the track. When the locomotive was on top of the man he discovered it, but it was too late, and, in another instant, he was under the wheels, the entire train passing over his body. The train stopped and his body, which was terribly mangled from the hip up, jut on the caboose's cushions and placed in the car, and brought to the Elizabeth depot, where Mr. Charles Meyers and County Physician Green were summoned, after which the remains were conveyed by Messrs. Ford and Stiles to their morgue. The man was dressed in a plain suit of dark-gray clothes, wore red cotton socks, buckled brogans, and a white, common straw hat, and was apparently about forty years of age. Nothing was found in his pockets save a paper of tobacco and a pretty shell pocket-book, with red lining. A full, but not long, beard and moustache covered his face. The remains have not as yet been identified. The crew of the train were given a hearing yesterday morning before Dr. Green, and a permit will be granted for the burial of the remains.

Journalistic.

The Plainfield Evening News comes to us bright and newsy. It seems to have got hold of the local matter of the town and is presenting it in a fresh and attractive way. It is independent in its politics, and is published by T. W. Morrison, who has had, it is understood, considerable journalistic experience in New Brunswick in connection with one of the dailies there. Plainfield is a pleasant city, and there is news material for a daily paper there, if it is worked up well, which it seems to be the intention of the Evening News to do. The best luck is wished to the new venture with the hope that it may become of value not only to Plainfield but to Union county at large.—Elizabeth Journal.

This Morning's Fire.

Shortly before three o'clock this morning the inhabitants of this peaceful vale were aroused from their slumbers by the doleful tones of the fire bell. The fire in question was a load of hay on Jackson avenue near Westervelt avenue which was standing within an inch of the residence of William Van Horn. The hay wagon was pulled away from the house, the hay dumped off, and the wagon saved. When the fire companies reached the spot the hay was nearly burned up, and as there was then no danger no water was used. Only the opportune discovery of the fire saved the house from damage.

The Concert at Dixon's.

The Plainfield Cornet Band gave a fine concert last evening at Dixon's Ice Cream Garden, 35 Front street, attracting a large number of people, who greatly enjoyed the music, the program being as published yesterday.

Frederick Huitz, while at work on Matthesson & Weicher's sugar refinery in Jersey City, Saturday, fell from a scaffold and landed on the head of John Casseus, a boy, who had his thigh broken, but Huitz escaped injury.

While Pierson Cooke, a farmer near Hope, Warren county, was plowing the other day, the share turned up a portion of some large antediluvian animal. It weighs 3 1-4 pounds. A horn measuring 1 1-2 feet, together with many other parts of the mammoth, were subsequently found.

The leader of the Salvation Army detachment stationed at Keyport has been held for trial on the charge of stealing a sign from the front of a merchant's store. When the Marshall undertook to arrest him there was a pitched battle between the two, which greatly elated a large portion of the town's population.

What is Thought of the Art Museum.

The Newark Evening News speaking editorially of the Job Male Library and Art Museum of this city, an account of which was given in our issue of last Thursday, says:

Plainfield is only a very small city, but it has in it a few men with public spirit and open hands, who can help him and do more than some who make equally good professions in larger places. The building which is now in process of erection there for the purpose of a library and art museum, when completed, will be a worthy memorial of their energy and liberality. The structure will cost between twenty and thirty thousand dollars. It is to be given to the city by ex-Mayor Job Male when twenty thousand dollars shall have been raised for the purchase of books and works of art. The scheme originated less than a year ago, and already eleven thousand dollars and a large number of valuable art treasures have been contributed. This institution will be named after its founder, and the people of Plainfield will do well to keep him in remembrance. Such a work is enduring—not like monuments of marble or pillars of stone—but as a thing instinct with life and vitality. Its work and its influence will be as extended as the spirit in which it was founded is broad.

Friendly Visit of Knights.

Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, Knights of Pythias, of this city, visited Lodge of the Castle, No. 82, at Somerville last evening. After business was over the Somerville knights escorted the Plainfielders to Brother Strauss' ice cream saloon where a fine table was spread with all the delicacies of the season. The visitors and their entertainers enjoyed themselves until the small hours of the morning. The Somerville knights have the best wishes of the Plainfield knights for their future prosperity and welfare.

On returning through Bound Brook the knights aroused the gipsy encampment there, and secured some benign benediction from the gipsy queen. Of course, on Monday night he should do this and that and the other thing; all of which being faithfully performed the party reached home in season to turn out to this morning's fire.

To Our Friends.

The Reform Club of Plainfield having realized generous cash contributions sufficient to warrant the Directors with the property formerly known as the Second Baptist Church, corner of Second street and Central avenue, that city, and fitting and furnishing likewise available, chiefly through the noble exertions of the Christian Temperance ladies of Plainfield and equip the purchased building when properly altered and repaired for the practical use of the Club, respectfully though urgently appeal to the liberality and kindly feelings of the citizens of Plainfield and vicinity for additional means to fully complete such needful alterations and repairs.

The good work already accomplished by the Reform Club, under the appointing audio of Divine Providence and the still greater work awaiting future efforts, certainly commend it to the favorable consideration and support of every friend of humanity.

The pecuniary demands made upon the public for various laudable objects, cause hesitancy on the part of the Club to solicit further aid, but vailing as its members do the all important Temperance reformation they are striving to permanently establish, emboldens them to thus ask and induces them to believe, that early and substantial encouragement will follow the asking.

Donations to the aforesaid purpose to the extent of individual ability and inclination, will be thankfully received and acknowledged by the officers of the Club, or either member of its Executive or Subscription Committee, the names of whom are hereunto appended.

THE POLITICAL BOOMS.

Preparing for the Democratic Convention at Saratoga.

Candidate Flower on Civil Service Reform—Ex-Speaker Randall as a Dark Horse—Mr. Bayard's Boom, and Other Notes.

SARATOGA, N. Y., June 17.—There was a large arrival of delegates last night to attend the Democratic convention, which convenes here in Town hall to-morrow noon. Roswell P. Flower is here, and is located at the United States hotel. He is accompanied by his family, and his lieutenants, Lester B. Faulkner and James Faulkner, jr., of Livingston county, are on hand. "Dan" Magone, of St. Lawrence county, is here in the Flower interest. Hiscock, and others, can be relied on to be forced by a numerous gathering of the governor's supporters.

Mr. Flower, in conversation with a number of friends at the hotel piazza, declared himself in opposition to civil service reform. He claims to have 227 of the 384 delegates. The "reform" element contending this with considerable force, emphasis and formidable array of statistical assurances. The Dan Manning party, favoring the Cleveland boom, claim to have 200 votes in their own way and hint that from the making of the temporary chairman to the selection of the national delegates they will continue in the majority. Senator Hill is expected to-day. Contesting delegations the Manning party will recognize those supporting the Cleveland boom.

This evening at 8 o'clock the state committee will meet at the United States hotel. Their chief work will be the making up of the temporary rolls and the choice of a temporary chairman. Hon. "Tom" Platt, "the shine" has agreed on Assemblyman William E. Smith, of Clinton, for the last-named position, and Colonel George Haid, of Albany, for permanent chairman.

The Stard Boom.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Senator Bayard's friends are not so hopeful as they were about his receiving the nomination next month. They claim that the publication of his "open" speech in favor of free trade is likely to injure, rather than promote his chances, and Mr. Dana's course in bringing Mr. Bayard's name prominently forward, coupled with his war upon Cleveland, is not sufficient. They say that The Sun editor is doing his best to kill Mr. Bayard off in the interest of Gov. Cleveland. Mr. Bayard himself, it is reported, does not appear to be making a secure the nomination, and has talked about it quite freely to a number of his personal friends. Some dispatches say: "He does not understand why his course during the war should be used against him at this time, and he is at a loss to understand the statements of gentlemen who have recently declared by him that it will not do for the Democratic party to take up as their standard bearer one who cannot show that he was a thick and thin Union man during the war, and was earnestly in favor of suppressing the rebellion by force of arms. Mr. Bayard's friends generally admit their course is open to attack in behalf, and if possible to secure his nomination at Chicago, but at the same time they recognize the fact that the drift of opinion is against him and largely in favor of Gov. Cleveland."

In reference to Mr. Bayard's speech at Dover, The Washington Post (Dem.) has an apparently inspired editorial heading, a speech as "Mr. Bayard as a Patriot," in which it attributes the following comments from Mr. Bayard himself: "My speech at Dover was made in deference to the wishes of others of the, battle of Bull Run. It was a time of dangerous excitement and distress. Highhanded arbitrary arrests were being executed against good and law-abiding citizens of our state. Arbitrary arrests were freely and openly threatened. It was such a speech as the occasion demanded. Such a speech as I would deliver again under similar circumstances."

An Opinion from The Thunderer.

LONDON, June 17.—The London Times says in the present state of dissatisfaction a great opportunity for the Democrats. In an editorial discussing the political situation in the United States it says: "If the Democrats are not completely destitute of tact and good sense they should turn the discontent in the Republican ranks to political account. Dissatisfaction among the independent section of the Republican party has been provoked in former occasions by the contempt with which the professional politicians treated their claims and complaints, but it has never risen to such a height as to menace the Republican party with the secession of a large and compact body of voters led by men of the highest character and capacity in the Democratic side. The Democrats must perceive that they can only hope to win the wavering Republicans by selecting leaders of the highest character and by adopting a well-defined and courageous policy. It would be curious if the selection of Blaine, who possesses great claims than any other presidential candidate, with one or two exceptions, since the earliest days of the republic, should result in the defeat of the Republican party, after a thirteen years' ascendency of a quarter of a century."

Opinions of Southern Delegates.

CHICAGO, June 17.—Two delegates from the far south to the National Democratic convention are at the Grand Pacific. They are Capt. C. A. Johnston, of Columbus, and W. B. Barker, of Macon, Miss. Capt. Johnston says that the delegates from Mississippi will come to Chicago unpledged. Bayard, he says, is very favorably regarded by the southern Democrats, but he has no stronger hold upon them than McDonald has.

In regard to the Republican boast, that the states of South Carolina, Florida and West Virginia can be carried for Blaine and Logan, Mr. Barker says he does not think they can carry any one of them. Florida is the most doubtful of the three, but he thinks it will be carried by the Democrats. The negroes, Capt. Johnston said, would not vote. They were not carried, intimidated or driven from the polls. They had simply quit voting.

Ex-Speaker Randall as a Dark Horse

WASHINGTON, June 17.—The friends of ex-Speaker Randall, while they say that he does not propose actively to oppose any candidate for the Democratic nomination, are confident that he stands an excellent chance of being selected. They base their belief upon the drift of events and the prompt advantage of any deadlock which may occur. They do not believe that he can go into an active fight now and win, but that his chances is to come to the front as a "dark horse" in the event of two or three candidates showing great strength, and there being an unwillingness on the part of either of them to go to the support of the others. In such a condition of affairs should prevail, Mr. Randall's friends feel very hopeful that he may be when up as a compromise candidate.

Blooms and the Second Place.

NEW YORK, June 17.—Gen. Slocum has returned to Washington and is reported silent in regard to his presidential boom. A friend of his says that he has not changed his views in the least. He is willing to accept the second place on the ticket, but will not be a candidate for the first place. He is not willing to be used as a tool by any one, and will not allow his name to be used in connection with any candidate. Despite Slocum's refusal to take the second place on the ticket, it is said that he will be made to stand for the first place, and the vice president with that of McDonald as president on the line of those who believe that the Saratoga convention will be divided between Cleveland and Flower.

THE STORM IN MARYLAND.

Crops, Bridges and Fences Washed Away—Wheat Badly Damaged.

WESTMINSTER, Md., June 17.—A destructive storm of rain and wind visited the county of Carroll county on Friday and Saturday. At Sams Creek rain fell in torrents for hours. The mill-dam of Isaac T. Nelson was washed away and the bridge carrying the Emmanitsburg mails and logs. Rushing down the valley, the surging waters and debris crossed away the dam at Isaac Cartzendafner's mill, and also the dam of Dr. De Nillis' mill was torn out. Great damage was done to fields bordering on the creek. Crops, hedges and fences were washed away, and the current was so strong that persons were compelled to move out of their houses. Near Deaning's post office, Augustus Zushe and his little boy were swept away with the stream while attempting to cross on a foot bridge. The carriage was demolished. The rising waters began to get out and by extraordinary exertion, Zushe saved himself and his son. Morgan's rise was higher than forsixteen years. Sebastian Bowers had all his fences washed away and lost a great deal of wheat. His land was badly damaged, and fifteen sheep were swept into the stream. Conrad Bower's fences were washed away and the soil washed off his large cornfield. Bloom's mill-dam on Pipe's run was torn out, also the dam at Dunbaugh's paper mill. At the latter, the water came up in the mill and destroyed vats and rolls. All the bridges on Pipe's run were swept off. At Taneytown the water was eight feet deep at his gate. Conrad Schmaltzer, house, five miles from Westminster, was struck by lightning and demolished. Mr. Schmaltzer and his father were severely hurt by the shock.

A HORRIBLE DEATH.

Buried Alive in Quicksand by the Caving in of a Well.

WHEELING, W. Va., June 17.—A well fifty feet deep and about thirty feet in diameter, intended for the reception of a new pump, has been in progress of excavation for some time at the farm of Jacob Ritz. The pump works, ten men being employed. As the men reached the allotted depth they were removed by quicksand, and as a cave was feared a number of planks and the heavy casing lining of the well. About noon yesterday the soakage of the water stopped, and this indicated trouble. The men were ordered out. They stood around the edge watching until 3:30 P. M. when suddenly the timbers gave way on all sides with a crash, and the well enlarged to a diameter of fifty or seventy feet. The men sprang back, but two of their number, John Smith, of Wellsville, and Pat Scallon of East Liverpool, were too late and were carried down buried alive. After the first suspense was over the workmen went to rescue their comrades and in two hours had reached their entrance. They dug and dug, but failed to secure his remains. Scallon's wife and family of four children are at Wellsville.

Are They Stahl's Legs.

PHILADELPHIA, June 17.—While a boy was strolling along Wissahickon creek, near Ches nut hill, yesterday afternoon, he discovered in the water a human leg in a very rotten something. He sent his dog into the water, but the brute refusing to touch it, he called a companion and the two secured the leg, bathing it in the stream. The boys then carried the leg to the station house. An officer then proceeded to the spot and a few minutes' search discovered another leg, similarly done up. Both limbs were found within 200 yards of the spot where was found the body supposed to be that of Stahl, the man who is missing butcher, and it is believed they belong to that body. This morning they were turned over to the coroner, who will proceed to investigate their identity.

DOUBLE DEATH.

Panicky Feeling Regarding Royal Visits Proves Fatal.

A Father's Horror and Madness After Killing His Son.

An Accidental Shot At Ex-Khedive's Throat.

LONDON, June 17.—Events have proven that the police were right and the people of London are still in a panicky condition regarding possible dynamite conspiracies. A chemist, working in his laboratory at Greenwich, Kent, was killed by an explosion, which resulted in an explosion and blew off his left hand. Straight way the police and the press reported that another dynamite outrage had been attempted. The police seem to be primarily to blame for spreading the false alarm. They refused the reporters access to the wounded man at the hospital to which he was taken, and some of the officers, with a view doubtless to magnifying the importance of their discovery, gave out that a dynamiter had been experimenting with what was manufacturing explosives with which to make another attack upon some of London's public buildings. The simple facts of the case are that the man in question Mr. Faid Ward, a reputable chemist and electrical inventor, who was for the ten years preceding the death last June of Prof. William Spottiswoode, president of the Royal society. His principal assistant, Mr. Ward, was setting a new detonator and the material with which he was experimenting being dryer than is necessary for safety, the explosion Mr. Ward was badly injured, but a little boy who was in the same room at the time of the explosion escaped unharmed.

It Was of a Peculiar Pattern.

LONDON, June 17.—Another incident illustrative of the nervousness of the police regarding dynamite has come to light. An American gentleman who was about to stop at a hotel in Waterloo road, sent on his luggage in advance. Among the pieces was a large trunk of a peculiar pattern, such as had never before been seen by the hotel people. They at once suspected a plot to blow up the hotel, and, without further suspicions, turned over the suspected box to the police. The inspector in charge of the station fully shared the fears of the hotel people, and caused the box to be carried to the police barracks in the Strand. When the owner of the luggage arrived he became furious upon finding that his best trunk had been put to such base uses as that of an infernal machine. He unlocked and opened the trunk and showed that its contents were of a most innocent character, including some handsome garments and many valuable books and papers, had been utterly ruined by the bath. He now proposes to bring suit against the hotel proprietor to recover the value of his ruined property.

A Shocking Tragedy.

LONDON, June 17.—A shocking and unique tragedy is reported from Frances. The principal actors are Mr. Anglicus, a native of Belgium, who had been established for some years as a merchant at Calais, and had by some of the best families in that place, and was a widower until recently, when he married a dashing young lady belonging to one of the bourgeoise families of Calais. Mr. Anglicus had by his former wife a daughter nearly as old as her new stepmother, and the two young women failed to agree. Miss. Anglicus appears to have been tyrannical and overbearing, and the unlucky girl was retained in all her harshness by her husband, who was foolishly infatuated with his wife and deaf to all complaints of his daughter. Finally Miss. Anglicus could no longer endure the misery of her home and fled. Her father pursued and found her at a small hotel where she had taken refuge with the intention of remaining there until she could procure a situation as a governess or companion. M. Anglicus implored his daughter to return, but the young lady steadily refused, and in the heat of the discussion she applied a horrible epithet to her stepmother. This terribly enraged M. Anglicus who drew the knife in Paris, which he used in the duel, and plunged it into her back. The aim was deadly, and the blow so forcible that the weapon passed entirely through the young lady's body, its point projecting from her left breast. She died almost instantly, in the arms of her murderer, who had no sooner committed the fatal deed than he appeared overcome with horror and remorse. He threw himself upon the body of his dead child, embracing her with passionate caresses, and, tearing open her dress, looked upon the wound, from which the blood was pouring, and vainly tried to stanch the flow with his hands. In the meantime the alarm had spread the people of the house, who summoned the police, and had the murderer arrested. The story of his crime soon became known on the streets, and a large crowd gathered in front of the prefecture, had great difficulty in preventing his being lynched by the indignant citizens.

An American Casual Shot.

BORDENTOWN, June 17.—A balloon ascension drew together a large throng of people in the Place Quinconce yesterday. Among the number were Mr. George W. Roosevelt, United States consul at Paris, and Suddenly a French soldier aimed his pistol at the American and fired. The bullet passed through Mr. Roosevelt's hat, cutting his head and knocked him over. The wounded man pointed out the soldier who fired the shot, but the latter, with two companions, escaped during the excitement. It is supposed that the soldier mistook the round hat worn by Mr. in civilian's dress, against whom he had a grudge. Gen. Dumont, the commander of Bordeaux, has ordered an inquiry to be made.

He was encouraged in this endeavor by the knowledge that Prince Bismarck's constant policy was one which contemplated peace with France.

MARRIED IN HASTE AND REPENTED AT LEISURE.

A Baltimore Bridegroom Deserts His Bride on the Wedding Day.

BALTIMORE, Md., June 17.—A wedding, almost as interesting as that which took place at the boarding house of Mrs. Adams, No. 87 North Charles street. The participants are both well-known and highly respectable. The groom was Mr. Gwyn, one of the most estimable young men of Charleston, S. C. The bride was the daughter of wealthy parents who usually reside in Richmond, Va., but who recently went to Poughkeepsie, N. Y., for the summer. The courtship of the two began in their childhood days, and ended in love when they became engaged. It was arranged for the wedding to take place the middle of last week, at Poughkeepsie. At the first of the week Mr. Gwyn left for that place to claim his bride. He stopped in Baltimore to see some friends, but just after his arrival here he was seriously prostrated with rheumatism, being unable to move from his bed. Mr. Gwyn was obliged to telegraph the condition of affairs to Poughkeepsie, necessitating a postponement of the marriage.

All arrangements had been made for a brilliant event at the summer home of the bride, and everything was in readiness for the ceremony except the groom, news of whose illness created consternation when his condition did not improve. The young lady then determined to come to Baltimore and started from Poughkeepsie on Friday, accompanied by her father. She had forwarded news of her intention, and the ladies at the boarding house, kindly and elegantly fitted up the room for the bride to receive her future husband. Saturday the groom was propped up in bed, and in the presence of the bride's father the marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. T. Murkland, pastor of the Franklin Street Presbyterian church. The bride is very bright and beautiful, with blonde features and pleasing manners, and the groom does not look as if he could be so easily overcome with rheumatism. He is rather tall, good-looking and agreeable. Matrimony seems to have baffled him, for he was well enough Sunday to walk around.

ALLEGED BRIBERY.

A Toronto Alderman Creates a Sensation at a Meeting of the Council.

TORONTO, Ont., June 17.—A great sensation was created in the council last night during a discussion as to the acceptance of a tender for a new pumping engine. In speaking for a question of privilege, Alderman Bonfield charged that a certain firm had approached him and solicited to vote in favor of the bid of the American firm of Holly company, of Lockport, N. Y. He read an affidavit in support of the charge, in which Messrs. Pearson and Lovell, Pearson's brother-in-law, who, he alleged, had promised him money for his vote, and to sufficiently recompense him for loss of reputation should he be defeated at the polls next election. Alderman Davies followed by stating that Limerick, Holly's agent, had also approached him in a new pump for his brewery—for what purpose had to be inferred. Alderman Hastings stated that he had also been approached. Upon motion, the matter was referred to the county judge, who will take evidence under oath and report to the council.

A meeting of disgraceful meeting ever held by a public body here. There were several fights among the members, who called each other liars and other hard names, while the crowd alternately hissed and cheered.

A CHILD'S STRANGE PERIL.

Carried Out Into Deep Water by a Supposed Dog Mate.

HOBOKEN, N. J., June 17.—As Christian Hanselman, of 280 Garden street, was enjoying the salt water breeze with his 4-year-old daughter Minnie, at Elysian Park yesterday afternoon he was approached by James Dempsey, a blacksmith, of 168 Newark street, who presented the little one with a sweet piece. Dempsey, it is said, is the grandfather to allow her to walk with him.

On the old man's refusal he grabbed the child and ran into the river, where he remained, with the water above his waist, holding the child in his arms. Supposing the child was going to be drowned the old man at once left the bank and pursued McDermott, who responded, and after considerable persuasion from him. Dempsey delivered the child on dry land. It was with great difficulty that Hanselman could restrain the fiery prisoner fought violently. Dempsey will be examined as to his sanity.

A Boy's Suicide.

BUFFALO, June 17.—While the Buffalo Field club were holding a picnic at West Falls, this county, some boys of the party came across the body of Frank Parker, who was hanging from a tree in a secluded spot. It is believed to be the body of Frank Parker, who some three years ago, in company with another boy named Frank Woodhall, stole money $70, belonging to John McMillan, a farmer, who employed Parker. The boys went to Olean, a village, and spent a portion of the money. Parker's parents chided their son, who next day left home, fearing arrest, and was supposed to have left the country. The finding of an old rope still dangled from the tree beneath which the body was found. A jackknife, a small sum of money and a pair of cuff buttons, believed to have been Parker's, were found. The coroner's verdict was to the effect that young Parker committed suicide.

News of Mrs. Woodhull.

LONDON, June 17.—An impression prevails among Americans, says Galignani's Messenger, that Lady Colin Campbell was formerly Mrs. Victoria Woodhull. Lady Colin is an American, and her maiden name was Blood; this being the name of Mrs. Woodhull by which husband a confusion of individualities has arisen. Mrs. Woodhull, on her first appearance as a lecturer in London, some years ago, attracted considerable attention on account of Mr. John Biddulph Martin, banker, of Lombard street; and any fine day you can see the pleasant and amiable face of the new Mrs. Martin by driving in the park with her sister, Tennie C. Claflin, as they sit together in their comfortable carriage and roll toward their residence, Stratton, the Courtfield Gardens, over the smooth avenues of Hyde Park.

Had His Coffin Ready.

BANGOR, Me., June 17.—Joseph Folsom, a pensioner of the war of 1812, has died at Lowell, aged 110. He was a hard drinker, an inveterate smoker, and one of the worst swearers and gamblers of his town. When he first received his pension, ten years ago, he ordered a hard wood coffin make, got into it, and as it was a little too small, had a quarrel with the carpenter and made him discount $30 from the bill. The coffin was stowed away, and Folsom went to another carpenter and had a new one. A few weeks before he died he moved into the coffin, which had been kept for a decade, was taken sick and died. He was buried in the coffin.

THE NATIONAL CAPITAL

Universal Approval of the New Newspaper Postal Rate.

Meeting of the Committee on the Shipping Bill—Departure of the German Minister—The Fitz-John Porter Bill.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—The new rate of newspaper postage meets with universal approval, and the officers of the post office department are highly pleased that it has been brought about without any fuss. It is more appreciated when the public learns that it secures what with what will be a 1 cent postage paper, 1/2 cent rate, would require two cents postage, the annoyance to business men and the public generally in being obliged to affix such client stamps, and yet not one too great a sum by over payment, has been secured. A newspaper, when the postage was not fully prepaid, invariably found its way into the postoffice waste basket, and, knowing this the sender of a newspaper which he was expecting anxious should rush its destination always had to prefix sufficient postage stamps to insure its delivery. It was not like a letter which is sent so long as one rate of postage is paid. The newspaper had to be prepaid in full or it did not go. Under the new rate almost any newspaper, including a two sized supplement, may be sent for one rate. The next reform in order is the extension of the limit of weight of letters. The present allowance for one rate of postage to an ounce. While the bulk of the letters received in the mails average less than half an ounce quite a large number weigh more than that, and an extra charge is collected, which, with the time consumed and the labor required in affixing the stamps, etc., does not yield enough revenue to make it profitable to the department, and it would be to the advantage of all concerned was the limit extended.

The Shipping Bill.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—The conference on the shipping bill met last night. An agreement was reached on everything except the clause providing for free ships and the question whether the bill should apply to the trip each way, to ships of America registered for carrying the mails between the United States and foreign ports, better known as the Pacific Mail steamship bill. The senate conferees proposed to compromise by striking out both clauses, the former having originated in the house and the latter in the senate. The house conferees would not consent to this, and, without reaching a conclusion, the conference adjourned. Another meeting will probably be held to-day.

The $250,000 Appropriation Bill.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Gov. A joint session of the committees on appropriations and foreign affairs will be held on Wednesday to consider the matter. While Gov. Curtis will not disclose the contents of the communication, he admits that it refers to the maintenance of the Virginius case.

The Postal Savings Bank Subject.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—The large number of bank failures and consequent financial disaster to many whose entire savings have been swallowed up have directed more attention than ever to the subject of postal savings bank, which, backed by the government, would offer to those whose savings are not of a large amount a safe and profitable way of taking care of them. Bills have been introduced into both the senate and house providing for a system of postal savings banks, and hearings have been had before the committees, but the possibility that the scheme will be able to command greater attention.

RIOT AND PANIC.

Fifteen Minutes' Personal Experience in the Riot of '63.

Jim Fisk in Wall street During the Celebrated "Black Friday."

The Cabin Behind the Counter.

[Joe Howard in Boston Herald.]

I recall three times of popular excitement in this city, you, four. The panic of 1857, when all the banks suspended. Black Friday, when Jay Gould and Jim Fisk and the Grants and the Corbins were, what is vaguely called "in trouble," the riots of 1863, and the latest runpus. In 1857 I wasn't an competent to judge as I was under age but I recall very vividly the merchants rushing to and fro, the harrrowing of the banks, and the paleviseged men who bent wisely against the iron shutters. I think it was about that time that Nathaniel P. Banks, in many respects the best out-of-door speaker I ever listened to, addressed ourselves from the steps of what is now the the custom house, then called the merchants' exchange. He made a great impression upon me at this time, and I thought he certainly was to be one of the great men of the nation. I don't exactly know why he isn't.

THE RIOTS OF 1863.

But to return to the popular demonstrations. The riots of '63 naturally made a great impression upon my mind, because I was a sufferer at the hands of a mob, and I recall with absolute vividness at this present now 21 years later—the expressions upon their countenances, what they said, how they acted, the way I was first attacked, how I fell while being beaten, how I acted when I came to, covered with blood, hat gone, watch, chain, pocketbook and breastpin stolen. I was left for dead upon the street, where I had been pulled and gauled and kicked and beaten for ten or fifteen minutes, and where, doubtless, the cheerful work of death would have been accomplished had not some friendly Irish of St. Patrick set fire to a brownstone house a block or two away, whither the infuriated crowd rushed with the same zeal as they had rushed at me, because the majority stopped between a crowd of roughs and as inoffensive old man, who was powerless to help himself. You see, this was in the streets of '63 and the merchants, clerks, brokers, men of affairs, well dressed, but pale and intensely eager in their curiosity and in their desire to participate in anything and everything on. This crowd was the lowest of the low, poor, unkempt, dirty, pipe smoking, with soiled garments, and dirty hands, and filthy language, and violent actions; in other words, great, coarse brutes, intent upon pillage and disaster. Whew! I never shall forget them; they looked like so many wolves, each eager for something to tear. The spirit, whatever that particular appetite might be for the moment.

JIM FISK ON BLACK FRIDAY.

The crowds in Wall street and in its vicinity, as you recollect Black Friday, when Jim Fisk rode down town in his highfalutin coach, with women by his side, and four horses dragging him in triumph through the streets were very large. There were not only the bankers and brokers and merchants and men of affairs, but there were also men who had made up their minds that this thing had gone far enough, and that something must be done and should be done. There were not alone the speculators who make Wall street their home, and the vegetable merchants who deal in that vicinity, but there were men who had been lured there by promises of "big interests on small investments," men who had seen their little all expand and expand and expand, until they had begun to believe in the golden truths of the bubble, when suddenly it burst. There were there for revenge, and they meant to have it, and it would have been a very cold day if, after once getting within sight of Fisk, he had made his appearance in public. The crowd on Wednesday was a curious crowd. I remarked to a friend who walked with me, "Why, this crowd doesn't look as though it cared for a panic. I don't see a person here who looks as though he had $25 to his name, let alone a bank account of any amount." I went into the Adams Express company, where I found Mr. Dinsmore, the president, Mr. John Hoey, Mr. Clarence Seward, and several other gentlemen chatting pleasantly about the opera, the coming races, and some big sales of real estate that had been made. Now and then a boy would come in and report another bank gone, another firm failed, last report the announcement of "too bad," "I am sorry," "I feared that something of that sort would happen," no special attention was paid.

ON THE STREET.

I went into a number of banking houses, and found them all cool, collected and calm, a little worried about this customer or that, perhaps, but conscious of rectitude, they presented the scene of carelessly open the page of observation, and took the whole scene in. Who, then, you say, were those people upon the street? Well, I declare I don't know. In the first place, I believe every thief in town was there; certainly, all the detectives I know of were on guard. There were an innumerable number of half-grown boys, smoking their filthy cigarettes, expectorating their almost as filthy tobacco juice, a great many women, any number of country looking people. Every bankshit board was surrounded, and people would stand with mouths open for hours looking at the closed shutters of a bank, of whose very existence the day before they were entirely ignorant. Messenger boys, peddlers, lads selling extras, yelling their very heads off, with vociferations, people who looked like drivers—in short a strange and odd indeed were the crowds, that people who were in the habit of going up and down Wall street looked at them with apprehension, and wondered what was behind it; there'd some interest, obviously, in the banks, certainly no money in them, and they presented a curious phase of New York society. For some weeks to come, fortunes were lost each day, but I have come to the conclusion that fortunes made with the turn of the hands upon a clock, in an hour's time, are much more likely to be dissipated or frittered away or lost than those which have a more toilsome coming together. Each crowd has its individual aspect, and the unique and peculiar as the attributes of which it is composed. Queer, isn't it? We had a tough time, but it might have been worse!

The Mr. and the Conductor.

[Chicago News.]

A ragged and dirty little Mr. was found riding on the truck under a passenger car.

"What are you doing there?" asked the conductor.

"Trying to get to the north."

"Where are you from?"

"Kentucky."

"Why didn't you stay there?"

"How could I? I've looked the state over from one end to the other and found nobody who had any use for me. Col. and Maj. and Capt. and Judge have got up a combination against me and I can't get a job in the state."

RINGING THE BABY.

Whistling Mesmerism of the Awful Want of Originality.

[Detroit Free Press.]

There is one young couple in this city who are ready to open an exchange where they may get rid of some surplus babies they have on hand, or, rather, borrow on hand, because the hand is quite too small for the jewelry. There is a new baby in the house and before it was a week old they received a small box from California, and upon opening it found a tiny gold ring with "Welcome, little stranger" engraved on the inside. It's much too large for the baby and not quite large enough to fit me," said the young mother, plaintively; but on the principle that it would keep after the baby, and obviated a corner of thanks to the sender.

The next day the baby's aunt sent it a lovely little ring set in pearl, with "Our pet" inscribed on the inside.

Then its grandmother sent a ring made out of a piece of gold found in dear grandpa's pocket after his death, and it had two sets of initials and a little heart between. It's cute.

But the next ring was from a school friend, and was a wide band of gold with a quarter dollar bangle. "Of such is the kingdom of Heaven," was inscribed in quite discernible with a microscope, however.

Then the baby's uncle got home from New York, and when he had kissed the dear arrival he took something out of his vest pocket.

"I couldn't see a thing to get the kid except this," he said, as he passed a tiny box. "I know nobody would think of giving such a little shaver a ring, so I got one. Hello, sis, what's the matter?"

The young mother had fainted. But they restored her in time to see her dear old Aunt Letitia, who had stopped over on her way to the Pacific coast to see that blessed baby.

"Not a ring on her dear, sweet little hands," said the old lady, reproachfully. Lizzy didn't forget her tootsy-wootsy." And she slipped a canoe-circlet on the small red finger. It has a Greek word engraved on it which means "Heaven."

"There's the postman's ring," said the nurse one day as she looked out of the window.

"He's bringing another off-ring to the baby! I know it," said the pale young mother.

But they carry them to another room now, where they are numbered, sorted out and put away in proper order, shining monuments to the awful want of originality, which is usually possessed by the friends of a first baby.

Webster's Two Tariff Speeches.

[Youth's Companion.]

About the year 1845 Webster was invited to a great tariff dinner in Philadelphia. The immense hall of the old Chinese museum was engaged for the occasion and profusely decorated with flags and banners. It seemed as if the manufacturers of the whole city were present. At that time no Philadelphia paper had a corps of reporters at all competent to make the quick work of a two-hours' speech, and the editors were obliged to report verbatim with the requisite dispatch for an early issue. The consequence was that it was past 10 o'clock the next morning before the Whig papers appeared.

There was a saucy little Democratic sheet published then, called The Pennsylvanian, edited by the late Col. Forney, which played a nice little trick upon an expectant public. The editor hunted up Mr. Webster's great speech on the tariff delivered in 1824, which was a thorough-going argument for free trade, in opposition to the general oration of the evening before. Col. Forney struck off a large edition of the speech as a supplement to his paper, heading it, in his largest type, "Webster's Great Speech on the Tariff." The newsboys made the town ring with this cry soon after sunrise. Horace Greeley, who had come over from New York on purpose to hear the speech, and was anxious to get an early copy for publication in The New York Tribune, rushed out of his hotel and bought one of them. Many thousands of copies were sold before the joke was discovered. The Democrats were naturally in great good humor to see Mr. Webster thus ranged against himself. The Whigs could not be expected to relish the joke, least of all Mr. Greeley, who vented his anger in unmeasured language. Mr. Webster himself, when he read a joke, took it in good part, laughed heartily, and said to the friend who handed him the paper, "I think Forney has printed a much better speech than the one I made last night."

The Sailor's Regret Came Pearl.

Cincinnati Enquirer.

The creoles in Havana are famous for their fine game cocks, and for a long time they won great sums of money from strangers, especially sailors, who would pit American birds against them.

But one day they met their match. It was a Sunday morning, and a sailor strolled into the pit, with his bird carefully muffled up in a coffee-sack, as usual. He waited until the very best bird in Havana—a black cock, weighing something over five pounds—was struck. The owner of the cock called out: "Who will fight me? I will match my bird against anything that has wings."

"Here you are," said the sailor, stepping with his bird into the pit.

The whole audience roared when they saw that bird. It was a sorry-looking specimen, sunburnt and bare. The sailor backed it with all the wages that he had received for his voyage—something like $100—and had no trouble in getting bets at big odds.

But all at first by the sailor's bird, reached out a single claw, and, catching the black by the back, pinned him to the ground as though he had been nailed there. For a minute he stared at him, and then with his other claw he tore the black's head off as easily as you would break a cigar in two.

The sailor's bird was nothing more nor less than a bald-eagle, clipped into the shape of a rooster, with a comb pasted on his bald head and some cock's feathers stuck into his wings and tail. He left in such hot haste that all the Caucasians in the house were left behind without finding out about the fraud.

A Clever Man.

[New York Independent.]

When Mohammed Ahmed made his triumphant entry into El Obeid, he called on the Christians to change their religion and acknowledge him as the Messiah whose coming was foretold in holy writ. One of the French Sisters of Mercy, stepping forward, replied that it was quite true that one of the Messiah would make himself known by his miracles, and he would remove all doubts as to his identity by kindly performing one for the benefit of herself and her companions. The Mahdi answered that her request was perfectly reasonable, but that the time for the working of miracles had not yet come. Meanwhile, however, he would take the missionaries under his protection, with a view to preparing them for conversion pending the day when he would declare himself by his exploits. The clergyman then, in all probability, saved herself and her fellow Christians by this clever reply, which placed Mohammed Ahmed in an awkward dilemma.

Sandwiches and the Penis.

One of the sights in connection with the the panic was the way in which the sandwiches, sketched on Delmonico's counters, disappeared. The waiters were in a fainting condition by the time the exchange closed.

Weaving of Glass.

Weaving of glass is the latest of the marvels" exhibited at an official of the lighthouse board last evening. "Where shall we put it?" he asked. "Where is the best lighthouse if they could log it off. We had a case of a similar sort several years ago. The whole of the Pelican island, and I was sent down to the Pelican island, and I was sent down to the Pelican island, and I took with me a keg of soda to drill out the channel in case it had to be blown off. I hired a boat and went out to the buoy, found that it was down, my anchor to the thread was broken. The wreck has been uncovered and quickly dropped overboard, in six or eight fathoms of water. A government detective was sent down and staid for weeks among the fishermen along the beach, but he did not succeed any clew to the perpetrators, and they will be allowed to keep the reward offered for the recovery of the whistle and information leading to the conviction of the miscreants who removed it, was sent to operate. This boat, which throws the light of the beacon for a distance around, was removed just previous to the last storm, and it was no doubt done in the hope that the beach would be strewn with wrecks. This beacon, you must recollect, is only a quarter of a mile from the southern extremity of Cape Hatteras point, and is used by coasters to make a guide through the Pelican channel—a dangerous bit of navigation. But the scoundrels who do this infernal work are too cunning to be easily caught."

A Pastor's Painful Annotation.

The London Christian World prints the following guide to the service, lately handed to the English minister in whose pulpit he was to preach. The order was partly printed and partly written—the written part being the annotation of the pastor of the church, who had suffered much from the unwritten order of service observed by the choir and the congregation:

ORDER—EVENING SERVICE.

I—Ballooning by the choir.

II—Scriptures read reverently by the clergyman.

III—Hymn. (Congregational).

IV—Prayer. (Minister all alone and congregation meanwhile wool-gathering.)

V—Solo & Prayer (Further ballooning by the choir all alone among clerestory windows, roof, etc.)

VI—Sermon.

VII—Hymn. (Congregational.)

VIII—Prayer. (Minister all alone, congregation wool-gathering, putting on gloves, getting constant ready to spring.)

IX—Benediction. (Violent stampede while organ moves off, sky-rocketing and turning handsprings like a drunken Bacchante.)

X—Silence and darkness, and the reverent presence of God!

Locals.

—There was an excursion to Manch Chunk on the Reading to-day.

—A Bricklayers' and Plasterers' Union has been organized in this city.

—The Reform Club have an excursion to Ocean Grove one week from to-day.

—If the ladies who called to-day for back numbers of THE NEWS will call again we can now supply them, having secured copies since.

—The annual picnic of the Union County Farmer's Club is being held this afternoon at the farm of Mr. Dennis C. Crane, one mile south of Roselle station.

—The young people of the Holy Cross Church Guild will hold a strawberry and ice cream festival in the church school building this afternoon and evening.

—Sheriff Forsyth took Herman Zeglaman, of Elizabeth, to Trenton yesterday morning to serve out a six months' sentence for ringing a false alarm of fire.

—The Elizabeth Herald talks about "our pretty suburban city, Plainfield." We are mighty sorry, but we cannot suburb to a city like Elizabeth. The fact is Elizabeth has too much debt.

—Three of the fire companies have declared in favor of a parade next October. Alert Hose, Engine No. 3, and Engine, No. 3, being those who favor the project. The other companies have not as yet decided what action they will take in the matter.

—The installments of acts, etc., of the first General Assembly of New Jersey which we publish from time to time, as a curiosity, as was stated with the first installment, is understood by the Trenton Times to be published by authority. The young man is a little off again.

—The new order of the Fire Board requiring the roll of members of each fire company to be submitted to the Board every three months for revision and the expulsion of members who fail to attend fires, has had a very salutary effect. At the last fire in a company in which all the work has hitherto devolved upon about a dozen members, there was a full attendance of about sixty members.

—The Plainfield News will please accept our thanks for its journalistic courtesy in the matter of forwarding to this office promptly a quantity of printing material that was taken to Plainfield, instead of Elizabeth, by the stupidity of a railroad official. We assure the News that we appreciate its kindness, and will, should opportunity afford, endeavor to reciprocate.—Elizabeth Herald.

—Dupree & Benedict's Minstrels, a troupe always regarded as excellent we understand, had their effects seized in New Brunswick, Saturday evening by a creditor. The troupe continue to play, however, in a hall there, and it hoped to pull through their present difficulty. The troupe has always hitherto borne a good reputation for paying its bills promptly, and giving a good performance. It will perform in this city to-morrow evening.

New Curiosities.

"The Moorish Slaves" and "The Japanese Group" for the Job Male Library and Art Museum, arrived last Friday, and have been set up in the Plainfield Public Library. Yesterday several gentlemen were permitted a view, and the sight was most pleasing.

"The Moorish Slaves" consists of two life-size figures, standing on separate pedestals were cut in Rome, each from a single block carve l, each figure resting on one knee, and holding on its head a huge shell for the purpose of carrying food and burdens generally. The two figures cost $700.00 to land in Philadelphia.

"The Japanese Group" consists of seven life-size figures.

The one on the right is a Japanese merchant engaged in courting Japanese fashion. Behind him stands a Japanese warrior, who carries a wand emblematic of authority. Before the merchant is Japanese girl carrying a staff, and seeming on the point of laughing. Next the boy and in the front is a Japanese carpenter, engaged in straightening a Japanese hand saw, the teeth of which run opposite to the teeth of the saw with which we are more familiar. Back of the carpenter a Japanese lady of state, in elegant state costume, holding a white paper lantern. She has a very sweet and refined face. Beside her is a Buddhist Priest, of religious aspect, endeavoring to teach Buddhism to a Japanese farmer beside him whose expression is very suggestive. In fact the expression of each of the figures is a study for old and young. All are in costume according to their calling.

The group is in a large plate glass case, framed in ebonized wood, size six feet long, four feet wide and eight feet high.

The Japanese group was made in Japan and is alone valued at $800.00.

These groups have been placed in the Free Library over Stelle's Drug store, for exhibition only to subscribers toward their purchase.

One can easily spend an hour studying the curiosities in this group alone, the peculiar shape of the stockings, the life-like hands and feet, and in fact everything about them being very different from what we are accustomed to.

The City Court.

Thomas Oliven arrested for being drunk and disorderly was fined $5 this morning by Judge Gooch.

Closing Exercises of North Plainfield Seminary.

The closing exercises of the North Plainfield Seminary, Miss Burrows, Principal, took place last evening in the Park Avenue Baptist Church. Invitations to the event had been issued last week, and the occasion was looked forward to with a great degree of pleasure. By the hour of commencing the exercises the auditorium was filled, and the chapel adjoining was called into requisition. The program was as follows:

PROGRAM.

PART FIRST.

1 Salutatory.
2 Chorus, May Bells and Flowers.....Mendelssohn
3 Piano Duet, Reign.....Jensen
Misses McLain and Hasbrouck.
4 That Calf.....Phebe Cary
Ellyda Whiting.
5 The Creeds of the Bells.....Bungay
Misses Tyler, Price, Hasbrouck and McLain.
6 An Appeal from Cells, Nellie and Vellie,
Misses Murphy, Storm and A Hasbrouck.

7 L'Angre et L'Enfant
Miss Lizzie Hasbrouck.
8 The Ballad of Cassandra Brown, { Cercoran / Gem in the Jane Cluster }
Miss Annie Price.
9 Waltz Song

10 Brushwood.....T. Buchanan Read
Miss Grace Yerkes.

PART SECOND.

1 Piano Duet.....Diabelli
Helen Hasbrouck and Mrs. Hasbrouck.
2 Countrypolka.....Lange
3 Ho, Ho, Hum!

The Salutatory was a very unique idea. Seven little girls came on the stage each bearing a letter, nearly as large as herself, and arranged themselves so that the letters spelled the work "Welcome." After prolonged applause the rest of the school joined them, and they all united in singing the opening chorus, May Bells and Flowers.

The piano playing of the evening was of a subdued order, and was highly appreciated by the audience.

Miss Ellyda Whiting in her recitation of Phebe Cary's Calf brought down the house by her rendering of the last word of that fantastic composition.

The event of the evening was the excellent interpretation of "The Creeds of the Bells," of Bungay, participated in by Misses Tyler, Price, Hasbrouck and McLain. The young ladies' voices appeared to good advantage in this selection, and Miss Tyler on the refrain was fine. This piece was received encored by the delighted assembly who would not be satisfied with a return to the stage and a more bow, but insisted on a repetition which was finally given.

The antique costumes and studied lily attitudes of one of the pre-recitations brought to mind "the love-sick maidens" of an opera of a few years ago.

When the elocution class appeared on the stage arrayed in their white robes to go through a series of gestures and positions indicative of the various emotions, a prettier sight could scarcely be imagined. The way the class went through the drill was highly creditable to themselves and to their teacher. The audience frequently manifested its approval in applause. Without detracting at all from the general excellence of the class it is but just to say that Miss Tyler was entitled to the honors.

At the conclusion of the exercises, the young people enjoyed a promenade concert in the chapel. Music was furnished by a band of four pieces.

A Family Record.

Judge Peter P. Good has compiled and had published a complete record of the Tappan family. The first copies of the bound volume he received last evening. The book has some 126 pages, and contains beside the record of the family, of which the Judge is a descendant, the history, as delivered at the reunion of the descendants of the Tappans at Stone Bluff, Fountain County, Indiana, in September last. The book gives information of great care in the compilation of the necessary data, and will be highly prized by the many descendants of the Tappan family now numbering over six hundred. It is published by Samuel C. Tappan, Liberty, Union County, Ind.

Skillful Care of a Horse.

For two weeks passed a valuable horse belonging to Peter Collins, and used by him in his business, has been prostrated and unable to raise himself, from a very severe attack of enlargement of the heart, a disease among horses as among human beings rarely cured. The animal was highly prized by its owner, who left no means untried to restore it, and engaged the services of Veterinary Surgeon Gidney. Under his treatment the animal has completely recovered and is now ready to the gratification of its owner in condition to be driven about as usual. Mr. Collins is profuse in his praises of Mr. Gidney's skill as a Veterinary Surgeon.

Personal.

Mr. George Hoadley, of Seventh street, has gone to the Berkshire Hills for the Summer.

Mr. M. Vermule, who, while at Newton, N. J., buying a horse March 5th last, was knocked down by a sleigh, causing a serious fracture of his right hip, and who has been since confined in consequence, is convalescing. He was at his store on Front street yesterday, in a sick chair, attended by a servant, and was out riding this morning. His many friends will be pleased to hear that he is generally improving in health.

Sewell Wants the Raritan Improved.

Senator Sewell on Monday offered these amendments to the River and Harbor bill: For improvements at Rocky Beach in the Raritan River, $30,000; for continuing improvements in the same river between New Brunswick and Martin's dock, $13,000; for continuing improvements at the middle ground, same river, $15,000, and for the improvement of Raritan Bay, between South Amboy and Great Beds Light, $15,000.

Flower Mission Report.

At a meeting of the W. C. T. U., held Monday afternoon, a report of the Flower Mission was read and a request made that the same be published as hereinto annexed:

Plainfield, June 16, 1884.

Mrs. J. W. YATES,
Pres. W. C. T. U.

Should time permit will you allow me a little space in your meeting this afternoon to present a statement of the work accomplished in the Flower Mission last Monday.

Through the generous response to the appeal for donations of flowers for that day we were enabled to place bouquets in many of the homes of the sick and suffering in our city. Our visit to the Hospital was one of peculiar interest. I wish it were possible for each of those who had in any way added us in this good work to have seen the faces of those suffering ones brighten as the flowers were given them or placed at their bedside and hear their expressions of gratitude that they had been remembered. The attached cards, tied with the white ribbon, received particular attention, more than one asking to be allowed to keep them. The request exceeded in a most cordial welcome and invitation to visit their home at such future time as we should deem best in our work. One was placed in a home where for many years a little form has been stretched on a bed of suffering and the mother, bereaved for a long time a victim of intemperance, is now free from its shackles. Three others were taken to the Women's Home of mourning, there to fulfill their silent mission of comfort in the realization of the bond of human sympathy that the gift at this time. Who can estimate the value of this one morning's work for the Master, in the kindly expressions heard in these homes in a union, the outgrowth of which is this Christian effort, and the silent acceptance of the Master each floral offering bore. In the acknowledgment of the receipt of flowers, ribbon, cards, etc., sent to the Hospital through the courtesy of Mr. Geo. Belcher, the loan of his carriage for the conveyance of the flowers, our work was thus favored and facilitated, and we are in use of the visiting days at the Hospital, that donations of flowers be sent to Good Union Hall, June 24th between 2 and 10 a. m. where they will be arranged and distributed as before. We would suggest that each ward on each succeeding visiting day, the prayers of each member of our Union may be offered for the sick, that our Heavenly Father blessing may be vouchsafed us for the advancement of our cause and His glory.

Respectfully submitted,

MRS. W. A. WOODRUFF,
Superintendent.

State Matters.

Bodine's glass factory, at Bridgeton, will send an exhibit to the New Orleans Exposition.

A District Telegraph Company has been organized in Trenton, and the wires for a local service are now being erected.

David Sheridan, a cooper, who was sent to the penitentiary by Judge Stilwing of Jersey City, as a vagrant, Monday morning, inherited $35,000 three years ago, but has since wasted it on fast living.

Chancellor Runyon issued an order yesterday for the payment by Receiver Wilkins of the Newark Savings Institution, of 60 per cent to depositors of the new account. The payment will begin in July. The first order by the Chancellor named 50 per cent.

The Newark and New York Ship Canal Company have offered to connect their proposed canal with Bound Creek, with a view of carrying off the sewage of Newark. The company wants $100,000 per mile, which would probably bring the total cost up to $2,500,000.

The body of the woman who was found drowned in the canal at New Brunswick, recently, has been identified as Mrs. Cole of New York. The woman was Irish. Her husband was a Pole. He is accused of murdering her and of throwing the body into the canal.

Over one hundred of the employes of Alpaugh & Magowan's pottery in Trenton, who struck last week on account of the announcement of an objectionable rule, will go back to the hours of work, returned to their places yesterday, their grievances having been mitigated by a compromise.

Mrs. Catharine Stoner owned two lots adjoining two lots on the corner of Pacific and Court street, Paterson. She intended to sell the third lot to Mrs. Stoner to Mr. Mary McEvoy, but the deed by mistake conveyed the second lot from the corner, to which Mrs. Stoner has no title. The surveyors, who laid out the lot according to the deed, and Mrs. McEvoy erected a residence. Mrs. Stoner erected a residence for Mrs. McEvoy. Then the mistake in the deed was discovered and Mrs. Mc Evoy was compelled to remove her house and sell it to the lot owner by adjoining Mrs. Stoner's. This work has just been completed.

Supplementary reports, filed by the State Board of Assessors, of the taxation liabilities of corporations, other than railroad and canal companies, under the new laws, bring the total amount of this tax up to about $55,000. As only one-fifth of the corporations liable have yet made returns the total receipts of the State from this new tax are likely to be about $200,000 annually. Among the corporations included in the last returns are the Western Union Telegraph Company, which reports receipts in the State of $65,-744.12; gross value of the tax is $1,314.88; the New York and New Jersey Telegraph and Telephone Company, receipts $39,425.78 and a tax of $789.47; the Hudson County Gas Light Company, receipts $14,007.75, dividend over 8 per cent $8,000 and total tax $2,343.-94; the Weehawken Ferry Company, receipts $4,485.75; tax $89.61. The railroad corporations are taxed under a separate bill and are not required to report until later in the year.

To Our Friends.

The Reform Club of Plainfield having realized sufficient money contributed sufficient to pay for and secure title to the property formerly known as the Second Baptist Church, corner of Second street and Central avenue, this city, and funds being likewise available, chiefly through the noble exertions of the Christian Temperance Ladies, to furnish and equip the purchased building when properly altered and repaired for the practical use of the Club, respectfully though urgently appeal to the liberality and kindly feelings of the citizens of Plainfield and vicinity for additional means to fully complete such needed alterations and repairs.

The good work already accomplished by the Reform Club, under the approving smile of Divine Providence, and the still greater work awaiting future efforts, certainly commend it to the favorable consideration and support of every friend of humanity.

The pecuniary demands made upon the public for various laudable objects, cause hesitancy on the part of the Club to solicit further aid, but having as its members do the all important Temperance reformation they are striving to permanently establish, embodied there in clean and sound influences home to believe, that early and substantial encouragement will follow the asking.

Donations to the aforesaid purpose to the extent of individual ability and inclination, will be thankfully received and acknowledged by the officers of the Club, or other members of its Executive or Subscription Committees, the names of which are hereunto subscribed.

ILLINOIS' VICTORY.

How Lincoln's Nomination Was Secured in 1860.

The Work Which David Davis Did for the Ballsplitter—Thurlow Weed's Denial—The Total Cost.

[Ben: Perley Poore.]

The second National Republican convention called to meet at Chicago on Wednesday, May 16, 1860, and Mr. Seward's friends regarded his nomination for president as a foregone conclusion. He had made a great home convention and Decatur a fortnight previous. It was attended by the political friends of Abraham Lincoln, who had written urging them to come, as he thought that their presence might be of service to him if he might secure the nomination. Few of them agreed with him, but they worked zealously for him, and elected their Lincoln delegates-at-large—David Davis, Norman B. Judd and Stephen T. Logan. The other delegates, Orville H. Browning, were for Bates men, but Lincoln approved of his election, saying that Bates could have no show, and that if Browning saw this, he would not only go over to him, but would take some of his friends with him.

Judge Davis had never attended a primary meeting or a caucus, much less a convention, but Lincoln prevailed upon him to go to Chicago and look after his interests there. The judge arrived on the scene of action the Saturday night previous to the meeting of the convention. He found that the parlors of the Tremont House had been secured, and he had to establish his headquarters in two small connecting rooms in the third story of the Tremont House, which was not at all encouraging, as the only Lincoln men on the ground were a few of the delegates from Illinois and Indiana. Thurlow Weed had thoroughly organized things in the interest, and the streets were filled with thousands who were shouting the New York war cry, Lincoln's raw levies were scattered far and wide, and left at the mercy of disciplined politicians. They had no organization. They were even without a headquarters. The hotels were packed with the noisy friends of Bates and Seward.

David Davis proved himself a political Carnot, and threw the Ballsplitter's flag to the breeze. The raw levies were gathered and disciplined. Nights and days were busy; forming combinations and visiting delegations. Horace Greeley, under the guise of a delegate from Oregon, appeared as the leader of the Bates men, and Thurlow Weed touted defiance from his Seward bugle. Davis visited both leaders, and was showered with chaff. But his raw levies were not without backing. On Saturday night he telegraphed to the lawyers of the eighth circuit, assuring them that Old Abe's stock was rising, and that its value would be greatly enhanced by the presence of his friends in force. It was an electric shock. The state was aroused. On Monday and Tuesday trains poured into the city overwhelming with Lincoln shouters. They were enthusiastic friends, who gladly paid their own way out of love for Lincoln. They massed themselves in the streets, and raised a din that drowned the voices of rejoicers of Seward. They thronged the corridors of the hotels, and awoke the echoes of the night with their cheers. Hourly their number increased. They poured into the wigwam as soon as the doors were opened, and the very atmosphere of the convention seemed surcharged with their enthusiasm.

The two small rooms on the third floor of the Tremont house were the scene of unwonted activity. Every order was promptly executed. Judge Davis was eagerly sought by judges watched the cars for belated delegates. Under Davis's guidance the work was thoroughly done. When he entered the lobby he was greeted with cheers. Lincoln's friend delegates good under the Lincoln flag. On the first ballot the Ballsplitter polled 102 votes to 173½ for Seward and 48 for Bates. The lusty cheers in the gallery nearly lifted the roof with their cheers. The second ballot gave Lincoln 181, Seward 1494 and Bates 93. Again the brawny friends of Old Abe rose to fever heat. The tension was almost unbearable, and Thurlow's knees came together as he saw the writing on the wall. Lincoln was nominated on the third ballot by a vote of 354 to 110½ for Seward, and the whole state of Illinois was thrown into ecstacy. That night Judge Davis went to bed for the first time in six days, having conquered at a total cost, all told, of $700.

Judge Davis went to Springfield on the next day, and had a long interview with Mr. Lincoln. The candidate was willing to refund the $700, but the judge said that as his friends would not hear of it. a.r. Lincoln's friends urged Judge Davis to take the stump in behalf of Mr. Lincoln, and made several effective speeches. Nor did he relax his exertions until the closing of the polls. Lincoln carried the state by a plurality of 11,929 over Douglas, and a majority of only 4,823 over all the candidates, in a popular vote of 339,

NEW YORK DEMOCRATS.

Both Cleveland and Flower Managers Confident.

Tammany Hall to Withdraw if Hoe Demands Are Not Granted—The Brooklyn Delegates Hold the Balance of Power.

SARATOGA, N. Y., June 18.—The town is literally packed with people, the main streets are almost impassable and the hotel corridors and lobbies are also crowded. Mr. Flower is very busy receiving callers and shaking at his suit of rooms in the United States hotel, where short consultations are held, which keeps the candidate very busy.

The Flower headquarters, Mr. Faulkner, ex-Mayor Manning, Truman, and others, have been working like beavers all day. New delegations have been constantly visited and introduced at headquarters. The Flower men say they have not been deceived in their estimates. They have not no votes that they claimed and they have gained votes they did not expect. The attempt of the Cleveland men to make delegations solid that were divided when elected, the Flower men say, has failed, as has been shown in the fight this is notably the case. Four of the nine delegates from Gov. Cleveland's home are said to be unalterably against him, and a fifth has only been won over by the use of state officers interested in the canals. The four Flower delegates from Buffalo are F. Corrigan, J. J. Gottfried, Frank Reynolds and John Crosby. J. C. Sheehan is the man who seems to have one leg on both sides of the fence. The Flower men claim that the majority of the Erie delegation. Dr. Crittenden, of Buffalo, who is prominent among the Flower leaders, chuckles over the fact that Cleveland's own ward, which had given him 1,200 votes two years, gave thirty-eight majority against him and sent Flower delegates to the district convention.

The first interview with Gen. Butler has greatly cheered the spirits of the Flower men and correspondingly depressed those of the Cleveland men. The latter seem to fear its effects in the New York delegation to the convention from outside states. It is already apparent to them that if they win New York they can go into the convention with a majority of the votes of the western government, and, as I know, also of the democratic party, and refuse to accept any explanation, saying, that what they want is a man who will not have to explain. The southern men in particular say they think Bayard is out of the question.

The Democratic Platform Resolutions.

WILMINGTON, Del., June 18.—The state convention, now in session at Dover, yesterday passed the following resolution:

"The Democratic party of Delaware in convention assembled, in advance of the platform soon to be made by the Democracy of the Union, declares its steadfast adherence to the cardinal and time honored doctrines of the party. The principles and policy avowed in the platform adopted at St. Louis in 1876, and repeated at Cincinnati in 1880, have been approved by time and experience, and we trust our delegates in the approaching convention at Chicago will cooperate in confirming and adapting them to the present needs of the country.

"We present to the whole country and fellow citizens of the Democratic faith, as a statesman who, throughout his public career, has unmodified and illustrated the enduring principles of the Democratic faith, and whose nomination as president would furnish at once a platform and a candidate, and whose election would satisfy the highest aspirations of the American people."

THE GIFT OF VENEZUELA.

Unveiling the Statue of the "Washington of South America."

NEW YORK, June 18.—The statue of Simon Bolivar, the "Washington of South America," was unveiled in Central park yesterday with becoming ceremonies. The statue is the gift of the Republic of Venezuela to this city. The parade of honor was made by the Seventh Regiment veterans, the Fifth United States artillery and a large detachment of marines and sailors. The address of presentation was made by Gen. Guzman Blanco, ex-president of Venezuela, who said in the course of his address, that the statue of Bolivar in Central park, the statue of Washington in the square of Plaza Anna, in Caracas, represent the emblematic glory of the great American family, and concluded by saying: "May Divine Providence grant to my country what she has already granted to the Republic."

Hon. A. M. Soteldo, minister to the United States from Venezuela, then said: "On behalf of the government and the people of the republic of Venezuela I unveil the equestrian statue of Gen. Bolivar, the father and founder of three republics of the American world."

Amid the applause of the spectators, the white of cannons and music by the bands the covers were then removed.

Mayor Hewitt, of the statue on behalf of the city, and other speakers delivered orations on the life and character of Gen. Bolivar. Among those present was Judge Benjamin Patton, of Ohio, who was present at the inauguration of Gen. Jackson.

Even New York City Is Surprised.

NEW YORK, June 18.—The suspension of Carhart, Whitford & Co., doing business under the name of "Baldwin, the Clothier," at the corner of Canal and Broadway, surprised every one, as the house was looked upon as one of the strongest in the clothing trade in the United States. The firm made the following statement for publication:

"On account of the death of one of our partners, Mr. Whitford, we would dissolve the firm on July 1, and to ascertain the various interests, we have determined to suspend and to find out what our condition is. We present as near as we can give a statement of our liabilities and assets, but we believe our assets will be in excess of our liabilities."

The firm estimate their liabilities at $1,000,000.

Fourteen Persons Killed.

ST. LOUIS, June 18.—A dispatch from New Laredo, Mexico, says information has been received there that a terrible accident has occurred on the Tampico branch of the Mexican Central Railroad, by which two Americans and twelve Mexican laborers were killed by the premature explosion of blasting powder. One of the Americans killed was Mike Madigan, formerly of St. Louis, well-known among railroad contractors.

Another dispatch says the entire business part of the town of Pinos Altos, Mexico, was destroyed by fire May 29. The loss is estimated at $300,000; no insurance. Considerable suffering exists among the inhabitants for want of food.

The Grant Boys' Assignee Resigns.

NEW YORK, June 18.—The resignation of James McNamee as assignee for Jesse K. and Frederick D. Grant, was tendered and accepted by Judge Van Hoesen, of common pleas. It was made on the ground that Julien T. Davis, a partner of Mr. McNamee in the law firm of Davies, Worth & McNamee, was assignee for President Fish, of the Marine bank, and unable to attend to the legal practice of the firm which required attention. William A. Purrington was appointed his successor, and gave bonds for $1,000. This was considered sufficient security, as it was shown by affidavits that the assets of both young men consisted only of dubious claims for small amounts.

Three Men Drowned.

NEW ORLEANS, June 18.—As the tug William Woods was towing the bark Bristol up the river the Bristol ran aground on a bar a few miles below this city. With a line 300 feet long the tug made desperate efforts to float her, but was unsuccessful. Suddenly, under a full head of steam, the tug careened and sank in five fathoms of water, carrying down Jacob Fletcher, the pilot, and James McGillings and Fred. Roberts, first and second engineers. The captain and the remainder of the crew were rescued. The cabin boy escaped from the hold by crawling out of the smokestack. The three bodies have not been recovered. The tug was valued at $30,000.

The Prospect Pleases Them.

LONDON, June 18.—Several Russian papers just received here contain editorial references to the nomination for the Republican party of Mr. Blaine for the presidency of the United States. The writers seem to consider the election of Mr. Blaine almost a certainty, and express lively satisfaction with that prospect. Their theory seems that a Blaine administration in the United States means trouble ahead for England, and the Anglophobia animus of their comments is without attempt at concealment.

Kidnapped and Murdered.

COLOGNE, June 18.—A profound sensation has been caused by the murder of the wife of an eminent lawyer. The lady was kidnapped while walking in a suburb of the city. Late this evening her dead body was found in a secluded spot. It is conjectured that the fiend was committed in revenge for the part taken by her husband in securing the conviction of a felon.

Bernhardt as Romeo.

PARIS, June 18.—The management of the Porte St. Martin has engaged M. Richepin to translate "Romeo and Juliet" into French for Bernhardt, who will undertake the role of Romeo, with Mlle. Hasting as Juliet.

A BOSTON CRAZE.

Remarkable Stories of the "Mental Process" of Healing.

Cures Which Show How Mind Is Superior to Matter—Theory and Practice of the Few Believers.

[Boston Journal.]

The "mind cure" is called by people outside of New England, a Boston craze. No other city has developed the system to such an extent as Boston, and probably in no other place are there so many disciples of mental healing. Four recognized sects of as many different schools reside in this vicinity, while dozens of practitioners of more or less skill, and hundreds of followers, swell the list of believers. A system of healing, claiming as many adherents, and recognized so largely by many eminent men, deserves at least to be better understood than it is at present by the large majority of people.

THE THEORY.

The system is a different one to explain. Even those who have studied it longest admit that they do not comprehend its full force, and are constantly finding the exact method of the healing process. The process is essentially a spiritual work. It is held that there is a part of us that is never sick, and this part the "mind cure" is called upon so as to control the sick person's consciousness, and this destroys the sickness, for "mind cures matter." A disciple of this school is quoted as saying: "What is sickness? Sickness which he will not admit; he has a belief that he is sick; he then says mentally to the rebellious body: 'What are you? You have no power over me; you are only the covering given to me for present purposes; it is an error to suppose that I am sick; I recognize the great truth that I myself, my individuality, my personality, my mind, can not be sick, for it is immortal, made in the image of God; and when I recognize the existence of that truth there is no room left for the existence of error; it is unequivocally proved that two things can not occupy one and the same place; error can not exist in the same place with truth, therefore error is not in existence, and I am not sick.' And the mind, thus utterly ignoring the existence of error, of course, at once regains the state of health. It is not unlikely to will power, for will power admits the existence of sickness, but drives it away by the superior force of the will. We have also will power to admit existence of sickness, and instead of conquering merely ignores it entirely. It is not sinful to faith cure, for faith relies on the action of an outside power, the God power, while the mind cure relies entirely on the power, or, more properly speaking, health-fulness, of the individual's own mind.

MARVELOUS CURES.

Many and startling cures are said to have been performed by this mental healing process. The practitioners themselves say little about them; they are reticent to an unusual degree; they don't attempt much talking to their own followers, and declare that they do not wish to advertise the "doctrine in any way. Their patients, however, will sometimes speak. One young girl, for instance, had been sick for twelve years, unable to leave her room; a lady mind practitioner treated the girl, and in a short time she was able to go out, and now is apparently in the best of health. Another lady, who is only a student in the doctrine, suffered for years with the severest rheumatism. She became a convert, and the truth that mind rules matter and, declaring to herself, I have no rheumatism; I have only believed that I had rheumatism; how can I, my mortal self, be ill, that is, be in error? I am not sick," convinced herself that she did not have rheumatism, and soon then has not suffered from it. This case, like many others, is one in which there is no motive for telling anything except the truth, as the sufferer is not obliged by the practice of mental healing, and a mover of a lady highly esteemed in the social circle where she moves. At Quincy nurses are a number of practitioners willingly testify as to the results of this treatment. One man said: "I suffered for weeks with the most acute rheumatism, and any one who has had that knows how painful it is. I just myself under the mind doctor's treatment, and he cured me completely."

SERIOUS CASES.

The cures are not confined to such light cases as transient pains, but are claimed to affect contagious and hereditary diseases as well, in fact every kind of ill to which mortal man is susceptible. One patient had a limb so diseased that it had turned black; three doctors were consulted and decided that it must be cut off, but a mind doctor held otherwise, and after a shorter treatment than usual, for the case was severe, brought the limb back to its perfect condition. In Charlestown resides a gentleman whose eyes were covered with cataracts, and who had been told by one of the most eminent eye doctors of the city that he would be blind, since nothing could help him. The patient went to a mind doctor—at that time being so blind that he could not read the signs on the streets through which he passed—and in a few weeks both cataracts had disappeared. Another lady in Medford, after a treatment of 155 sittings, was relieved of an even worse blindness; the cataracts gradually disappeared, and life returned to the eye. Cases of diphtheria, ulceration of the brain, cancer, asthma, indigestion, congestion of the brain, fever, were cured by the influence of the mind. In the case of one where the patient had been given up by the doctors of the regular school; in fact, it was a common saying of Dr. Quimby, the founder of the mind school, that 'good for him and bad for him and the undertaker at the same time, and the one who got there first would get the case.'

THE FUNDAMENTAL IDEA.

The method of treatment is a simple one, and likely to try the faith of the patient to the utmost. It consists in sitting quiet and doing nothing. The practitioner faces the person who believes himself sick, for about half an hour, silently communicating in his own mind the same as he would do in case he himself was supposed to be ill, or else explaining to the patient how the truth really is in regard to disease. That is all that is necessary. Sometimes a harmless outward application is made, merely to give the patient confidence, but the belief in the truth when nothing is apparently done, but this has no bearing upon the method of curing.

In Boston there are four schools of this system, and all of them hold as their fundamental idea that disease does not come from God, and that he has nothing to do with its perpetuation, but that it is one of the errors of man which can be cured by truth; the application of this truth is not by any faith, but by an intelligent understanding. The schools, however, disagree in regard to later development, some claiming to be further advanced than the others. Of the few heads of these schools, one is a venerable gentleman of 80 odd years of age, who was formerly a clergyman for twenty-five years before he visited Dr. Quimby as a patient twenty-one years ago, and following which he left preaching and practiced healing the sick, using only the science and principles taught him by Dr. Quimby. Another leader and head of a school, was a patient with Quimby twenty-two years ago. He assumed title of "Christian Science," and has since been known by that name. His practice is said to be enormous under the name of "metaphysician." The fourth is a pupil of Dr. Quimby, who follows out his teacher's system pure and simply. Besides these four schools there are also about a dozen others who practice the mind cure as a profession, and who boast to claims of power and skill in the art of curing. Gratis, free instruction is given once a week to all who will come.

THE MOON INHABITED.

Towns, Villages, and Cultivated Fields Can Be Seen.

[Exchange.]

At the astronomical observatory of Berlin, says a translation from Nya Pressen Helsingfor, a discovery has lately been made which, without doubt, will cause the greatest sensation, not only among the people in science, but also among the most learned. Professor Blandsinan, in that city, has found, beyond a doubt, that our old friend, the moon, is not a mere lustern or lamp to illuminate the night for the long youth and just companies of our planet, but the abode of living, intelligent beings, for which he is prepared to furnish positive evidence and proof.

By accident Dr. Blandsinan found that the observations of the moon gave but very unsatisfactory results, owing to the intensity of the light which is reflected from its surface, which is so strong that it reflects the correctness of the observations in a very high degree. He then conceived the idea to make the object-glass of the refractor less sensitive to the rays of light, and for that purpose he darkened it with the smoke of camphor. It took months of experimenting before he succeeded in obtaining the right degree of obscurity of the glass, and when finally found he then, with the refractor, took a very accurate photo of the moon's surface. This he placed in a sun microscope, which gave the picture a diameter of 35½ feet. The revelation was most startling. It perfectly overturned all hitherto held theories of the moon's surface. Those level plains which formerly were held to be oceans of water proved to be verdant fields, and what formerly was considered as mountains turned out as deserts of sand and oceans of water. Towns and habitations of all kinds were plainly discernible, as well as cultivated fields and forests. The learned professor's study and observations of old Luna will be repeated every full moon when the sky is clear, and we venture to predict that the time is not far off when we shall know more about the man in the moon than as being an agent in English politics.

Mr. Bergh Proves Equitable.

[New York Commercial Advertiser.]

Mr. Henry Bergh says: "Dr. Grove, I see, left orders that he should be cremated. I favor cremation. I believe that it is the only way that the hygienic principles the contagious should be gradually removed and eliminated. The Dutch, if the obituary has received man's notice of the fact, are right in their method. In ancient Greece and Rome, the bodies of the dead were burned. What difference does it make? There is something horrifying to me to think of consigning a loved wife or daughter to the earth to decay and be devoured by worms. I have been asked to take an active part in the establishment of a crematory here, but I have declined, for the reason that my life-work is devoted to another cause, and I can do nothing which will interfere with this important duty. Hence I have always kept aloof from religious and sectarian arguments. I am nonreligious and non-sectarian, and have nothing to do with politics. Twenty years ago the people and the judges mulled when I took up the gauntlet for the animal creation; to-day the smiles have vanished.

"Question whether the same principle of the present time, if I, together with man, eminent and distinguished in their professions, should agitate the question of cremation. If Alexander Hamilton, A. T. Stewart had been cremated, his bones would not now be scattered over the four quarters of the earth. I am told that clergymen of every denomination are against it, and that religion condemns it. The water flowing through the earth should be contaminated. I do not carry this refuse of decayed and lifeless humanity. I do not like to talk on these disagreeable subjects. If I attend a funeral, or visit a sick room, I know that my turn is likely to die, it affects me. I become despondent. I want to see something cheerful, something beautiful in this life. I go to the theatre often. If a person should come to me now and tell me where I could get a laugh in some theatre, I would go to-night. As we advance in progress and civilization, the cremation problem will be solved, and the relief of suffering animals has been solved."

Russian Railways.

[New York Tribune.]

Apparently Russia has not yet given up her long-cherished idea of bridging Persia with railways, and thus making her vassal in ways that must prove highly convenient. Eleven years ago a concession was actually granted by the shah for the construction of a railway 150 miles in length, from the Persian port of Resht, on the Caspian sea, to the capital, Teheran, but his majesty subsequently wriggled out of this agreement with the Grand Oriental Affection. Projected lines from Teheran to Ispahan, the ancient metropolis, and from Ispahan to Shiraz were similarly negatived. But Russia, perseveringly as ever, is minded to push the line of demarkation of frontier between herself and Persia, the project of a railroad around the southwestern corner of the Caspian, connecting Resht with the new petroleum fields at Baku, and with the Russian railway thence to the Black sea. The shah is said to look on this scheme with anything but favor, but Russia may be trusted to carry her point sooner or later, either by bribery, or coercion, or both together.

Irving on Pullman.

[Inter Ocean.]

"The story of the conception and creation of this Pullman city," said Irving, "interested me very much, though the method of it all strikes me as somewhat like living by machinery; the private houses being made, as it were, on block by the shops collected together like seventeen the whole piece laid out with geometrical system; and yet one feels that there are fine principles underlying it all. The whole scheme is founded upon wise plans; and that, from a moral and sanitary standpoint, the city is an ideal combination of work and rest, of capital and labor."

The Meanest Girl Living.

[Exchange.]

The meanest girl has just been found. She is an Albia, Iowa, girl, who has a pet calf, which she has fattened in the front yard. She has taught it to fight, and when her fellow takes his departure she loosens the picket rope and the calf butts him over. She rushes to his rescue with exceedingly heroic devotion and saves him. Boredom is a great quality in a woman, but it is unfair for a girl to win the affections of her fellow by this deception, no matter if ignorance is bliss.

—Zephyr Hook and Ladder company are soliciting subscriptions for a team of horses, and are meeting with gratifying success. This is a very useful apparatus at a fire, and the company deserve success.

—At Dixon's Ice Cream Garden, frozen lemonade, water ices, banana ice cream, ice cream and cake at 20 cents, and strawberries and cream at 20 cents, are announced today. Read the advertisement.

—Mr. J. G. Burdick, of the Theological School of Alfred University, has been called to the pastorate of the New Market Seventh day Baptist Church. Mr. Saunders, the present pasto', leaves to complete his theological course.

—A break in the engine at the Potter Works this morning necessitated the laying off of nearly all the hands for the morning. The two hours lost were given the opportunity by having a game of ball which was won by the first nine by a score of 40 to 18.

—The Citizen's Association of North Plainfield at their recent meeting elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, H. K. Carroll; Vice Presidents, W. M. Burrows and John H. Van Winkle; Secretary, F. E. Anthony; Treasurer, B. J. Shreve.

—The third annual excursion of the Plainfield Sauerbund is to take place next month. The advertisement giving full particulars will probably appear later. The tickets are to be one dollar, to include a sail around Staten Island to Prospect Bay and the Highlands of Navesink.

—The housekeeper of a man named Holmes who lives back in the mountains, and who has occasionally figured in the courts here sold a horse and wagon belonging to her employer for $75, and departed with the proceeds. Holmes bought the articles back and will probably let the matter go.

—The opening hop for the season will take place at the Park House this evening. A number of invitations have been issued for the event. As it is possible that many names may have been overlooked in sending out the invitations, the proprietor desires that all who may wish to come will do so and assures them that they will find a hearty welcome.

—From the Railway Advocate: Dupree and Benedict's minstrels were at the Opera House last night, but the audience was slim. The performance was good considering the circumstances and disadvantages under which the troupe played. The former proprietor has failed to pay his men, and Monday night the well-known Knight-of-the-burnt-cork, Mr. Archie White became the manager of the troupe of 18 of the former members of Dupree and Benedict's minstrels and although they are not in a healthy financial condition they act very honorably and no doubt will eventually be successful.

—"They who dance must pay the fiddler." Our Republican friends have asked us to fiddle while they danced. We say, pay the fiddler. They say all right; how much? In view of the extraordinary circumstances we say our regular rates twenty five per cent discount, cash every week; the terms to be the same to both parties, each to have not over a column. They say we'll see you dump first, and that the boot will be on the other leg before many weeks. We say we don't care, as the elegant champion of the "Pinned Knight" departs, and the Democratic chaos plow still waltzes for his gore or to be gored, and we and our readers are waiting to see the fun. We hope to survive.

Concerning the Coming Commencement.

What lively interests and trembling anticipations surround the scholars of the public school, as the time for the examinations, and presentation of prizes, draw near, and how hard the competitors have striven, and how deeply interested and watchful the Principal and her band of earnest workers have been, directing and encouraging the young students to persevere to the end. All the higher branches of study and competition, are generally well known and success in such, receives its due applause and recompense but there is one study, the last and apparently the least, on the commencement programme of the evening, which requires as much exercise of the mind and hands as any of the higher ones, besides having one greater advantage, over its mightier companions in that it sends forth its disciples, day by day, to breathe the pure fresh air of the morning, to exercise all their physical powers wandering here and there, through bush and brake, o'er hill and dale, along by the icy brook, under the mountain's sheltering bosom seeking sweet blossoms from the warm heart of nature just bursting forth, from her Winter's burial, into the Spring's warmth and light. The study of botany in our public school, was adopted through the proposition of our deeply lamented, Dr. C. H. Stillman, who had long felt the need of such elevating and refining influence surrounding the young children committed, as it were, to his guardianship and care. His nature, was as fragrant and pure as the beautiful flowers he loved to cultivate and even the humblest lichen, or the smallest moss which clothes the weather beaten rock, was, in his eyes, a miraculous production, and as he rode by the wayside his whole soul was uplifted in admiration through the medium of flowering herbs, shrubs and trees, whose endless and picturesque variety inspires every feeling heart, with delight. He felt that those lovely scenes were but the visible revelation of an invisible God, an enchanted mirror in which he saw the reflection of his glory.

Thus, he felt the study of the vegitable kingdom, would tend to purify, and elevate the hearts and lives of the young, varying and enriching the monotonous studies of every day routine; and armed with the microscope, they might discover in every despised and valueless weed glimpses of a higher order of existence, which, answering to their own natures, enable them to trace the dawn of a superior, spiritual world.

A very fine microscope was donated to the school, and two prizes of $15, and $10, in gold, were made the annual awards.

The success in this branch of science, has developed and advanced, wonderfully; the results of such a pursuit has given greater impetus to the higher stages of learning, and cast a new halo of purity and culture, throughout the homes of the community.

The judges chosen to decide upon the best work, and who are also to award the prizes, are no ordinary examiners, they are those thoughly scientific botanists, and will be able to discern the degree of progress made during the present year. The judges are Mr. T. L. Thompson, of North Plainfield, and Mr. Frank Tweedy, of Crescent avenue.

Not many of those who crowd the building on the night of the commencement, see or examine the voluminous portfolio of beautiful plants, dried and prepared, with the most delicate touches, appearing almost as lovely as they did in their death, as they are nodding to their companions, in happy ignorance of their impending doom. They are lovely words of art in its truest sense, and should be greatly prized by the parents whose children have brought the "hidden things, and the things of no repute" into the light of a higher knowledge, and have gathered, from the rich garniture of the fields, and the paths of cultivated gardens, the love of all things beautiful.

CRESCENT AVE.

A Runaway Accident.

Yesterday afternoon at the time of the arrival of the 4:30 train from New York, a Mr. Lewis residing at the Rumbert residence, corner of Sixth street and Central avenue, engaged a hack of Charles Sharpe, who was employed to carry Mr. Lewis' family to the latter's home. When within about 100 yards of his destination the whiffletree broke. The horse, the property of Michael Sweeney, and the same animal that ran away at the base ball match Decoration day, reported in these columns, began kicking and plunging and finally ran wildly away. Mr. Tharpe jumped off the back, injuring his leg, so that he is confined to his bed.

The horse with the conveyance continued running up Central avenue to Eighth street, colliding with a cutaway and dogcart on the way.

Mr. Lewis, seriously fracturing one of his legs. Dr. Fields and a New York physician were summoned and attended Mr. Lewis, who was conveyed to his residence in great pain.

Mr. Tharpe was formerly engaged at F. Day's Livery Stable and left Mr. Day's employ yesterday to go into business on his own account. He had borrowed the conveyance from Mr. Sweeny. He has had an unfortunate start.

Installation of Officers.

The Ladies' Loyal League of the Winfield Scott Post, G. A. R., had an installation of officers last evening to fill vacancies. Department Commander Mrs. McNair and Past Department Commander Mrs. Hugg, were present. The officers installed were: Senior Vice Commander, Mrs. Titsworth; Junior Vice Commander, Miss Laura Brady; Conductress, Mrs. Drake; Chaplain, Mrs. Drake; Treasurer, Mrs. House. The chorus which took part in the Memorial Day parade were present and enlivened the occasion with several songs. Past Department Commander Hugg also favored the meeting. At the conclusion of the installation ceremonies various ladies of the League and comrades of the Post were called upon for speeches. A number of very happy remarks were made. The meeting ended with singing some of the grand old songs of the war.

Private Meeting of the Council.

There was a private meeting of the Common Council last evening to examine the books of the city. The members are keeping very mum about it.

A Runaway Boy's Sad End.

A very sad accident occurred Tuesday evening on the Pennsylvania Railroad at Elizabeth the victim being a runaway boy. Tuesday morning Walter Darcy, a young man seventeen years of age, left his residence at Trenton, becoming disgusted with home. He boarded a freight train and came to Elizabeth, where he got off and loitered around the city until about half-past six o'clock in the evening, when he went to the stone bridge on the Pennsylvania Railroad near Rahway avenue, intending to board a freight train and go home, having expended his cash out of running away. When boarding the train he did not secure a strong hold, and fell under the wheels. In an instant his right leg was badly crushed and his body badly bruised. One of the section hands on going to the spot found the boy rapidly bleeding to death. The boy who was alive and conscious, displayed much nerve, although his leg was crushed in the hip. He said to a gentleman: "Pull off my pants, please, and bind my leg up so that I won't bleed to death." His request was complied with, and with great tenderness he was placed on an improvised stretcher and taken to the hospital. At the hospital the surgeons held a consultation and decided that the boy's vitality was too far gone to make amputation safe. The young man lingered until eleven o'clock, when death relieved his sufferings. Messrs. Ford & Stiles were then called and took charge of the remains. The boy's father, Thomas, was telegraphed for. He, with the son, were employed in the wire foundry at Trenton. The boy's sister and brother at once came on. About four years ago a brother of the deceased, who was seven years of age, was killed on the track. The sister and brother were heartbroken at the sad fate of their brother. There was no cause for the unfortunate boy to run away from home, as it was made as comfortable for him as possible. The deceased's mother is dead, and but two children now survive a family of twelve, eight of the family having died of consumption. County Physician Green granted a permit for the removal of the body.

Married.

Last evening at the residence of Mr. S. H. C. Dunshee, on Madison avenue, by Dr. Yerkes, Mr. H. Perry Beardsley, of New York, was married to Miss Ella Rich of this city.

After partaking liberally of a beautiful table, the bride and groom journeyed eastward on an early train, leaving the guests to dust the carpet.

The guests were summoned by the host
To greet good wishes, and a toast,
And willingly did with me join
In this my toast, without the wine
In substance like, in effects that put
Whilst traveling life's journey through
No undue storms shall you assail
But you may weather and prevail.
We would not wish your sky no clear,
That passing cloud shall no tear,
These little clouds, they only tend
To heighten joy,—to make amend.
No cares so heavy, but you'll bear
With patience such as Christian care.
Fancied burdens, are often slight
When view'd in a religious light.
A morning wrong you'll not resent
Till your daily weigh the intent.
Let your judgment always be
Govern'd and guided by charity.

ANON.

Demanded One Dollar But Got a Thrashing Instead.

The following is taken from the Railway Advocate of the 18th:

A row occurred Sunday night about seven o'clock. It was a disgraceful affair. The facts are these: Some gentlemen from Plainfield with a team of horses visited this city and tied them near the corner of Cherry and Campbell streets. One of the horses in some way slipped its bridle off, and began to plunge. Two men tried to catch the horse and both men caught hold of the animal at about the same time. One of the men assaulted and threatened the owner of the horse and he refused to pay Brunt, at the same time telling him to let go of the horse. Upon the word being given out blow soon blows were struck. A large crowd of the usual Sunday night hangers-around-the Pennsylvania railroad depot, probably to the number of 200 or more rushed to see the fight and soon a dozen began to take an active part in the melee. Some of the participants were pretty badly bruised and the appearance of some officers put an end to the disgraceful doings. No arrests were made.

To Our Friends.

The Reform Club of Plainfield having realized generous cash contributions sufficient to pay for and secure title to the property formerly known as the Second Baptist Church, corner of Second street and Central avenue, this city, and funds being likewise available, chiefly through the noble exertions of the Christian Temperance Ladies, so fervent and equip the parchment-building when properly altered and repaired for the practical use of the Club, respectfully though urgently appeal to the liberality and kindly feelings of the citizens of Plainfield and vicinity for additional means to finally complete such needful alterations and repairs.

The good work already accomplished by the Reform Club is apparently the result of Divine Providence and the still greater work awaiting future efforts, certainly commend it to the favorable consideration and sympathy of every friend of humanity.

The pecuniary demands made upon the public for various laudable objects, causes hesitancy on the part of the Club to solicit further aid, but relying as its members do the all important Temperance reform cause they are striving to promote, loyally establish, emboldens them to this end and induces them to believe, that early and substantial encouragement will follow the asking.

Donations to the aforesaid purpose to the amount of individual ability and inclination will be thankfully received and acknowledged by the officers of the Club or other member of the Executive or Subscription Committee, the names of whom are herewith subscribed.

DIRE METHODS.

Variety in suicide may not be charming, but has the merit of exciting novelty. A Peoria, Ill., lady having decided the other day that she must die, proceeded at once to shuffle off her mortal coil. She tried hanging, but the rope broke. She then called in the assistance of a butcher knife, but the sight of blood scared her. She next stabbed herself with a pair of scissors, but not being an editor she did not succeed. Finally she tried mixed poisons, but a doctor came and professionally pumped her until she was quite well. This lady's failure to leave the world of sorrow should prove a warning to all intending emigrants. If persons want to die let them adopt the most genteel and efficacious plan by becoming a book agent. In most places they are killed on sight.

Puck.

"Hand Maiier's" Brother.

He ambled along down the stone-flecked lane,
And out from his midst there frequent came
A full-strength cuss-word, deep and low,
As he knocked a nail from a wanton toe:
And he was dead in Socrates,
And the robins rang out a chime from the trees.

And he wished—as he stepped on a business brier,
Which made him retort, "by gosh, Mariar,"
That he was a hundred miles away
From the farm and the meadow and making hay.

And "Brindle" and "Bright" and the kicking cows,
And the blackbirds sang in the alder boughs.

Now a poet, who sat on a moss-hid stump,
With his face in a smile and his back in a hump,
Had heard the boy as he muttered away
And he called him hither and bid him say
What life he'd choose if he had his pick?
And the brown thrushes piped from a new built rick.

And the lad looked up with his eyes in mist,
And, cutting a snack of "Virginia Twist,"
He paused for a moment, then, child-like, said,
As he dropped on his bosom his old-gold head:
"Please, Mister Sir, if it's all the same"—
And the thrill of a thrush from a hedge-row came.

"Please, Mister Sir," the boy began,
And tears coursed down through the grime of face and tan:
"S'if's all the same, an' I had my pick,
I could tell ye so suddink I would make ye sick,
I'd be a cashier in a savings bank,"
And the poet fell over, limp and lank.

And this simple child, with his tender thought,
From his sweet desire his wish has wrought:
And he rides in a chariot gilt and gay,
And the poet is up on the box, they say.
And the world lies hence with its jars and jerk,
And the birds, as of old, get in their work.

S. R. MCMANUS, in Puck.

NEW YORK'S DELEGATES

Go to the National Convention Uninstructed.

Result of the Saratoga Convention. Commanding Gov. Cleveland's Administration—Andrews and Rapallo Denominated.

SARATOGA, N. Y., June 19.—The truce between Tammany and the County Democracy of New York, reduced the convention to rather a tame affair. There was nothing like a struggle in the earlier proceedings. The only contest of consequence was that when the Purcell and Raines delegations from the second district of Monroe came up. Mr. Purcell's action in the convention forced the issue squarely. The compromise affected by the state committee, giving both contesting delegations seats in the convention, which had a vote to cast, was rejected by Mr. Purcell, speaking for himself and colleague.

"We decline to take any part in the proceedings of this convention," said Mr. Purcell, "until the question of our regularity is passed upon by the committee on contested seats and by the convention."

This was a quiet, delightful statement, yet it was a kind of small bombshell, and let the state committee without the satisfaction of having their actions tried. In the preliminary proceedings the name of Grover Cleveland was not pronounced, and consequently there was no chance of a demonstration in his favor. Indirectly, indeed, the unquestioned devotion of the party to the wise and economic administration Cleveland had rendered the state, and the allusion was applauded, but nothing comparable to the ovations that greeted the names of Daniel Manning and Samuel J. Tilden, John Kelly, John C. Jacobs and others.

An attempt to get up a boom for Flower was made, but it proved a failure. Some maladroit person in the gallery at a most inopportune time cried out: "Three cheers for Flower," which was responded to by a feeble effort of two or three delegates.

To most of those who had closely observed the situation here from the start, it was evident that the contest was not what that substance in the Flower canvas. If there were at any time a majority of the delegates pledged to his support, they have ceased in a great degree to be so. Governor Flower has undoubtedly a devoted following, the large vote which was supposed to be sure for him has rapidly fallen off. The strongest contributing cause to this result was the sudden pacification of the Tammany malcontents, by being conceded more than their demands.

The afternoon proceedings, though lively, were as harmonious as a Sunday school. Grady, Cochrane, Lester C. Faulkner and others on the Tammany side conferred with and took cues from John C. Jacobs, Hubert O. Thompson, ex-Mayor Cooper, Col. Fellows and Col. Murphy on the County Democracy and Irving Hall side. There never fusion more perfect or mutual satisfaction more manifestly completed. If the New York Democracy had been reconciled, they must have learned the art of dissimulation to perfection.

At 7 o'clock the chair rapped the convention to order and announced that the committees on contested seats and resolutions had not been able to perfect their work a further recess would be taken until 8:30 p. m. If there was no objection. None being offered, the recess was extended till the time mentioned.

The hall was literally packed in the evening when the convention resumed after the second recess.

The hour fixed came and went, and 9 o'clock found the same scenes of the city hall before permanent organization was effected. The delay caused the gallery to grow restive, and noisy demonstrations were made to hasten the progress of proceedings.

Their efforts were, however, perfectly unavailable, and the stage maintained the even tenor of its stately way. At 9:30 the gavel sounded and the convention came to order. The committee on permanent organization reported, continuing the temporary officers. The decision was voted with applause.

A list of vice-presidents and secretaries, one for each congressional district, was announced. The committee on credentials reported that in the Ninth district of Kings the sitting members were entitled to seats, and in the Second Monroe district the delegation headed by William Purcell. This was received with great applause.

In the second and third districts of St. Lawrence the delegations, headed by Thos. L. Harris and Dr. Bridges were declared to be entitled to seats.

Nelson J. Waterbury, of New York, announced that the report of the committee on resolutions was not ready, and was on his arrival at by all the interests in the Democratic party, and that in the national convention not one word of division will be heard, except an expression of hearty regard for the candidate for presidency, and all Democrats agree in this that the Democratic candidate must be emphatically what the Republican candidate is not.

He went on to depict the evils which have accumulated in the nation during the Republican administration, and pointed out that the county of nominating a candidate whose name will be a guarantee of reform. He glanced at the platforms of 1872, 1876 and 1880, and said that the resolutions contained therein were found applicable to the situation of to-day, and on the latter platform the governor of this state was elected, which has brought forth such magnificent fruit. The chief points of these platforms were retained in the present declaration of principles.

The following are the resolutions adopted:

Resolved, That the Democracy of the state of New York assembled to appoint its delegates to the national convention of the party, consults to-day in the spirit of conciliation with representatives of the party from the other states, the general declaration of Democratic principles upon national issues, as the same have been declared, and that no issue can be more important than the election of a president of the United States whose character and public record and life are such as to the whole people assurance of an honest, impartial and efficient administration of the laws without suspicion of personal ends or private interests.

Resolved, That as a declaration concerning matters of state government this convention adopts and affirms the declarations of the conventions of the party in 1874, 1875 and 1882 to which the people of the state have given hearty approval; that it recognizes the duty of the legislature to submit to the popular vote in 1883 for the abolition of the convict system of labor in the prisons; and that it heartily commends anew the efficient and upright administration of Governor Cleveland.

Mr. Waterbury read the resolutions. The speak referring to Gov. Cleveland was received with great enthusiasm, which was manifested in the applause that followed.

In reading the list of delegates of Chicago the names of Robert O. Thompson, John C. Jacobs, Lester C. Faulkner and Edward Murphy, Jr., were received with applause, but the one which drew forth a tempest of applause was that of John Kelly, of New York. Kelly's name was received with far greater favor than any other, personal contempts. The name of David B. Hill was received with a fatal and ominous silence. When the name of William Purcell, of Monroe, was mentioned for delegate to the convention again there was another hearty demonstration.

The Fourteenth congressional district was selected to cast a small fight upon. Mr. Grady moved to place on the list the name of certain delegates elected by the Westchester delegates, and an adherent of Tammany hall. This was opposed on the part of Irving hall by Col. Wood. Mr. Herrick made a bitter retort, intimating that Tammany hall wanted to secure more than her share.

A motion was offered by Col. Wood to refer the matter to the nine uncontested delegates. This was lost.

Mr. Grady then moved that it is the sense of this convention that Tammany hall is entitled in one vote in the Twenty-fourth assembly district of New York. This was to simplify matters and prepare the way for a final motion. Ex-Corporation Counsel William C. Whitney seconded the motion of Mr. Grady, and declared that the fight that had been led by Col. Wood was undoubtedly the legal one.

Mr. Grady's motion was carried amid great applause.

The succeeding motion to adopt the list was carried without dissent. Judge Samuel Hand offered a motion nominating for Supreme Court judges to replace the two unqualified and unfit, and prepare the way for a final motion. Ex-Corporation Counsel William C. Whitney seconded the motion of Mr. Grady, and declared that the fight that had been led by Col. Wood was undoubtedly the legal one.

Mr. Grady's motion was carried amid great applause.

The succeeding motion to adopt the list was carried without dissent. Judge Samuel Hand offered a motion nominating for Supreme Court judges to replace the two unqualified and unfit present incumbents and Andrews and Rapallo, whose terms expire next December. Fagin, of Rensselaer, opposed the motion.

Mr. Grady moved that the name of Rapallo be withdrawn in deference to a powerful speech in opposition to the effort to make the matter partisan, and paid a high compliment to Judge Andrews.

Mr. Gist then nominated Rufus W. Peckham, of Albany.

Mr. Grady strongly and eloquently deprecated the introduction of partisan feeling into the question.

Mr. D. Cady Herrick withdrew the nomination of Judge Peckham.

Mr. Grady, on motion, withdrew the name of Judge Barnard. The motion to nominate Judges Andrews and Rapallo was then carried, amid great enthusiasm.

BLAINE AND LOGAN.

Enthusiastic Reception of the Republican Nominees at Bangor.

Bells Ringing, Cannons Firing and Whistles Blowing—Remarks of the Ex-Secretary—War on the Independents.

BANGOR, Me., June 19.—Blaine and Logan's arrival here from Ellsworth, accompanied by Senator Hale, at whose home the candidates have been visiting. They were met at the depot by a delegation of citizens under the direction of Postmaster Parshian. Their arrival was announced by firing of cannon, ringing of bells and blowing of whistles. Thousands of people lined the streets on Broadway, where 3,000 people assembled, and where a platform had been erected. Mayor Humphrey presided, and after a few remarks made by ex-Chief Justice Appleton and Hon. S. S. Blake, Mr. Blaine was then introduced and said:

"I thank you, my friends, for the hearty welcome you have given us this evening. I have been making a visit to Ellsworth as the attendant of Gen. Logan. Our trip is not a political one, but it seemed that the stirring Republicans of Maine could not permit the opportunity to pass without manifesting their ardor for the principles of Republicanism and their devotion to the gallant soldier who accompanies me. I do not at tribute this demonstration as personal to myself. No man can play the hero among his friends and neighbors. That must be reserved for strangers and other states. We are here to do honor to our distinguished guest, and I invite the hosts of the Republican party to join in paying this tribute to a soldier, who, as a Democrat, was one of the first to take up arms in defense of his country."

At the conclusion of Mr. Blaine's remarks, Gen. Logan was introduced. He thanked the people of Maine, and Bangor in particular, for the hearty welcome they had given him and congratulated the people of Maine upon the nomination of one of her sons as the standard bearer of the Republican party. His nomination was the most fortunate one ever put forth by the popular will. By a vast majority of the delegates to that convention it was decided that the time had arrived when the name of a Western man should be placed in a more favorable light before the nations of the earth. The people of this country, under our form of government, have claimed the right to express their views and make their choice of the man who shall hold the highest office in the country.

"The action of the convention was but the voice of the people announcing in unmistakable terms that your honored citizen was their choice for the position. The people know who they want and what they want, and if I was to describe the man it would be something in the way. They want a man at the head of the nation who is able to perform the duties of that position; they want a man who has examined into and has knowledge of the form of government; who understands the relations of the people, and who will use all means for their protection; a man who understands the wants of the laborers of the country and will use his influence to protect them; they want a man to practice commercial interests; they want a man who understands the present relationship of this country with Mexico and the Central American states, and the importance of those countries and rich valleys of the Congo, and also will endeavor to increase our business with other localities; they want a man who will protect the flag as protected at home and respected abroad; they want a man who will in a peaceful way make the National United States be protected at home and abroad, they want a man who understands the provisions of the constitution and laws that have been enacted under that instrument, and will enforce the laws enacted for the protection of American people. Such a man is James G. Blaine. No man or dozen men can dictate the policy of the people. The voice of the people must be respected or we will lapse back into the condition of affairs before monarchies of the old world. We need no politicians in this movement. The people are their own commanders and those who dissent will be left standing by the wayside when the grand army of the people marches on to victory in November. The camp fires will be kept burning during this campaign, and when the sun of November shall come the people of this great Republic will give notice that they have made their selection and will make him President of the United States."

Logan was very severe on the Independents, who, he said, cannot rule, but must be ruled. From his remarks it is evident that the Blaine boom is to declare war on the Independents.

At the close of Logan's remarks, which were frequently applauded, Senator Hale was called upon to speak. He spoke of the proceedings of the Chicago convention, the result of which was, he declared, one of the grand popular demonstrations in the history of the country. He spoke of the speeches to Blaine and Logan, and predicted their triumphant election. The people were then given an opportunity to shake hands with the candidates, after which Blaine and Logan took the train for Augusta.

The Mowry Litigation.

PITTSBURG, Pa., June 19.—The famous litigation instituted by the Bay City, Mich., Indian claimants against the estate of William Mowry, of Mowry, Providence, involving the title to property valued at $2,000,000, has at last been brought to a close. The claimants have filed quit claim deeds in the treasurer's office of Bay county, releasing their alleged title to the immense amount of property claimed. Decrees are also filed in the Bay county court perpetually enjoining them from interference. The suits were in favor of the Mowry heirs and those who have obtained title from them. This case was carried to the federal courts for five or six years.

Gen. Grant at Long Branch.

LONG BRANCH, June 19.—Gen. Grant and Mrs. Grant have arrived at their cottage, on Ocean avenue. They dined at Mr. H. C. Fahnestock's cottage. The general still uses the crutch, but is improving. His personal twinges of pain, sometimes his disturbances and good nature. He mounts his horses. His face looks much excited the envy of all the lovers of horseflesh at Long Branch last summer, will not be here this year. The general passed one of them to Mr. Ferdinand Ward last fall, and the president on Chesapeake are notified Ward that he could use the others. The horses were in Ward's stable when the crash came, and were attached with the belongings that were not transferred to Warner.

BISHOP SIMPSON DEAD.

The Senior Bishop of the Methodist Church Passes Away.

A Brief Sketch of His Career—President of Indiana Asbury University—Thirty-two Years a Bishop in the M. E. Church.

BISHOP MATTHEW SIMPSON.

PHILADELPHIA, June 19.—Bishop Matthew Simpson, the venerable prelate of the Methodist Episcopal church died at ten minutes to twelve yesterday morning. Several times during the night breathing almost ceased but he rallied again and again. He passed away calmly without a struggle.

Cadiz, Ohio, gave the eloquent Bishop Simpson to the world, August 21, 1811. At 15 he graduated at Allegany college, Meadville, Pa. A course of medical studies was then pursued for about a year, and in 1832 he started in as a physician. Soon, however, he abandoned medicine to enter the pulpit, and the same year obtained license to preach in Methodist churches, and since then few preachers have accomplished as much good through their eloquence as Bishop Simpson has. It is somewhat remarkable that he never studied theology as a preacher, when it is known that in early youth he was averse to speaking in public, and a knowledge of this fact ought to make conscientious value of hard work as one of the chief lessons of his career. His mastery of English speech and his attainments as a scholar were the results of industrious application under the stimulus of an inextinguishable zeal in the cause to which he devoted his life when in 1839, at the age of 28, he was called into the Methodist church. After his graduation, his first pastoral work was in the Pittsburg conference, where he was soon recognized as a young man of unusual power and zeal. He was professor of natural science in Allegheny college from 1837 to 1839, president of the Indiana Asbury University from 1839 to 1848, and editor of The Western Christian Advocate from 1848 to 1852, the latter year being the date of his ordination as a bishop. In Boston, in 1856, Bishop Simpson performed the work of the bishopric with distinguished efficiency, and his life of seventy-three years has been one of the most useful of his time.

The Springer Committee.

WASHINGTON, June 19.—In his testimony before the Springer committee Col. Bliss threw out the suggestion that Mr. William Dickson, foreman of the first Star route jury might be able to shed some light upon the alleged attempt to bribe members of the jury. It is learned that Mr. Dickson will be subpœned to appear before the committee. In view of the fact that inferences detrimental to Mr. Dickson were drawn from Col. Bliss' testimony, a letter written by Mr. Dickson to Mr. Springer, bearing date of May 13, is furnished for publication. He expresses entire willingness to appear, and makes twelve distinct charges against the department of justice, which he says he will prove.

The Tully Extradition Case.

NEW YORK, June 19.—Judge Brown, of the United States district court, has overruled the decision of the United States commissioners in the Tully extradition case. Gerald Thomas Tully, who was charged with forgery by the Preston Banking company, of England, was held by the commissioners for extradition. The prisoner was taken before Judge Brown on a writ of habeas corpus and discharged, the judge holding that it would be manifestly improper to extradite Tully for an offense which the English courts of appeals in this Windsor case has declared not to be a forgery within the meaning of the treaty.

The Season of Political Lies.

WASHINGTON, June 19.—Congressman Fiperty, of Illinois, editor of The Chicago Citizen, denies the truth of the published statements that he has indorsed Blaine and Logan. He says this is an unusual season of political lies, but he cannot allow deliberate falsehoods to go uncontradicted. Neither his paper nor himself is "bulldozed" in any political ticket. The Citizen is entirely independent in politics.

A JUBILEE SERVICE.

Celebrating the Fiftieth Anniversary of Rev. Charles H. Spurgeon.

LONDON, June 7th.—A most impressive scene was presented at the Metropolitan tabernacle at Newington-Butts, in this city, the occasion being the jubilee service in celebration of the fiftieth birthday of the Rev. Charles Haddon Spurgeon. The vast edifice was packed in every part with a congregation which was especially notable for the large number of evangelical clergymen which it contained. Almost every Baptist minister in the city was present, and there were also clerical and lay delegations from Baptist churches in all parts of the United Kingdom. The principal event of the evening was the discourse by Mr. Spurgeon. This was mainly personal and reminiscent, the pulpiteer giving an outline of his ministrations from the time he was first known as "the boy preacher," conducted revivals in his native county, Essex. He said that it was true that these ministrations had been blessed with a wonderful degree of success in bringing souls to salvation, but the secret of the success was simple. It was due solely to the blessing of the Holy Spirit attending his work, and this blessing had been obtained, and could only be obtained, by earnest, continued prayer, supported by absolute belief, both of the mind and heart, in the efficiency of prayer and the reality of Him to whom it was addressed.

"Make your whole life a prayer," said Mr. Spurgeon to the clergymen present; "and God will single you out for an outpouring of the Holy Spirit that shall abundantly bless your labors. Pray without ceasing. Pray upon entering your pulpit, during the service of song, and during your sermon. While preaching to the unconverted, implore them to turn to the Savior; preach and appeal to them with a petition to God to add the force of divine conviction to your words, and then your tongues will become those of men and of angels, irresistible in their persuasion!"

Mr. Dwight L. Moody, the American evangelist, followed Mr. Spurgeon. After a few words of congratulation to the pastor and the people of the Tabernacle, Mr. Moody said he desired to heartily and thankfully testify to the inspiration he had obtained from the preachings of Mr. Spurgeon and from a contemplation of the example afforded by his life work.

Brief addresses were also made by Mr. Pentecost and other evangelists, and the utmost enthusiasm was manifested by the vast congregation.

Robbed on a West Shore Train.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., June 19.—Dr. Albert Mayermore, of Minneapolis, Minn., left the latter league for New York, having with him $6,500, and yesterday divided it before leaving the house, putting $300 in his watch pocket, and the remainder in the inside waistcoat pocket, where he placed it in. He took the Cortland street ferry for the West Shore train. He saw two men on the boat, and again in the cars who were in the hotel when he exposed his money. Upon nearing Kingston two men began playing three card monte. Mayermore held aloft from the game, but consented to change money for the gamblers. As he did so, seven or eight men gathered around him. One grabbed his $300; in the scuffle his waistcoat was cut open and the $6,200 taken. An alarm was raised, but the men left the train at Kingston. Mayermore was told that there was no police there, and in his excitement he came on here and related his story to the police with tears in his eyes. Chief Wright advised him to go back to New York and lay his case before Inspector Byrnes. He left on the 9:50 train on the Central road for New York. Mayermore has a good mind picture of the men.

The Gates Ajar.

LONDON, June 19.—Lord Lockville having recently closed a bridle path leading through Knole park, one of his estates, in County of Kent, a meeting of residents of that section was held to protest against his action. The path had for years been considered a public highway, and the free expression of indignation on the part of several leading spirits in the meeting aroused intense excitement. After the adjournment of the meeting a portion of the gathering, headed by a local magistrate, proceeded to the park, and destroyed the gates and carried the pieces to the door of Lord Sackville's mansion, where they left them.

M. Pasteur Explains.

NEW YORK, June 20.—In reply to an inquiry by a member of the American Public Health association M. Pasteur, the celebrated French savant, has dictated a letter stating that his experiments have doubtless been misunderstood by the public, and that while he has proved that dogs can be made proof against hydrophobia by inoculation with the virus of hydrophobia in a particular way, it is not possible to transport the virus to any great distance, and it is not yet possible to protect men against hydrophobia by inoculation.

Suicide of a Merchant.

NEW YORK, June 19.—S. Waldo Sibley, junior partner of the firm of John L. Brenner & Co., one of the largest commission houses in the city, whose principal office is in Boston, Mass., committed suicide at his place of business, No. 62 Leonard street, by cutting his throat. Mr. Sibley was about 30 years of age. He was a native of Bennington, Vt., and resided with his wife at the Berkely house. Despondency, on account of sickness, is supposed to be the cause of the act.

Patti and Bernhardt.

LONDON, June 19.—Truth says that Miss Patti has signed an agreement with Col. Mapleson to sing in America next season. She will sail for New York in November. She is to receive $4,000 for each concert and all her expenses. She receives $2,000 down and $15,000 in October. The agreement, however, calls for a security of $50,000 before sings.

PARIS, June 19.—M. Meyer has leased the Porte St. Martin theatre and engaged Sarah Bernhardt for seven years.

Boiler Explosion.

PITTSBURG, June 19.—A United Press special from Bellton, W. Va., announces a terrible boiler explosion at the saw mill of Jackson & Sears, on Laurel Run, at 5 o'clock, resulting in the death of one of the owners and a laborer named Oates. Three others were badly, possibly fatally, injured. The mill, which was a large one, is a total wreck.

England's Champion Skaters.

PHILADELPHIA, June 19.—A race of 126 yards for a purse of $450 was run yesterday in Fasting park by Frederick Rogers, of Dobtown, Pa., Broadhurst, champion of England, and Wheatley of Canada. Rogers came in first, with Wheatley two yards behind, and Broadhurst almost abreast of him. Time, 11 4-5 seconds.

A Heavy Failure in New Orleans.

NEW ORLEANS, June 18.—James Buckner, a broker-in-law of Senator Robert Enoch's has failed, after having lost, it is said, $1,000,000 and $300,000 in cotton and grain speculations, mostly in Chicago. He became insane a few months ago, recovered six months ago, by the death of his father.

UNFINISHED.

[J. Chandler Melvin.]

The day has ended, and the sun has set,
Unfinished is the task I planned to do;
I sit and ponder o'er with deep regret
The golden sunlight vanished from my view.

And thus fell oft at last, when life doth close,
And toil is ended for the restless feet,
And for the busy hands the long repose,
The cherished work of life is incomplete.

O Thou who knowest all from sun to sun,
From birthday morning to death's evening chill,
Look on Thy children, with their tasks undone,
In loving kindness, and forgive them still.

ABUSING THE MADONNA.

How Italian Peasants Tried to Get Rain for Their Crops.

[Home Cor. Boston Herald.]

The long drouth that has prevailed in southern Italy was beginning to work even worse effects on the minds of the country people than on the crops themselves. Irasible and excitable enough at best, such niggardly treatment at the hands of the Heavenly powers was fast exciting a revolutionary fury that bided its time. One of the wrathful temper growing rips, judge from the following incident: A lady, who has just come here from Sicily, told me that in a village near Trapani, the people, including the priests and parents, in their despair, took out of the sacristy an old and rather dilapidated image of the Virgin and tied it handsomely regided, so shoring a disposition on their part to do the generous thing by her, and so make sure of her help. Then, forming a procession, men, women and children went around a wide circuit, ing hill, the priests bearing the sacred image under a canopy, and spent several hours in loud entreies for rain. The position was a favorable one for the blessed lady to see just what the state of affairs was throughout the whole parched and gaping surrounding country, and to rob her of every excuse that she had been shut up in the sacristy and knew nothing about it. Then, the service over, all marched backed to their homes, and the venerable image was reverentially restored to its place.

The first day followed and still no rain, then a second, then a third. This was too much for human patience, and when the fourth day came dry and arid as before, the popular fury broke loose. Storming the sacristy, the cruel image was torn down, a rope tied around its neck, and then dragged for two hours through every dirty street of the village, the children hooting, the dogs barking, and the men and women heaping blows and imprecations on it. As a final mark of hatred, a sentinel there was caught out in which a little water remained, and into this was thrown the hard-hearted and ungrateful lady. It was determined on one point unanimously: to give her a soak, even if she would not give them one in turn, and to let the heavenly powers understand, so far as kicks and outrage could express it, just what the inhabitants of that village thought of them. Strange enough, the day after this outbreak of fury rain actually fell. Then an equal outbreak of rejoicing set in. The image was reverentially taken out of the ditch, money raised to repair and regild it, and a service of thanksgiving offered for its celestial aid.

When Greeley Got Swearing Mad.

[New York World.]

George W. Smalley, London correspondent of The Tribune, is a son-in-law of Wendell Phillips. He graduated from Yale college, and then began his journalistic career by writing a baggage car a report of the battle of Antietam. In 1867, while John Russell Young was out of the city, Smalley was temporarily in charge of The Tribune. Jesse J. Cummings was night editor. Greeley had written an editorial article one night, and having suggestment to lecture before Father Mathew society, and left the office without reading his proof sheets. He asked Cummings to go over them and correct. Anne did so, John Robinson holding the manuscript.

Everything was all right, but when Amos went up-stairs to make up the editorial page he found a sprawling mark on the revised proof-sheet. Greeley had referred to "Symmes' Hole" in his article, and Smalley, who had never heard of "Symmes' Hole," had knocked out the word "Symmes" and marked in "Holmes' Hole." Amos went down-stairs and expostulated with him, but Yale college was not to be enlightened by a boy who had gained proficiency at a printing office. "I am managing editor here, and am responsible," said Smalley, in a freezing tone, stiffing short all explanations, and "Holmes' Hole" is renained. Horace walked up to Amos' desk at 6 p. m. on the following day, saying in a piping tones: "Did you see the proof, Amos?" Did did. "Well," said the great editor, throwing his hat on the floor, "you're a d—d blockhead." To night editor produced the proof-sheet with the slang in Smalley's handwriting, and told his story. Horace stood like one dazed. "Well, Amos," he finally blurted, "I want you to understand from this time forward I never allow any d—d sandy-haired Yankee to alter my editorials." Smalley was quickly relieved, and never again filled the managing editor's chair.

In Cawsper's Dear House.

[India Cor. London Ocean.]

I went down to the court house the other day and got a glimpse of the Indian justice system. As we approached the building I noticed a crowd of natives around the doors, and asked the gentleman who was with me what it signified.

"Oh, they are professional witnesses," he responded. "That is one of the institutions of the country. For just such a native can buy a witness here who will swear to any lie. That is one of the reasons why we are all so bitterly indignant at the policy of this government which lets us be exposed to the accidently liable to the attacks of native malice already.

Inside the court house I found native barristers wrangling with the judge, of whom I before a European judge. A Hindoo client thinks that his lawyer is an inefficient one unless he bellows at the court all day. It was really painful and disgusting to witness such boisterous stupidity. I have often watched the professional jurymen at home banging around the courts, but this was the first time I had ever seen professional witnesses. It is said that if a Hindoo hates you, he will cut his face and shoulders badly and then get them purchased Indian judge to swear to the facts of an imaginary assault.

A New Excuse.

[Chicago Tribune.]

"I think I shall go to the circus this year when it comes around," said the deacon to his wife.

"Why, my dear," she exclaimed, shocked at the idea, "you surely will not act so inconsistently. You have always been opposed to theatres, circuses, and things of that kind."

"That is true, but the circus this year has a sacred elephant, and of course there can't be any harm in going to see that."

"Certainly not, my dear; we will go together."

Professor Morrison declares that "in 10,000 years the ocean will roll 200 feet deep over New York city."

SOCIAL AMBITION.

The Deceits, Devices and Struggles of Getting Into Society.

Perseverance and Prodigality of Those Who Have Faith in Possessions—A Pacific Millionaire's Mistake.

[Columbus in Chicago Tribune.]

While money alone will not accomplish social victories, money, united to some striking else, will perform prodigies. This is a commercial age, and a commercial capital, and money is of necessity to the support of social movements of any kind that it can not be ignored. The mistake of pushing people across from their excess of faith in possessions, unsanctified and unrelieved. If they would push less, manage more artfully, and practice a moderate degree of patience, they might produce results that they hardly dream of. Society is always suspicious of pushers from the simple fact of their pushing. They may push in private as much as they like; it is their open pushing that injures them, rendering their effort vain and defeating their special purpose. If a family of large means, with tact, and without vulgarity, should be socially ambitious, it might have its ambitions, when a family of much larger means of a clumsy, pushing disposition would be frustrated in all its attempts at advancement.

DOLLARS AND SENSE.

Actual instances may be cited in proof of this. A man with a number of millions came here several years since from the west, and bought a handsome house. With no training of humble origin and slenderly educated—he is reputed to have begun life by keeping a grocery in a village of Westchester county—he is quiet in manners, free from pretension and exceedingly fond of money. He had but two children—a girl possessed of good sense and a good education, without beauty or brilliancy, and a son not above mediocrity, though kind-hearted and of pleasant address. Neither he nor his wife seemed desirous of social prominence or to take any pains to secure it. But, after a while, the young man married the daughter of a man of historic antecedents, belonging to one of the most distinguished families in the republic. The daughter found a husband in conspicuous contrast who has made his own way by ability, perseverance, force of character, and self-confidence. The western parvenu moved in the best society. He visited the best circles, and do these no discredit. But if they had not had great wealth, which rendered alliance with them advantageous, they and their children would have remained outside the pale. It is probable enough that the western Croesus, who was eminent in the financial world before coming here to reside, managed the connubial campaign of his children, as he has managed so many enterprises of a different, though scarcely more difficult, nature.

DISAPPOINTED PURSE-PRIDE.

Another millionaire broke up his house on the Pacific slope, a decade, since to found one in this city, with the lavished object of getting into metropolitan society. His object was too evident, and his purse-vanity was noisy and offensive. He had the art of bidding his dollars defiance, of battering to others, and his wife and daughters were devoid of the instincts which, with the other sex, often count for more than birth or breeding. They spent a deal of money in pursuance of their design; they had a splendid mansion; they had superb carriages; they bought pictures, books, bric-a-brac and curiosities; they were constant at the opera; they pushed hard, steadily and long; but all their efforts miscarried. They were not received by anybody whose recognition they coveted; they could not get over the first barrier erected against them, and they were obliged at last to surrender. They were greatly disappointed at their failure; they denounced the society they could not enter, calling it vulgar (vulgar persons are generally the readiest to apply the word to others) sordid, corrupt, contemptible, odious, disgusting. They were shocked and nettled in Paris, where they take solid comfort in abusing American and Americans to whoever will listen to them—usually their companions of their own grade.

GREAT SOCIAL MISTAKES.

The same mistake is frequently made here by persons who ought to know better. They imagine that it requires but a certain sum for social position in New York, and with this belief they quit the interior town or village where they have secured their fortunes to disport themselves in Manhattan. On arrival they discover that wealth in the country is not wealth in the capital; that a million is only an independence here, and that to make a show, which is of their aim, requires a vast income. Still, they are bent on so doing. They are resolved to this end, but they learn ere long that prodigality brings not what they want. Their costly drawing-rooms are silent; their handsome furniture is almost useless; their splendidly furnished table has no guests. Is it possible, they ask themselves, that wealth will not act as an open sesame to the best houses? They perceive after every effort that they do not avow it. They assume, instead, to get tired of New York; they find that it is not healthful, or agreeable, or convenient, or something else, and they remove with their household goods to their former home and indulge their imagination in rehearsing their experiences in Manhattan. They often pretend that they liked the city and would have been glad to stay—they had so many delightful friends—if it had not been for mamma's health, or papa's business.

RIDDEN TO THE FEAST.

Repeatedly it has happened that families have come here from the country and, without introductions, or any of the regular forms, have given entertainments for notable persons who had never been invited to accept ance. They could not see why those invited should not accept, since they might be sure of good fare and warm welcome. They were actually surprised at the attention was paid to their notes, and were overflowing with indignation at such rudeness. So ignorant were they of social laws and social customs, that they were bewildered in understanding why kindly intent should not be respected, and polite invitations answered by personal presence. Such a thing would not be possible except for the false reputation fastened on New York by irresponsible chroniclers, who ransack the four corners of New Yorkers is for money; that money will secure anything; shield anything; efface anything; that money is omnipotent, omnipresent, and omniscient. A large portion of the intelligent public, in divers parts of the country, appears to be unaware that the metropolis is other than commercial. The simple truth is that it is like any other great city; that it abounds in defects, in misgovernment, in greed, selfishness, vice and crime; but it has another side which it is not printed in the newspapers, and it may lay claim to a society not entirely mercenary.

Locals.

—The North Plainfield Public School closes one week from to-day.

—There is to be a change next Sunday in the time table of the P. & R. R. We are promised a full corrected table next week.

—A fair and festival will be held in Excelsior Hall, Scotch Plains on Wednesday and Thursday of next week by All Saints Episcopal Church. A good time is anticipated.

—Demarest, the grocer, is the first storekeeper to start the early closing movement this year. On and after Monday, June 23d, he will close his store at 8 o'clock. Who will be next to follow his example.

—Mr. L. M. French, the carriage manufacturer, is turning out some handsome carriages. He has a good trade with those who appreciate good work. His will bear comparison with New York establishments of much larger pretensions, and his prices are far below.

—The minstrel show of Dupree & Benedict appeared here last night as advertised notwithstanding their recent financial difficulties. Mr. Archie White is the manager, and the reputation achieved by Dupree & Benedict by years of hard work was fully maintained. They left a good impression behind them.

—The new daily paper in Plainfield, the EVENING NEWS, is having a booming time of it, having already, though not a month old, a circulation of over 1,000. The editor being urged to make it a party organ, and not wishing to do so, has solved the difficulty by opening his column to both of the political parties, giving each an opportunity to defend their party and principles.—New Brunswick Home News.

The Scott Press Works.

Mr. Walter Scott, the inventor of the Scott Perfecting Press, called at this office yesterday, to secure a copy of the first number of THE NEWS to be placed, with other articles of local interest, under the cornerstone of the main building of the Scott Press Works, now in course of construction in the northeasterly portion of the city. He is pushing his grant with all possible energy, and expects by August 1st to have one of the buildings completed.

Mr. Scott at present has an office in the Coward building, where several draughtsmen are kept busy on drawings, so that pattern makers can begin making patterns as soon as the new buildings can be occupied. Contracts for tools and machinery have been awarded to the most skillful manufacturers in different parts of the country, and a new one hundred horse Corliss engine, with a steel boiler, and having all the latest improvements, has been ordered.

There is to be a tall smoke chimney to have a nine feet opening at the top and receive the smoke from all parts of the works, including the foundry, through suitable conductors.

A gigantic crane for conveying tons of iron to any part of the works, within thirty or forty feet one way, by sixty or seventy feet another, the crane being moveable on steel tracks, is to be one of the features.

Everything is being done on a gigantic scale, even the iron ore is run off on a side track directly to the furnaces, and steel tracks run in every direction to facilitate work.

Mr. Scott is well supplied with orders to begin operations with, and proposes to freely sustain the reputation he has made in the famous Scott Perfecting Press.

The Cornet Band Festival.

The band festival took place in the rooms on Front street last night which were crowded. Everything passed off in a pleasant manner. The decorations of flags, flowers, forns and banners were elegant. A band some flower stand was in the center of the room, and other stands contributed to the effect. A tasty pin cushion was presented to the festival by Mrs. Geo. F. Opdyke and Mrs. Wm. Taylor to be voted to the most prominent member of the band. The votes are to be counted at eleven o'clock to night. The band rendered a number of fine selections during the evening in which both the brass and string instruments participated. A comic song with remarks was sung by Mr. Jas. Havill, followed by a trio by Messrs. Martin, Hapenny and Sutherd.

The string music, was under the charge of Professors Guttman and Frazee.

By special request the festival will be continued to-night. Among the other features the gise club will enliven the occasion by some of their selections.

The Park House Hop.

The opening hop of the season was given last evening at the Park House, though the shower interfered greatly with the attendance, a goodly number were present. The large dining hall was used for the dancing which began at half past eight and continued until the early hours in the morning. The hotel piazzas were prettily decorated with chinese lanterns, and the interior of the house presented a gay appearance after its recent renovation. A number of Plainfield's most prominent people were present.

Hop at the Netherwood.

A hop will be given to-morrow evening at the Hotel Netherwood by the proprietor for the pleasure of his guests. The music will be under the direction of that of last season, Mr. E. Twyford, of New Brighton, S. I.

Law Cases.

Justice Nodyne some time since gave a judgment for the plaintiff in the case of Allen vs. Cary in an action for debt for $57.57. On Wednesday Judge McCormack, of the court of Common Pleas, reversed the decision of the Justice, and fixed the amount at a less sum. William B. Maxson for the plaintiff, Jackson and Coddington for the defendants.

In the case of Wright vs. Bowman, Justice Nodyne gave a decision for the plaintiff for $130. Judge McCormack will render a decision on the appeal next week. John Ulrich for the plaintiff, Jackson and Coddington for the defendant.

Yesterday before Judge McCormack in the case of Rider vs. Lefler, an action for debt for work done on the defendant's house at Netherwood the plaintiff was non-suited. It appeared on the trial that the agreement between the parties was that no bills should be paid unless the work was done to the satisfaction of the Architect and a certificate from him to that effect was produced; and in accordance with a recent decision of the Supreme Court the granted a non-suit. Craig A. Marsh for the plaintiff, R. Y. Lindabury for the defendant.

In the cross action for divorce of Mr. and Mrs. Sutherland, of North Plainfield, before Hugh M. Gaston, Master, at Somerville, the decision was reserved. R. V. Lindabury for Mr. Sutherland, and Jackson and Coddington for Mrs. Sutherland.

Yesterday before Justice Austin of North Plainfield, in the case of White vs. Melbourn in an action for debt, the plaintiff was non-suited. It appeared on the trial that the debt was not yet payable. The plaintiff appeared for himself, and Jackson and Coddington for the defendant.

A Gift of $2,782.

The editor of THE NEWS was last evening the recipient of a package by mail, containing seventeen duly signed and endorsed checks aggregating $2,782, the amounts ranging from $9 to $1,500. We were at a loss to comprehend why we were so favored. Could it be a spontaneous tribute to what some are pleased to call our enterprise, in coming into a strange land and starting a daily newspaper at ten cents per week? Our large list of subscribers and our advertisers were a satisfactory recognition of that.

Could it be a campaign fund to defray the cost of a Republican or Democratic column in THE NEWS? The amount is more than is necessary for the space we would consent to sell, and we are not aware of any possible emergency wherein the surplus would become due.

Money is a good thing to have, if properly obtained and properly used, and we know we could properly use it in increasing our facilities, but money improperly obtained is said to be "the root of all evil." We believe we are rich enough in the enjoyment of the good opinion of our neighbors and in the prosperity of THE NEWS, to decline the questionable gift of even $2,782. We have, therefore, returned the amount to Postmaster Pope, in trust, with a request that he donate it to whatever public purpose it will do the most good.

New Brunswick Editors Arrested.

A newspaper recently started in New Brunswick has come to grief. H. Gower Hose, a festive Lothario recently from England where his wife and family still reside, a few months ago was engaged from New York as a reporter on the New Brunswick Home News, of which Mr. H. Boyd an energetic and experienced journalist, is proprietor. The conduct of Mr. Hose in New Brunswick made it necessary for Mr. Boyd to discontinue his services. Howard B. Tisdall, whose brother, Edward Tisdall was formerly reporter for many years on the New Brunswick Fredonian, and one of the ablest and best known and respectable journalists in New Jersey and whom Howard B. Tisdall succeeded, formed a co-partnership with Hose a few weeks ago, and began the publication of a paper called the Evening Star, with money borrowed from various citizens of that place. The team have been suddenly brought to grief by trying to palm off counterfeit coin for news, including libels on old and respected citizens.

On complaint of Mr. L. Hertz, president of the Reform Club, both editors have been arrested. Hose was held on a second complaint in $500 bonds to appear at the September term of court.

To the Editor of THE EVENING NEWS.

New York, June 19, 1884.

Allow me to compliment you on your spicy and readable paper. I have received and read every issue since you commenced publishing and feel certain that in the future it will rank with such lively and well edited papers as the New York Daily News and Danbury News. Please send me a copy daily. Wishing Plainfield Daily News good success, I remain,

Yours respectfully,
M. J. DIXON.

Another Accident at Round Brook.

A man by the name of Smith fell from a flat car while the train was rounding the curve east of Round Brook early this morning. He was badly bruised about the head. The body was removed to Trenton by his traveling companion. The man is supposed to have been stealing a ride, and getting asleep to have accidentally fallen off.

The First Grove Meeting.

The first Grove Temperance Meeting for the Summer under the auspices of Howell Division, Sons of Temperance, will be held in Berry's Grove, on Grove street by the bridge, next Sunday afternoon at 3:15. The Hon. Chauncey Shaffer is announced as one of the speakers.

Personal.

The Delmonicos are at the Hotel Netherwood.

Mr. H. B. Dunn, of Seventh street, has gone to Atlantic City for a few days.

New Brunswick's ex-Collector.

A prominent citizen of Plainfield, gave recently, in a casual conversation, some interesting information about New Brunswick's ex-County Collector, Levi D. Jarrard, now at Trenton for a session or so. Mr. Jarrard, to our personal knowledge, has always been held one of the most methodical of men, an astute politician who carefully looked after details, a man crafty and calculating to a conspicuous degree.

For ten years back he had given more time to politics than to private business, which thereby suffered beyond repair. Finally the ex-member of the Republican State Committee, the ex-State Senator from Middlesex, the ex-Postmaster and ex-County Collector Jarrard altered a figure in the Collectors' Books, by which to conceal a theft, familiar to all. It is understood that he had carefully calculated the consequences, and concluded that the alteration of a figure did not constitute forgery, and that he could not be therefore returned from Canada, in which he had sought refuge, to Canada he secured a hotel and proceeded to fit it up for business.

Ten years ago Adrain Graff, ex-City Treasurer of New Brunswick, at that time a leading Republican of the Jarrard clique, ran away with some $25,000 or over. Secured the matter, and likewise settled in Canada. Graff met Jarrard and was to run the billiard room of the hotel.

This congenial pair had their golden dream rudely dispelled. Jarrard discovered too late that the alteration of a figure as in his case did constitute forgery, and prosecuting Attorney Rice only regretted that he had not with him an indictment whereby he might also have secured Graff, whom he unexpectedly met with Jarrard. Jarrard is understood to be "in" with the keeper, and bagatelles flies in the State Prison, but in the State Hospital. Graff is still at liberty

Concerning the Crescents.

The New York Evening Post says concerning a game of ball to have been played by the Crescents with the South Orange club a few days ago:

The Crescents, of Plainfield, were to play with 6 men from South Orange on Saturday, but at the last moment the game was again postponed. The Crescents have the reputation of being the best amateur club in the State.

"50 Miles Per Day or Die."

A pedestrian passed down Broad street, Elizabeth, Friday, stopped at the Sheridan House a moment for a bracer, and disappeared around the corner into Railway avenue. On his cap he wore a placard reading "From New York to San Francisco. Fifty miles per day, as far as Chicago, or die."

The Reform Club Building.

At the business meeting of the Reform Club held last evening it was resolved to go ahead and fit up the auditorium of the building recently purchased.

State Matters.

Robert A. Haggerty has been re-appointed Chief Detective of the New Jersey Detective Bureau for a term of five years by Governor Abbett.

The Camden Board of Education have agreed upon the sum of $107,400 as the appropriation for school purposes for the coming year.

Frank B. Warner, of Asbury Park, has been held by U. S. Commissioner Morgan, of Camden, for trial on the charge of opening a letter which was addressed to another person.

Wm. Lisk, a resident of Millville, fell from a train on the Camden and Mount Ephraim Railway as it was coming into Kaigh's Point Wednesday afternoon and received serious injuries.

Elizabeth has an "Early Rising Club," an organization composed of young men. As a sample of what they do, one day's programme was: From four till five a game of ball; from five till half-past six a row on the sound.

John G. Van Hise was drowned at New Brunswick on the Camden and Mount Ephraim Railway as it was coming into Kaigh's Point Wednesday afternoon and received serious injuries.

C. P. Richmond, who for several years has been Superintendent of the National Cemetery at Finn's Point, has been ordered to take charge of the National Cemetery at Danton Rouge, La. He is succeeded by John Lawn, of Louisville, Ky.

Howard Champion, the fireman of the Camden and Atlantic Railroad engine which was bringing the Lakeside excursion to Camden Wednesday afternoon was knocked off his engine by a safety gate at Haddonfield, which was being raised as the train was passing through the town. He was badly injured.

The decision of the Supreme Court that the act under which present members of the Jersey City Board of Finance were appointed is unconstitutional has excited much interest. An appeal has been taken to the Court of Errors, and the Board will remain as at present constituted until a final decision is reached. Wednesday night Ex-Senator Bedenbergh said that on being informed of the decision, he and his colleagues had thought of resigning, but had decided not to do so.

To Our Friends.

The Reform Club of Plainfield having realized generous cash contributions sufficient to pay for and secure title to the property formerly known as the Second Baptist Church, corner of Second street and Central avenue, this city, and funds being likewise available, chiefly through the noble exertions of the Christian Temperance Ladies, to furnish and equip the purchased building when properly altered and repaired for the practical use of the Club, respectfully though urgently appeal to the liberality and kindly feelings of the citizens of Plainfield and vicinity for additional means to fully complete such needful alterations and repairs.

The good work already accomplished by the Reform Club, under the approving smile of Divine Providence and the still greater work awaiting future efforts, certainly commend it to the favorable consideration and support of every friend of humanity.

The pecuniary demands made upon the public for various laudable objects, causes hesitancy on the part of the Club to solicit further aid, but valuing as its members do the great important Temperance reformation they are striving to permanently establish, emboldens them to thus ask the favor of a liberal donation, that early and substantial encouragement will follow the asking.

Donations to the aforesaid purpose to the extent of individual ability and inclination, will be thankfully received and acknowledged by the several officers of the Club, or either member of its Executive or Subscription Committees, the names of whom are hereunto subscribed.

ACTS OF THE COUNCIL AND GENERAL ASSEMBLY

of the State of New Jersey, from the establishment of the present Government, and Declaration of Independence, to the end of the first sitting of the eighth session, on the 29th day of November, 1783, with the Constitution prefixed. An Appendix, containing the Articles of Confederation of the United States, etc., with two alphabetical tables and an index. Compiled under the appointment of the Legislature, by Peter Wilson, A. M. Printed by Isaac Collins, Trenton, Printer to the State of New Jersey in 1784.

PART IV.

XIX. That there shall be no establishment of any one religious sect in this province in preference to another; and that no protestant inhabitant of this Colony shall be denied the enjoyment of any civil right merely on account of his religious principles; but that all persons, possessing a belief in the faith of any protestant sect, who shall demean themselves peaceably under the government as hereby established, shall be capable of being elected into any office of profit or trust, or being a member of either branch of the Legislature, and shall fully and freely enjoy every privilege and immunity enjoyed by others their fellow-subjects.

XX. That the Legislative Department of this Colony may, as much as possible, be preserved from all suspicion of corruption, none of the judges of the Supreme or other courts, sheriffs, or any other person or persons possessed of any post of profit under the government, other than Justices of the Peace, shall be entitled to a seat in Assembly; but that on his being elected and taking his seat, his office or post shall be considered as vacant.

XXI. That all the laws of this province, contained in the edition lately published by Mr. Allinson, shall be and remain in full force, until altered by the Legislature of this Colony (such only excepted as are incompatible with this charter) and shall be, according as heretofore, regarded in all respects by all civil officers, and others, the good people of this province.

XXII. That the common law of England, as well as so much of the Statute Law, as have been heretofore practised in this Colony, shall still remain in force, until they shall be altered by a future law of the legislature, such parts only excepted as are repugnant to the rights and privileges contained in this charter; and that the inestimable right of trial by jury shall remain confirmed, as a part of the law of this Colony, without repeal forever.

XXIII. That every person, who shall be elected as aforesaid to be a member of the Legislative Council or House of Assembly, shall, previous to his taking his seat in Council or Assembly, take the following oath or affirmation, viz.: I A B do solemnly declare, that, as a member of the Legislative Council (or) Assembly (as the case may be) of the Colony of New Jersey, I will not assent to any law, vote or proceeding, which shall appear to me injurious to the public welfare of said Colony; nor that shall annul or repeal that part of the third section in the charter of this Colony, which establishes that the elections of members of the Legislative Council and Assembly shall be annual; nor that part of the twenty-second section in said charter respecting the trial by jury; nor that shall annul, repeal, or alter any part or parts of the eighteenth or nineteenth sections of the same. And any person or persons, who shall be elected as aforesaid, is hereby empowered to administer to the said members the said oath or affirmation.

Provided always, and it is the true intent and meaning of this Congress, That if a reconciliation between Great Britain and these Colonies shall take place, and the latter be again taken under the protection and government of the Crown of Great Britain, this charter shall be null and void, otherwise to remain firm and inviolable.

Democratic Congressmen Pleased Over the Action at Saratoga.

Hon. W. H. Caulkins Nominated for Governor by the Indiana Republicans—An Inquiries to the Bloody Mason.

INDIANAPOLIS ind., June 20.—The Republican state convention was called to order by Hon. John Overmyer, chairman of the state central committee. Prayer was offered, and Hon. Stanton J. Peelle was elected permanent president. and W. A. B Roberts, secretary. Nominations for governor were made as follows: Hon. Caulkins nominated by acclamation not being ready to report. Hon. W. H. Caulkins, of Laporte; Col. W. W. Dudley, of Wayne, and Gen. John P. Shanks, of Jay county, were named. The name of Gen. Gresham was not presented. Before balloting was commenced Hon. R. W. Thompson, from the committee on resolutions, reported. It pronounces the nomination of Blaine and Logan as a fitting one, asks that the Indiana state constitution be revised, and declares in favor of Inscription of the Scott Liquor law. The platform was adopted. With a number of scattering votes Mr. Caulkins was nominated for governor on the first ballot, receiving 1081 votes. Dudley 340 votes and Shanks 300. Thompson, 1. The nomination was made unanimous. Mr. Caulkins appeared and was heartily greeted, making a brief speech.

Nine hours elapsed in the nomination of a state ticket, as there was a sharp fight for every office. The ticket is as follows:

For governor, Congressman Calkins; lieutenant-governor, State Senator Eugene Bundy, Henry county; secretary of state, Robert Mitchell, Lake county; auditor of state, Bruce Carr, of Orange; treasurer, R. R. Stiel, of Marion; attorney general, W. C. Wilson, of Tippecanoe; judge supreme court, E. P. Hammond, of Lake; judge supreme court, William Haggett, supreme public instruction. Barnabas C. Hobbs.

The ticket represents all elements of the party and all sections of the state

Opinions of Democratic Congressmen

WASHINGTON, June 20.—Generally, Democratic congressmen feel gratified over the action of the Saratoga convention. The original Cleveland men are jubilant, and say it ensures his nomination at Chicago on the first ballot. They say that the New York delegation goes to Chicago uninstructed, they say, does not lessen the governor's chances; that the New York delegation, when they see there is no hope for Cleveland, will vote as a unit for him. Others, who prefer Bayard, Slocum or McDonald as first choice, say the harmonious action at Saratoga insures the united vote of the state, Bruce Carr, of Orange; treasurer, R. R. Stiel, of Marion; attorney general, W. C. Wilson, of Tippecanoe; judge supreme court, E. P. Hammond, of Lake; judge supreme court, William Haggett, supreme public instruction. Barnabas C. Hobbs.

Opinions of Democratic Congressmen

WASHINGTON, June 20.—Generally, Democratic congressmen feel gratified over the action of the Saratoga convention. The original Cleveland men are jubilant, and say it ensures his nomination at Chicago on the first ballot. They say that the New York delegation goes to Chicago unin structed, they say, does not lessen the governor's chances; that the New York delegation, when they see there is no hope for Cleveland, will vote as a unit for him. Others, who prefer Bayard, Slocum or McDonald as first choice, say the harmonious action at Saratoga insures the united vote of the state, party in New York state, and places the election of their candidate, whoever he may be, beyond a doubt.

Representative Cox received a telegram from Hon. John Kelly, New York, stating that the Saratoga convention passed off satisfactorily to him, and that Tammany had got all that was required. The telegram expresses the belief that the New York delegation will support, as a unit, some New York man for the nomination. Mr. Cox interprets this last to mean that the delegation will unite on Cleveland.

Congressman Stevens, of New York, who has returned from Saratoga, says the New York delegation will observe the unit rule and support Cleveland. Mr. Stevens was formerly a supporter of Mr. Flower.

Democratic Convention Tickets.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 20.—The sub-committee on arrangements of the national Democratic convention has issued the following notice:

"The applications made to the members of the national committee for tickets of admission to the Democratic national convention of 1884 exceed the understanding of, the method by which they are distributed. The tickets are printed and issued by the committee according to rules which have been followed in past conventions. They are not to be given as a favor to any person. The hall will have 10,500 seats, and of these 2,000 will be occupied by delegates, alternates, officers and committees. About 800 seats will be allotted to the press. Subscribers to the fund to pay the expenses will receive 750 tickets, and 750 more will be sent for distribution among the local committees and city and county officers. It is supposed that 1,900 tickets will be given to senators and representatives in congress, governors, and prominent men of the country who will attend the convention. Nine hundred and fifty tickets will be reserved by the national committee for contingencies. The remainder of the tickets will be given to the delegates, making six tickets for each, for distribution to the public."

Senator McDonald Speaks.

CHICAGO, June 20.—Senator McDonald left this city for Springfield, Ill., for the purpose, it is understood, of securing the support of ex-Gov. Palmer, ex-Gov. Robinson and Gen. Morrison, all of whom are candidates for the national ticket. These gentlemen are supposed to control the Democratic vote of Illinois. Before leaving, McDonald said: "The next convention will be one of more harmonious than I expected, having heard so much of the objections raised by Tammany. But I interpret the action of the New York delegation for Cleveland. Had he been regularly indorsed no question would have been raised, and he would, very likely, have been the Democratic nominee. The failure of the convention to instruct for him, however, appears to be ground for the assertion that the nomination is in the field for the man who has the greatest strength in New York. I am not for Cleveland, of course, is one of these men."

Logan's Correspondence.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—One of the most visited places at the capitol is slightly embarrassing, results of Gen. Logan's nomination is the overwhelming mass of mail matter which is daily deposited in the box in the senate committee room. The second fourth of the entire mail seems to find its way there, completely drowning the voluminous correspondence of the most prominent senators. While the bulk of the mail is made up of letters to cash in large majority of letters into the waste basket unanswered. Gen. Logan has made it a rule of his life to reply to even the lightest correspondent on the most trivial subject. Consequently two stenographers have their hands full for the present, as well as Mrs. Logan. Many of the letters are from old soldiers.

Tennessee's Electors.

NASHVILLE, June 20.—At late evening's session of the Democratic state convention D. C. Atkinson and Robert C. Taylor were chosen electors-at-large by acclamation. The platform adopted denounces the present tariff as a masterpiece of injustice, inequality and lobby patronage. The minority platform, which virtually indorsed the Ohio platform, was tabled by a majority of 200.

Lynch to Run for Congress.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—Hon. John R. Lynch, the only negro admitted on the Republican national conventions, will probably be the Republican candidate for congress in the Natchez district. The district is as proper represented by Judge Van Evrie, who was elected in 1882 by a majority of over 100 votes. The district is the only one almost a solid Democratic district, but Mr. Lynch is confident that with a fair ballot and honest count he will be able to make much of that Democratic majority vanish at the coming election.

American Prohibition Party.

CHICAGO, June 20.—There were not over 500 people in the Exposition building at 9:15 when the national convention of American Prohibition party was called to order by P. W. Capwell, of Dale, N. J. The object of the convention as stated in the call is to nominate a presidential ticket, the quota of representatives being 500 delegates and alternates from twenty-five states, territories and the district of Columbia. In the states and territories not represented, the party is not organized. About a dozen women delegates are represented by a woman's right plank in the platform. Ex-Congressman Pomeroy, of Kansas, nominated Hon. J. S. Barlow, as temporary chairman. Barlow, of Wheaton college, addressed the convention. He said the demands made by the anti-Monopolists, Greenbackers and Prohibitionists are all indorsed in the Prohibition platform.

Committees on credentials, finance and platform were appointed and on motion of E. M. Kirby, of Pennsylvania, the convention adjourned until 2 p. m., at which time the different committees will be ready to report, and the delegates will proceed to nominate a presidential ticket

Did Not Vote the Bill.

BALTIMORE, June 20.—Toward the close of the Young Men's Catholic union, assembled this evening, the following resolution offered by a member from New York that Gov. Cleveland vetoed the "freedom of worship" bill in that state, was the cause of quite a sensation. Mr. Carey telegraphed Gov. Cleveland for information, and received the following reply:

"The statement is untrue. The freedom of worship bill did not pass the legislature and has never been before the governor."

An Impetus to the Bloody Mason.

COLUMBUS, June 20.—The declaration of Thurman that he is not a candidate for the presidential nomination and the reiteration of the statement that Payne is out of the race, has given the Bloody Mason quite an impetus, and his friends are offering odds that he will be the nominee at Chicago. They assert that he will get the vote of the New York delegation.

Not a Candidate for Governor.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., June 20.—Mr. Hendricks, in an interview, declines peremptorily to be considered a candidate for governor. He says emphatically that he will not accept the nomination if it should be tendered.

Political Points.

J. R. Taylor was nominated for congress on the 4th ballot by the Republicans of the Eighteenth Ohio district.

At the Republican convention at Carbondale, Ill., yesterday John H. Thomas was nominated for congress by acclamation.

The Democrats of the Nineteenth Ohio district have elected Daniel P. Woods and H. P. Weber delegates to Chicago, and D. L. Rockwell presidential elector.

The Democrats of the Second district of North Carolina elected Henry E. Williams delegate to the Democratic national Chicago convention, and nominated F. A. Woodward for congress. The convention indorsed Gov. Cleveland for president.

THE STAR ROUTE CASES

The People Learning of the Inside History of the Indictment.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—It looks very much as though the inside history of the government's prosecution of the Star Route cases made public through the differences existing between Mr. George Bliss and Mr. Ker, his associate counsel, will be allowed to talk quite freely about Mr. Bliss, and in so doing has caused the impression to go forth that he and the attorney-general were acting in unison in the matter. This is not the case, and the course pursued by Mr. Bliss in many respects Mr. Bliss does not believe that he has been fairly treated, and that there is a disposition to make him the scapegoat for the shortcomings of the others who were associated with him in the management of the Star route cases. He will not consent to this, and in order to protect his own name he will lay bare the whole inside of the case, hurt whom it may. It is known Mr. Bliss can a tale unfold which would astonish the people throughout the country, and the question now being asked by everybody is, Will he do it?

Another "Enoch Arden" Case.

PITTSBURG, Pa., June 20.—Stoop's Ferry, twelve miles from this city, has just furnished an item somewhat resembling Tennyson's "Enoch Arden." Twelve years ago Frank Marsh married Miss Phoebe Barry. They lived happily together for several years, when Marsh went west. He corresponded regularly for a year, when the letters ceased, and word was received by the wife that her husband had been killed while at work in the mines. Two more weeks, which she wore for several years. Last fall she married Michael White, an industrious man. Last Saturday Mrs. Marsh-White received a letter and an express package containing $300 and a letter from her first husband stating that he was coming home. The package was received by her husband, and was carried off the field for dead. He failed to explain why no word had been received from him. The woman is almost distracted, and has gone to Ohio to seek legal advice.

Cantle Gardner's Matrimonial Journey.

NEW YORK, June 20.—An immigrant named William Kemp, who recently arrived from Germany, applied to Assistant Superintendent Fitzpatrick, at Castle Garden, for assistance in procuring a wife. He said that he intended to purchase a farm and he wanted a helpmeet who could milk cows and assist in farm work. John Mahon, of Mount Vernon gardener who visited the garden some time ago in hopes of meeting with a nice German girl to make her his wife, but failed in his object, through the liberality given of his case in the newspapers, has finally accomplished his object, and is to be married on Sunday next.

In the Heel of a Shoe.

NEW HAVEN, June 20.—Considerable excitement exists in Birmingham over the discovery of the skeleton of a newborn in the heel of a shoe which John O'Hara was repairing. There was some grayish unknown substance mingled with the remains in the chambers. Officers are looking for the man who left the shoe. He was an aged and respectable appearing person.

The National Finances.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—Secretary Folger expresses himself as entirely satisfied with the condition of the finances and the outlook for the future. He said to a correspondent that the treasury was in a healthy condition and that there was no lack of money to run the government, but a steady increase in the balance of cash on hand.

NEWS FROM ABROAD.

Abbey Secures Bernhardt for An other American Tour.

Germany Agitated Over the Success of American Mormons—Condemning the Use of Dynamite—The Pope Frightened.

LONDON, June 20.—It is now positively asserted that Mr. Henry E. Abbey has concluded arrangements with Mme. Sarah Bernhardt will make another professional tour of the United States, under his management, during the season of 1884 and 1885. There has been a sort of triangular contest for the engagement of the distinguished star between Col. D. Allston Brown, Mr. Abbey and Mr. Mayer, the manager of the Porte St. Martin, Paris. Col. Brown was distanced early in the competition by the more tempting offers of the others and the final result has been a sort of compromise between Mr. Mayer and Mr. Abbey, under the former is to have a certain control over Mlle. Bernhardt's engagements, either in or out of Paris, during the next five years while he is bound for Mr. Abbey for next winter's season. The terms of Mr. Abbey's agreement with Mr. Mayer are not announced, but it is said the American manager is to pay Mlle. Bernhardt a stated sum of $600 for each performance and a graded share of the receipts when they are above a fixed amount.

Condemning the Use of Dynamite.

LONDON, June 20.—The Times' dispatch from Paris says James Stephens, the ex-Fenian headcentre, has just sent another circular to his friends in Chicago, urging that a meeting of 5,000 Irish-Americans be held to denounce against the practice of using dynamite as a means to secure justice for Ireland. Mr. Stephens cites the most recent explosion in London as illustrating the necessity for some action by true Irishmen to clear themselves from the imputation of cowardly approval of outrages. He calls on them to condemn the present methods of agitating the question of Irish freedom, and advocates a military organization, formed upon the principles of the Carbonari, to be established by Mahoney. The circular will be reprinted at Chicago and extensively circulated throughout the United States.

Mormon Emissaries in Germany.

BERLIN, June 20.—The German authorities are much agitated over the energy and success of American Mormon emissaries in procuring proselytes and emigrants to Utah in Thuringen and other portions of Prussian Saxony. Mormon missionaries in this city, it is said, depict the agricultural and other advantages of Utah in glowing terms, but make no straightforward mention of the polygamous practices of their sect. In this way they allure many young women, whose fate after their arrival in Utah is horrible to contemplate, and many young men who are ignorant of the Mormon creed are also being accepted. The priests and the military authorities of Saxony have started a crusade against the Mormons which will probably result in the expulsion of the emissaries from the province, and possibly from the entire empire.

The Sultan Dissatisfied.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 20.—The Porte does not feel altogether reconciled to the conditions and outlook of affairs in Egypt. It has been assured by the ambassadors of the powers, in which it insists that "England's self-imposed task of restoring order in Egypt is so far completed that the army of occupation ought at once to be withdrawn." The moral authority and prestige of the sultan are amply sufficient," it says further, "to assure the internal tranquility of Egypt. If, however, these are not found sufficient, then an extraneous military force is still necessary such a force might be supplied by the sultan alone or in conjunction with England, France, Italy and Spain."

Complimenting Ex-Minister Sargent.

LONDON, June 20.—Ex-Minister Sargent is again to be complimented by a public banquet, to be given at the Army and Navy hotel, Pall Mall, next Wednesday evening. A number of the leading liberal statesmen who are indignant at the treatment of Mr. Sargent by Prime Bismarck. Mr. Henry F. Gillig is to preside at the banquet, and in the absence of the latter the evening will be Minister Lowell.

Attempt to Wreck a Train.

VIENNA, June 20.—An attempt was made by the anarchists to wreck an express train running between Czernowitz and Lemberg, Galicia. A heavy beam was laid across the rails, but by a remarkable good fortune the engine cut through the obstacle without being derailed, and the train passed on unharmed. Search was made for the perpetrators though some obnoxious officials were on the train

Rumored Capture of Kassala.

CAIRO, June 20.—There is a report in circulation here that Kassala has been captured by the rebels, but there is no confirmation of the rumor as yet.

The mudir of Dongola, who has repeatedly been ordered to join the relief column with his garrison, continues to demand re-enforcements, and seems determined to hold the town against all comers.

The Pope Frightened.

LONDON, June 20.—The Standard, from information furnished by its Rome correspondent, considers that the pope is in a horrible state of fright, and spends nearly all his time in prayer for his safety, having received a letter from anonymous persons to the effect that a plot exists to blow up the vatican with dynamite.

The "Battle of the Boyne."

DUBLIN, June 20.—Sixty thousand Orangemen are expected to assemble at Newry on the 12th of July to celebrate the anniversary of the battle of the Boyne. Extensive is grave apprehension of trouble between the Orange and Nationalist factions on this occasion

Mary Anderson at Turin.

LONDON, June 20.—Miss Mary Anderson has arrived at Turin, in her holiday tour of Italy, and proposes to remain some days in the beautiful Piedmontese capital.

Passage of the Franchise Bill.

LONDON, June 20.—The franchise bill extending the franchise throughout the United Kingdom has passed the house of commons

Col. Morgan's Shortage.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—An investigation of the accounts of Col. Robert C. Morgan, the late disbursing officer of the state department, has revealed a shortage of $10,000 which his bondsmen, Albert Bam, of Brooklyn, and Charles Whitehead and Horace Ruggles, of New York, have been called upon to make good. Mr. Morgan's friends claim that failing health and mental fascination led to the shortage.

A $10,000 Burglary.

DETROIT, June 20.—The safe of J. Collins, in the township of Peck, Sullivan county, was blown, open by burglars, and $10,000 in cash and securities stolen. No clue to the thieves

THE BUSINESS INVESTIGATION

Discrepancies Discovered in the Accounts of Other Officers.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—The investigation of the affairs of the late chief disbursing officer of the postoffice department, who was re-arrested last night on account of additional defalcations, has resulted in the discovery of discrepancies in the vouchers for the accounts of two other disbursing officers, Kirkwood, of the surgeon general's office, navy department, and the late Robert C. Morgan. Of the latter's shortage, evening attractions are undoubtedly going on quietly in most of the disbursing and paymaster's bureaus of the different departments. At the navy department yesterday Mr. Whitney, in advance of frauds among paymasters' vouchers.

Secretary Chandler says they are making a careful examination of the whole matter. So far the investigation of the accounts of the naval bureaus of medicine and surgery and provisions and clothing, of Mr. Hart, of fraudulent pay vouchers had been issued since 1881, and that Kirkwood and one or two other employes and some outsiders are implicated. Indictments will follow soon. Frauds are not believed to extend beyond the bureau in the navy department. Disbursing Officer Stickney, of the navy department, yesterday filed his official bond with his accounts. This was complied with, and, the result showed them to be entirely correct.

A BOLD FORGERY.

How California Sharpers Tried to Swindle Pottstown Bankers.

POTTSTOWN, Pa., June 20.—A bold forgery was discovered in time and neatly frustrated at the banking house of J. W. Casselberry & Co., of this town. A stranger, calling himself Fisher, recently visited the Pacific coast, and while there a number of sharps learned of his presence, and also by trickery and good management obtained from him much valuable information about the banks and financial institutions. They saw how Mr. Fisher wrote his name, and forthwith proceeded to forge several checks on the First National bank, signing Fisher's name, payable to the order of W. Watson. One check was for $1,200 and the other for $430.

They reached the Los Angeles National bank for collection. A telegram from the bank to Casselberry & Co. to know whether they would cash the checks sent a cold chill through the entire establishment, as Mr. Fisher's bank account was not so large, and the firm have suspected that something might be wrong. When Mr. Fisher returned he was informed about the telegram, and he at once stated that he had given no checks. The checks passed through the National bank of Pottstown, and were presented to J. W. Casselberry & Co., who refused payment on them, and they went to protest. Mr. Fisher pronounced them forgeries, though the signatures were remarkably well executed.

Whitestag Veal for Market.

NEW YORK, June 20.—Judge Duffy, who is sitting in the Harlem court, was very indignant when the process of bleeding calves was explained to him. The object of bleeding is to make the meat white, and thus bring a few cents more a pound. The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals has been trying to stop the practice, but the butchers have been too careful, and evidence to convict could not be obtained. William McGill, a butcher in the employ of B. Fogel, the owner of the Lorillard house at 137th street and Railroad avenue, was caught by Superintendent Hankinson in the very act of bleeding a calf. He had six tied down, and in all the others were severe bleeding. Judge Duffy, in severe language, denounced the practice and held McGill in $500 for trial. He issued a warrant for the arrest of Fogel, the employer, and told Agent Evans that he would grant him a search warrant to enter any slaughter house in the city at any day or night where he thought the operation was in progress. The punishment is one year's imprisonment or a fine of $250, or both.

A Wall Street Rumor Denied.

BOSTON, June 20.—President Charles Francis Adams, of the Union Pacific, denies the report from Wall street that he has discovered or broken up any conspiracy whereby the Union Pacific company has been robbed.

A special dispatch from New York contains an interview with President Adams in relation to reports of his interview with the secretary of the interior. He says: "There is no truth in the story and I protested against the government report. The railroad commissioner mentioned to the secretary of the interior that I was in town, and the latter called for me. We had a pleasant chat for ten minutes. No reference was made to the report, but the reporters jumped at the conclusion that I was protesting against something. The report contains some unpleasant facts, but nothing more than every one knows, and no charges are made against the company."

Mrs. Logan Ill.

PORTLAND, Me., June 20.—Gen. Logan, accompanied by several friends, have arrived on the Flying Yankee and was received by a gathering of citizens, including a brother of Senator Hale and Gov. Garcelon of the United States court. Gen. Logan said he had enjoyed his visit to Maine very much, but could not say whether he should visit the state again during the campaign. He said: "I have received a dispatch from Mrs. Logan, saying she is very unwell and asking when I can be back. I shall make as quick time as possible." Gen. Logan responded to a request to the visit to the old soldiers at Togus and said: "I didn't mention politics in my address to them. I simply spoke to my old comrades of war times."

The Nurserymen's Convention.

CHICAGO, June 20.—The convention of nurserymen heard reports from the various states of the union on the condition of horticulture. Illinois, it was stated, had a state horticultural association which had appointed an officer to take measures to check the inroads of insects which have been since 1865, the destroyers of cherries and pears were reported in good condition in Kansas. From Ohio, apples and plums were reported in full supply. There has been in Nebraska a great increase in fruit. Eastern Missouri showed an enormous increase in the production of orchard fruits.

Politics and Gamblers.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 20.—City politics have assumed the extraordinary aspect of open war between Mayor Harrison and the Democratic machine, as represented by Hinrichsen and Mike McDonald. A second raid was made upon the gambling dens which are known to be owned by McDonald. The police found these all in full blast and took several thousands of dollars' worth of gambling paraphernalia was confiscated and many arrests were made. Bail was refused by the mayor. It is believed that the end is not yet.

Thanking the President.

BALTIMORE, June 20.—A resolution was adopted by the Young Men's Catholic union condemning the efforts of the Italian government to sell the propaganda at Rome, and thanking President Cleveland, Secretary Frelinghuysen and Minister Astor for the prompt measures taken by them to prevent the confiscation of the American college.

PENSION ARREARS ACT.

Another Long Debate in the Senate Over Its Proposed Extension.

The Amount Involved in the Bill Estimated at Over Two Hundred and Forty-Six Millions Dollars.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—The senate spent another half day in discussion of the Mexican pension bill, the debate being wholly upon the amendment agreed upon in the Republican caucus and introduced by Mr. Ingalls. As modified, this amendment extends the limitation clause in the arrears of pensions act of 1879 to Oct. 1, next, so that all the Union veterans of the last war who have filed their claims before that date shall receive arrears. The amendment also places widows and privates on an equality, so far as the rate of pension is concerned.

Morgan opened the debate by asking how much the proposed amendment would take out of the treasury. Mr. Ingalls replied that, according to the estimate of Pension Commissioner Dudley, the amount would be about $246,808,930. Mr. Blair explained that this was based on the graded pensions, but by making all officers and privates fare alike, the amount would probably be about $270,000,000. Mr. Mitchell expressed the sense of the Pacific coast when it was put at from $90,000,000 to $25,000,000, while thus far the amount had been nearly exhausted at $60,000,000. Mr. Call, in a series of questions, drew from members of the pension committee the fact that the amendment had not the sanction of that or any other committee, while a corresponding bill in character had been rejected by the pension committee. After Mr. Mitchell had expressed his belief that the treasury could stand the expense, Mr. Blackburger declared he would not support any amendment which proposed to pay out $300,000,000 or $600,000,000 without a bill to that effect having been first recommended or a committee of either house of congress, and when nobody could tell how much money the treasury was taxed vaguely about being just to the Union soldiers, and then Mr. Voorhees said he regretted that the legislation was proposed. That would create no fear if there should, however, be no limits within which claims must be filed, and he therefore moved to strike that out of the amendment.

Mr. Ingalls made a brief but earnest speech against the caucus measure, when Mr. Ingalls took up the cudgel in its behalf. Southern Democrats, he declared, were willing to vote pensions to Mexican veterans who were dropped from the roll because they were disloyal during the rebellion, but when it was proposed to pay the pensions Union veterans, these Democrats immediately began to talk vaguely about extravagance and to oppose the measure. Mr. Ingalls read a number of letters from Union veterans to show how the people of the south hated Yankee pensioners, and spoke some sharp words to the Democrats on that subject. He gave a synopsis of the pension legislation since the war. He agreed with Mr. Voorhees that there should be no limitation to the grave accumulations at present. It was unjust, but he had weakly placed it there as a conference to those who were not willing to be just. It was a compromise, and he was ashamed of it, but it was the best he could get, and he could not get a loaf. He desires to give public notice, Mr. Ingalls added, that if he was a senator when the limit was up he would vote to extend it, and would not another compromise if he could do no better. In conclusion Mr. Ingalls said he did not believe the figures of Commissioner Dudley that the proposed amendment would involve $246,000,000, but he admitted that the amount could not be computed.

It is expected that the discussion will be continued for days, if no attempt will be made to dispose of the bill this week.

No More Degrees for Governors.

BOSTON, June 20.—The statement published in a New York paper that there was a time at the meeting of the board of overseers of Harvard college over a proposition to confer the degree of LL. D. on Gov. Robinson is wholly without foundation. The facts in the case are these: Last year, when the board voted unanimously to confer the degree on Gov. Butler, it was generally agreed among the members of the board that a bad precedent had for the first time been broken, and that no more would be conferred; that thereafter the degree of LL. D. should not be conferred on any man simply because he held the office of governor of Massachusetts. In consequence of this agreement no one has failed to suggest to the overseers the name of Gov. Robinson for a degree, and at the meeting of the board the subject was not even mentioned.

Wagner Must Hang.

CONDENSED NEWS.

The corner-stone of the Bartholdi statue is to be laid by President Arthur July 4, with much ceremony and noisy display of congratulations.

The opera theatre at Leadville has been burned, together with a number of frame houses adjoining, and several firemen were seriously injured.

The much talked of yacht race around Long Island was finished yesterday, the Fanny unexpectedly coming in ahead with the Grayling sailing swiftly at her heels.

On the body of James Hoskins, the eccentric but unfortunate young man who blew his brains out at Minneapolis, were tattooed the words, in several different places, "I am the slave of Mary Hawkins."

The population of Central park, New York, as a popular place for romantically inclined suicides, was again maintained yesterday. A young German named Edward Zeidler shooting a bullet through his brain there from the cause.

Lord Randolph Churchill, in a conservative demonstration at Aylesbury, severely criticised the Egyptian policy of Gladstone, declaring that the great premier was "the direct cause of misery and bloodshed among the inoffensive people."

ALLEGED FAITH CURE.

An Invalid Lady Restored to Reason Through Prayer.

PORTLAND, Me., June 20.—S. Robitscher, a converted Jew, who has conducted a mission for the conversion of Jews here for several years, has made the following statement of a faith cure: "Mrs. Carrie Rosenberg became violently insane in December, 1887, and was taken to Augusta. Two Portland physicians considered her case hopeless. In the hospital in hope for her recovery was maintained. Last Sunday I prayed not to a young Jewish convert to pray for her recovery. We assembled at the mission. A number of unbelieving Jews were present, at whose suggestion two months' time was appointed for her recovery. Most of these Jews promised to accept Christianity if the sign should prove true. Four weeks after a letter came from the superintendent saying that within the last two days a remarkable and unexpected change had appeared in her condition. Since then she has been steadily improving. Monday came a letter from the superintendent dated June 14, two months and a day after Easter, pronouncing her mind quite clear. A letter received by her husband inviting him to take her home at an early date, and finally yesterday two letters from herself, one to me and one to her husband, proved her sanity beyond a doubt."

S. Robitscher is much impressed with what he considers a miracle.

A WHOLE BLOCK BURNED.

Large Fire at Braddocks, Pa., Whisky Vieuing Freely.

BRADDOCKS, June 20.—A fire broke out in Seddon's hardware and tin shop, on Maine street, and before the flames could be controlled the entire block bounded by Eighth and Burton streets was entirely destroyed. The buildings were: The Fawcett house, Burton Street hotel, Hamill's furniture factory, Kelly's liquor store, Seddon's saloon and ten-pin alley, Seddon's hardware and tin shop, Creighton's pump works, and Kittell's restaurant. The loss will exceed $75,000, which is partially covered by insurance.

The fire is believed to be incendiary, as this was the third time Seddon's establishment has been on fire within six weeks. After the fire was out a small-sized riot occurred, participated in by fifteen or twenty persons, who had knocked in the bungs of whisky barrels and drank the liquor until intoxicated. A number of persons were slightly hurt, but none seriously. Twelve special policemen were sworn in, who quelled the disturbance and arrested the principals.

Fire at Baltimore.

BALTIMORE, June 20.—Fire in the ware house of Hopps & Hatter, grain commission merchants, caused a loss of $20,000; insurance, $10,000.

A Dead Indian Problem.

NEW YORK, June 20.—Col. John Burke, of the Buffalo Bill Wild West show, in speaking of the dead Sioux Indian, Two Standing, who died from cerebral spinal meningitis at the Ninety-ninth Street hospital, said: "The remains are still at the hospital. It is our intention to allow the hospital people to see to the interment, and we shall pay the expenses they will incur. We are obliged to pay a sum of money to the dead Indian's father and mother, who are at present residing at Blackbird Hill, Omaha, Nebraska, as it is customary to do so. The Indians take the death very much to heart. When the cool weather sets in we will have the remains exhumed and sent on to the parents."

Capt. Yellow Horse was eating some strawberries out of the palm of his hand just before Col. Burke's statement. He was attired in fancy colors and wore the regulation feathers. Striking his chest several blows and straightening himself up, he said: "The body will be sent home, but not until the flesh comes off the bones. He was my brother-in-law. We have none of us been to the hospital to see Two Standing's body. Big Eagle, him is now chief since White Tail gone off home. He tell him very bad."

Mary Belmer and John Muller's blk. stallion Black Prince. The conditions were mile heats, best three in five, to harness. The betting was in favor of Mary Belmer, and she justified the confidence reposed in her by taking three straight heats. Time—2:38, 2:39½, 2:39.

Humorous Pictures of the Day.

[The Judge.]

In a Strained Voice.

[Drake's Travelers' Magazine.]

"Do you have very much snowslips, Miss Smith?" he asked, as they seated themselves after a waltz.

"Only occasionally," she replied. "I have neglected my music shamefully of late, and am getting quite out of practice."

"I was passing your house last evening," he went on, "and stood at the gate a moment to hear you play. Instead of getting out of practice, I think you are improving —if any improvement is possible," he added, politely.

"Last evening!" she asked.

"Yes; about 9 o'clock."

"You are mistaken. I was at the opera last evening," she said, in a strained voice, as she accepted an invitation to dance from another gentleman. "It was the man tuning the piano you heard."

Simply Immense.

[Drake's Travelers' Magazine.]

George had been holding his girl on his lap for over two hours, and as she weighed 210 odd pounds he was feeling a little his tired, but he was too much of a gentleman to tell her so.

"George, dear," she murmured softly, "are you having a pleasant call?"

"Delightful, darling," he responded, faintly.

"And you are not sorry that we are to be married so soon?"

"No, indeed!"

"And you think I am a real nice girl?" she continued lovingly.

"Nice girl!" repeated George enthusiastically. "Nice girl doesn't begin to express it. I think you are an immense girl."

Shall the Pancake Supplant the Biscuit

[Baltimore American.]

The students of Vassar college eat 5,500 pancakes every morning for breakfast, and The New York World computes that this means 1,995,000 pancakes a year, and, as the average five inches of the normal pancake, means 282 miles of pancakes. The pancake must pay, we opine, be considered as an article of culture. No other food can give that higher esthetic enjoyment which comes from the yellow, circular cakes aglow with the sweetness of New Orleans molasses. The prosaic Boston bean must go. The pancake is king.

Dexter's New Flying Machine.

Curious Scheme and Unlucky Mischief by Professor Mitchell.

[Bridgeport, Conn., Letter in N. Y. World.]

Since the announcement of the $400,000 bequest left by the late William Maxwell to Charles F. Mitchell for aerial experiment with his flying machine, letters from all over the world have been pouring in, asking the professor for information about the bequest and his balloon. Some describe machines they have invented, and many ask for sums of money to perfect ideas of their own. Seven people have notified him within ten days that they each considered having money to prosecute the experiments. Those seven firmly believe that flying through the air will be accomplished successfully.

One man writes that he has "the only flying machine on earth in his mind" and wants $500 right off to mass drawings and the first machine. In a postscript he adds that he will send for another $500 if the first is not sufficient. Another man from St. Paul writes that he has invented a flying machine on the wing principle. The machine is to give gigantic leaps of 500 yards and come down easily on an inclined plane-plan. Another proposes to reach the moon pole by dropping some other man to a balloon holding enough gas only to lift part of his weight so that he could leap over an iceberg with perfect ease and go skipping along until the "pole" was sought.

Another proposes to compress say 50,000 feet of gas, into a small metal cylinder of ten cubic feet capacity, and thus float away with the gas near the clouds.

Another, who signs himself as a seafaring man, writes that he has an invention that will go against the wind, "even in a hurricane." He is quite sure he can rise in the teeth of a western cyclone, run his machine with a similar velocity to that of the wind, and come down just where he started from.

Altogether 1,385 letters have been received and sixteen new born flying-machine inventors have visited Bridgeport within the last ten days. Some of the professor's friends fear that perhaps the lawyers will get the fund, as already the heirs are beginning to question whether William Maxwell was in his right mind. Professor Ritchel will begin on a machine to raise a man 200 feet without gas or steering attachment. The power to work the machine will be compressed air carried to the machine through a hose.

Tomahawked in Chicago.

[Chicago Herald.]

A cowboy from the North Fork of the River Platte got as far as the Union stock yards the other day on a visit to Chicago. As things seemed rather home-like in that quarter he invited them for several hours, imbibing freely and talking with unrestrained hilarity. Some of the natives gathered around and took part in the conversation, and after awhile, when the fighting began, he declared, as he occasionally stopped to get breath, that he hadn't had so much fun since he left home. "Oh, this is elegant," he would say, as some big pork-packer would bowl him one against the side of the head. "That was a beauty. What do you think of that? Well, now, I'm glad to make the acquaintance of you boys. You do me good. File on me, why don't you? Take that, you long-legged tenderfoot!" and so on. The fight last that was a good one. Who was the gentleman that hit me under the ear? No shooting irons, now. Just plain fun. There, I've had two of you down. Come on, some more of you. You ain't getting winded, are you? Hit me once, hard. There, that feels good. How do you like that one, you mud-sharks? I've a good notion to hit you hard once. This reminds me of a time I had last winter on the Niagara, when the boys—"

Just then a policeman, who had been advised of the ride, crept up on the back door, and, coming up behind the cowboy, softly, he dealt him a blow on the skull that sounded like a rifle shot. The gentleman from the North Fork dropped like a log, and, after lying insensible for a moment, got up, looked around wildly, felt of his head and observed:

"That's the first time I was ever tomahawked. Blessed if I knew you had Injuns down here. How many was killed? Where's the trooper?"

Winfield Scott and Jeff Davis.

[Ben: Perley Poore.]

Jefferson Davis, when secretary of war, had a very angry correspondence with Winfield Scott, on the increased pay claimed by the latter on receipt of the title of lieutenant general. Gen Scott, in his last letter, said: "My absence and the new provocation has been the result, first of pity and next of forgetfulness. Compassion is always due to an enraged imbecile who lays about him blows which fall upon himself. Those who attempt suicide to stifle his opponent by the din of naughty words." To this Secretary Davis responded as follows:

WAR DEPARTMENT, May 27, 1856—SIR: I have received your letter of the 20th inst. The delay for which you make a hypocritical apology has strengthened my resolve to remove the labor of vituperation, but having only in this correspondence addressed you with falsehood, and whenever you have presented a tangible point, convicted you by conclusive proof, I have ceased to regard you as base, and as you present nothing in this letter which requires remark, I am gratified to be relieved from the necessity of further exposing your malignity and depravity.

Your obedient servant,

JEFFERSON DAVIS.

Brevet Lieut. Gen. Winfield Scott.

Jim Keene's Gratitude.

[San Francisco Post.]

Those who know Jim Keene best express genuine sorrow for him. There are many instances of his kindness to those who befriended him before he came to affluence. The writer rode down town with one of our oldest mining secretaries this morning who said: "Fourteen or fifteen years ago, when Keene was on the curb in this city, hard broke, with torn clothing and bursted shoes, I used to give him small sums to keep him and his family. One day, after he had made a lucky strike, he came into my office and said: 'Give me $1,000 and I'll make you a little turn in the market.' I gave him the money, and within forty-eight hours, after a successful operation, he returned me $24,000 as my share of the profits."

In Lafayette Square.

[Washington Cor. Baltimore Sun.]

When Gen. Daniel E. Sickles was in Washington, a short time since, an old friend of the General's met one day, proceeding slowly around Lafayette square, gazing earnestly at the old club house, from the windows of which Philip Barton Key used to look, and then across at the mansion which was once his own residence, and which possesses such fateful memories for him. Almost in front of the spot where the two stood as they looked for death beyond the Long Bridge, he stopped, and was evidently musing over the events in which he bore so prominent a part, a full quarter of a century ago. The friend passed on without waiting for the recognized, appreciating that the occasion was such that one should be left undisturbed to his own thoughts.

Photographs of Cadmus' Fire.

Some fine photographs of the Cadmus' Livery Stable fire have been placed before us by the rising young view artist, Mr. Frank W. Burger. The photograph in question was taken by the instantaneous method from the view secured from the law offices of Jackson and Coddington while the firemen were still at work. It is a finished production. The stream of water playing upon the ruins has a very life-like effect. As the fire was one of the most novel of these which have occurred here in many times the enterprise of the artist in securing a view of the fire at the proper moment is to be commended.

Bicycle Accident.

Mr. Lemuel Serrell while out bicycle riding on South avenue near the Nathenwood hill yesterday afternoon took a serious tumble, dislocating his arm and cutting his head. Mr. Serrell has had several other accidents.

NO PAY, NO PLAY.

Our Republican friends have increased their offer twenty-five per cent. above their original proposition for a column in THE NEWS during the campaign. All our columns have a money value to us, and we are not willing to spare even one of them for the campaign at a greater reduction than twenty-five per cent from our regular published rates, which are strictly adhered to, as we do not believe in giving fish to one advertiser and flesh to another. We endeavor to treat all alike. All respectable business men can have the benefit of our large circulation at the very low rates we publish. Regarding the "Republican Column," it is possible that from the reputations of the Republican gentlemen seeking it, and from the reputations of the Democratic gentlemen who are ready to buckle on their armor as the adversaries in a "Democratic Column," that this feature would prove very interesting. But we don't think the chances good enough to make the experiment at our own expense. We know that people like a good local newspaper, and we will spare no expense in that direction. Experience has proved to our satisfaction that we are correct in that view, and all our energies, first, last and always shall bend thereto. The Democratic we understand, are ready to order the areas at our terms, and we certainly will not discriminate in favor of either side.

We believe an open and fair discussion of political affairs in such an independent and largely circulated paper as THE NEWS would redound to the benefit of one side or the other, according to the ability of the writers, and the winning side would certainly win hatsful enough to repay them for their investment, besides showing a creditable public spirit in repaying en route for the privileges afforded by such a local enterprise as THE NEWS.

What New Brunswick Thinks of the Art Museum.

The New Brunswick Home News speaking editorially of the Job Male Library and Art Museum of this city says:

We learn from the Plainfield EVENING NEWS that that small city has now in process of erection a building which will cost the very low rate of $30,000, and will be used as an art museum and library.

This structure is given to the city by ex-Mayor Job Male, upon condition that $20,000 shall be raised for the purchase of books and works of art. Already $17,000 and a large number of valuable art treasures have been contributed.

It seems strange that Plainfield with its population of 12,000 should have so much more public spirit and enterprise than New Brunswick with its 20,000. If there is one thing that we need more than in any other, it is a public library of adequate proportions.

To be sure we have the Sage, Y. C. A. Free Circulating, College and H. School libraries; but these are used by comparatively few. What we need is a distinctive city library that shall contain works that will be of use to our working classes—books on the various trades, as well as a general collection of scientific, literary and miscellaneous works of a popular character.

There is an opportunity for some man of wealth and public spirit to dispose of some of his superfluous riches in aid of a cause that will cause his name no be revered by benefitted thousands. Will not some one follow the example of ex-Mayor Male.

In Afternoon Tea.

Among the new and novel entertainments which are continually being devised by the young people for their pleasure and amusement is that of "an afternoon tea in the woods" which occurred yesterday takes an enviable place. The objective point, the indefinite term "woods" was the famed picnic ing ground, Chimney Rock. The party started from this city at half-past two, and after enjoying the lights and shadows of the mountain fastness, so to speak, and admiring the foaming white ness of Buttermilk Falls which is within easy walking distance of the Rock they returned refreshed and happy to this city in the late evening. One of the party prepared faint-painted tea-kettles as souvenirs of the occasion.

The party consisted of Mr. George Craig, Mr. Frank Goddard, Mr. James Bullock, Mr. Will Haddock, Mr. Will French, Miss Laura Smith, Miss Mamie Stevenson, Miss Josie Stevenson, Miss Hattie French, Miss Nettie French, Miss Emma McGee and Miss Addie McGee. Several other gentlemen than those named expected to go, but were unexpectedly left.

The Festival.

The Cornet Band Festival was continued last night. A large number were present. The decorations were the same as those of Thursday evening. The string music was rendered by Prof Frazee. Mr. James Havill sang a comic song, entitled "What is it?" Messrs. Havill and Hapsony sang a duet, accompanying the singing with their banjos, the Reform Club Choristers sang some of their selections all of which were highly appreciated by the audience.

The beautiful gilt cushion which was presented to the festival to be voted to the most popular member of the band was won by Mr. James McCarthy, who presented it to the leader Mr. Henry Nielsen. The festival was a success financially as well as socially.

In the evening the Reform Club will hold the gospel temperance meeting in the First Baptist Church.

Bicyclers.

The following circular has been issued:

The New Jersey State Division Meeting will be held at Red Bank, N. J., on Saturday, July 5th. The business meeting will be called to order at 11 a. m., to be followed by the banquet and parade, with a moonlight run in the evening to Matawan to cover probably the finest road in the State where trains may be taken to connect with any point. Fraternally,

D. F. CARLETON BROWN, C. C.

Street Improvements.

The work on the improvement of the city's streets which was made possible by the recent $5000 voted for that purpose by the people is being pushed forward. The street committee of the Common Council are now contemplating taking up the miserable wooden pavement on Park avenue from Front street to the railroad bridge, and macadamizing it in a good substantial manner. It is said the work will be begun in a few months.

Another improvement also under contemplation is the ripraping of Front street from Plainfield avenue to the city line, the very worst roads special as the gutters are filled up and there are numerous ugly holes in the road bed.

The crossing on North avenue near the depot has been fixed in a very substantial manner by the Street Commissioner. Another cross walk needing attention and which will probably be seen to soon is the one at the junction of Park and North avenues.

Law Cases.

Yesterday afternoon the case of Wilson vs. Meyers was tried before Justice Mattison and a jury at North Plainfield. It was an action for debt. The defence sought to set up was a claim for damages as offset. The jury rendered a verdict in favor of plaintiff for $25 and costs.

For the plaintiff, John Ulrich, Esq., the defendant in propria persona.

Obituary.

Mrs. Lewis, of Central avenue and Sixth street, wife of the man who was seriously injured in the runaway accident a few days ago, died yesterday. This added calamity, but emphasizes the old adage of misfortunes never coming singly. Although Mr. Lewis has resided here but a short time, he has the sympathy of the entire city in his affliction.

To Our Friends.

The Reform Club of Plainfield having realized generous cash contributions sufficient to pay for an elegant site for the proper to formerly known as the Second Baptist Church on the corner of Second street and Central avenue, this city, and funds being likewise available, shortly through the solicitations of the Christian Temperance Ladies, to furnish and equip the parsonage building when properly altered and remodeled for the practical use of the Club, respectfully though urgently appeal to the liberality and kindly feelings of the citizens of Plainfield and vicinity for additional means to fully complete such needful alterations and repairs.

The good work already accomplished by the Reform Club, under the appearing guile of Divine Providence and the still greater work awaiting future efforts, certainly commend it to the favorable consideration and support of every friend of humanity.

The necessary demands made upon the public for various laudable objects, causes hesitancy on the part of the Club to solicit further aid, but valuing as its members do the all important Temperance reformation they are striving to permanently establish, could induce them to thus ask and insincerely to believe, that early and substantial encouragement will follow the asking.

Donations to the aforesaid purpose to the extent of individual ability and inclination, will be received by the Treasurer and acknowledged by the officers of the Club, or either member of its Executive or Subscription Committees, the names of whom are hereunto subscribed.

BADGES.

What next? An effort is making to introduce into the House of Representatives a temperance bill which provides that liquor drinkers shall be licensed, and that any man so licensed shall wear a badge openly on his coat. Under the guise of temperance this is doubtless a scheme on the part of some badge manufacturing company to boom its business. It will also afford employment to skilful designers, as men of different tastes would require appropriate emblems. The wine-bibber would wear a badge representing a cluster of grapes; the gin-guzzler one in the shape of a cat, significant of "Old Tom;" the lager-beer swiller one in the form of a sheaf of rye, while the man who drinks nothing but bock would adopt one composed of topazes. The individual who indulges in anything and everything of an intoxicating nature should be compelled to wear a bracelet of snakes.

NAMES FOR HORSES.

The winner of the Grand Prize of Paris was that highly popular and much admired brown colt Little Duck. It must certainly interest the young ladies of this and other cities very highly to know that Little Duck was led by Kiss. Kiss was even a more popular favorite among the Parisians than Little Duck, but that most charming and fleet of steeds proved merely a stimulant to the winning colt. In the face of Little Duck it was frequently won by a Kiss, and it is pretty safe to bet upon her every time. When the stake is matrimony, however, it is always best for the intending winner to see that his favorite is not too fast.

THE RING.

A band of burnished gold
My fingers gently hold,
And through the magic circle of its rim,
Before my dreaming eyes
A thousand memories rise,
And fill my soul with longing, vague and dim.

I seem to see the gate
At which I used to wait
For her who gave to me this token sweet.
I feel a tender thrill,
That calls to mind the hill
Where hours, like moments, fled on pinions fleet.

The form of youthful grace,
The smiling, tender face,
In near me still, in spirit, though the years
Have slowly come and fled,
And cherished hopes lie dead
Along my way too thickly strewn for tears.

Oh! little band of gold!
A wealth of joy untold
Your shining circle conjures to my mind,
And will—until my breath
Shall meet the kiss of death,
And meet the pride of earth lie left behind.

Commodore Garrison's Great Financial Drawback.

The Embarrassment Caused by the Nefarious Railroad Ventures—The Commodore's Business Career—His Early Life.

NEW YORK, June 21.—Shortly before noon yesterday, the announcement was made in down-town business circles that Commodore C. K. Garrison had assigned his property to the county clerk's office, giving preferences in the sum of $651,608. The news had been circulated to a considerable extent, and therefore, no great surprise was caused on the street. The commodore's office, at No. 5 Bowling green, was visited by a large number of his personal and business friends, nearly all of whom were anxious to condole with him in his misfortune. He was quite ill, having been partially prostrated by the news which had been received his visitors and talked with them as cheerfully as he could under the circumstances. He said:

"After consultation with my legal advisers I have made up my mind to take this step, which, I believe, is for the best interest of myself and my creditors. A temporary pressure has been brought upon me, and I could see no other way out of the difficulty than to turn my property over to an assignee."

The assignee, Mr. John T. Terry, furnished the following list of preferences: Bank of California, $80,000; Bank of New York and National bank association, $230,000; United States Trust company, $150,000; T. W. Pearsall & Co., $50,000; notes to Kolden, $20,000; Barnes & Moore, Michigan Car company, $25,000; Mason Manufacturing company, $18,443; Manufacturers' Works, $14,000; $89; Carnegie Brothers, $30,012; Dexwood's State Iron company, $4,744; Delaware Iron company, $2,500; sundries, $30,000; Alfred Billings, $20,000; six notes drawn by Wheeling and Lake Erie railroad, $65,000; to discharge liability for railroad supplies furnished by the Commodore to the company of Wilmington, Del., $8,750; to fully indemnify the following parties for all liabilities incurred in his behalf, in connection with the Wheeling and Lake Erie Railroad company, the Wheeling and Lake Erie Bridge company, and the Cleveland and Marietta Railway company, Oliver Ames, son, George J. Forrest, M. B. Woodward and N. H. Swayne.

Barnes & Moore say that his liabilities to them will not exceed $25,000.

Mr. Bockefeller, of the Standard Oil company, said:

"It undoubtedly true that Messrs. Andrews are involved in Mr. Garrison's trouble, but no matter what happens to them it can have no effect on the Standard Oil company. The Messrs. Andrews are simply stockholders, and can easily dispose of their holdings if they think necessary. Reports that officers of this company are in trouble are unqualifiedly untrue."

Mr. Melville C. Day, counsel for Commodore Garrison, in conversation with a reporter, said:

"The commodore has been forced to make this assignment because of financial embarrassment, and not for the purpose of evading any just claims. There will be made ample provision for all creditors. He has a large amount of securities, and so much of his money is tied up in this kind of property, which is not marketable at present, that he could not meet his liabilities."

Commodore Garrison was deeply involved in the Pittsburgh, Cleveland and Toledo railroad. He and W. C. Andrews indorsed the notes of the company. One note which was protested was for $50,000 and another for $100,000, representing part of $200,000 in paper which had been issued by the railroad company. It is supposed that the total am ount of the commodore's liabilities is not $5,000,000.

President Norvin Green of the Western Union Telegraph company furnishes The Sun an interesting sketch of C. K. Garrison's career:

"My first acquaintance with Mr. Garrison," observed Mr. Green, "was when he was a telegraph boy. I was a boy, too, not yet out of my teens. He was then the captain of a steamboat on the Mississippi river. He made a few thousand dollars by steamboating, and then came from St. Louis to New York. He embarked in the West India trade, in which his thousands of dollars grew into millions. When the Pacific Mail Steamship company was organized he became one of the principal stockholders. He was also in the Panama railway. The Missouri Pacific railroad company was placed in the market on a forced sale, and Garrison was the purchaser. He sold this property to Mr. Jay Gould. Out of this transaction grew the famous Mackay-Garrison suit for $4,000,000, which is now pending in the courts. He is a large holder of gas stocks, and is interested in the principal gas companies of New York, Brooklyn and St. Louis."

"What do you think of the commodore's personal character?" was asked of Mr. Green.

"He was one of the most energetic and indomitable men I ever knew," was the reply, "and he would push forward through difficulties which would utterly discourage most men. When he was smitten with paralysis and one side of his body rendered almost useless, he refused him to retire from business and take life easy. He would not hear to any such suggestion and persisted in attending to his business as usual."

Commodore Garrison's counsel says that no schedule of assets has yet been prepared, but it will be ready for publication within a day or two.

Affairs of Grant & Ward.

NEW YORK, June 21.—Mr. George F. Holt testified before Referee Dittenhoefer that Mr. Davies took possession of the effects of Grant & Ward as assignee he found in Mr Ward's desk bonds and mortgages, the individual property of Mr. Grant, to the amount of $20,000, and mining stock worth $20,000 more. Mr. Davies said that these bonds belonging to the firm of Grant & Ward, and that Ward did himself deposit them in the name of Grant & Ward. After an informal discussion the further hearing was adjourned to June 25.

"Testified Falsely in Good Faith."

WASHINGTON, June 21.—During the course of his closing address before the Springer committee, Col. Bliss, much to the amazement of the committee reiterated his statement that Mr. Kerr had testified falsely, but accompanied the reiteration with a statement that he "believed his associate had done so in good faith." The committee could not accept the explanation. False testimony could be given in good faith, without consuming more time in going into details.

To Sing Fifty Nights for $100,000.

PARIS, June 21.—Miss Elder Dorries has signed an engagement with Maurice Strakosch to sing fifty nights at the Metropolitan opera house, New York, in the season of 1885-86 for the sum in the $100,000. Mr. Strakosch has also the refusal of the tenor Gayarre to sing fifty nights in the United States from the 15th of November to the 1st of May, 1885.

THE MEXICAN TREATY.

Senator Williams Thinks Such a Measure will Hardly Pass the Senate.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—The consideration of the Mexican treaty was resumed in executive session in the senate. The question was on the motion of Mr. Voorhees to strike out the limitation of October 1, 1884, in the Ingalls amendment.

Mr. Voorhees said he was opposed to the re-enactment of any statute of limitation in regard to pensions. He called for the yeas and nays, stating that he desired a record of how senators stood on this question.

"The senator," said Mr. Williams, "desires that if the gate is once opened, it shall remain open."

"Yes, sir," said Mr. Voorhees, "as open as the gates of mercy are."

Mr. Hoar then proposed, in which Messrs. Blair, Slater, Voorhees, Vanwyck and Williams participated. The cost which the several amendments will entail was the main feature of the discussion. Mr. Williams said they would bankrupt the country, and he would not vote for the bill, should they be adopted.

"No sum," he exclaimed, "would tempt my friend to vote for more millions than I am, but I cannot vote for it loaded down with all these propositions. The men who voted for them would be responsible for the defeat of the bill, and they are my comrades from such friends as these. If you expect to make political capital, I tell you, you cannot make a greater mistake than by attempting to load down a Mexican veteran will favor its passage. The attempt to put these various propositions on the Mexican bill is wrong, undignified and unwarrantable."

Mr. Blair ventured the remark that no Republican senator was in favor of pensioning the Mexican soldiers, except those suffering from wounds received in battle.

"Why," cried Mr. Williams, "that statement is wrong. Your candidate for the vice-presidency, Hon. Logan, rose to his seat and opposed the pauper clause."

Mr. Cullom insisted that the senator from Kentucky, Mr. Williams, had no right to charge that the amendments were intended to defeat the bill. He (Cullom) had often said he was in favor of pensioning the Mexican soldiers, but the fact that he had so declared would not influence his vote on the adjudicatory of any amendment introduced for the purpose of perfecting pension legislation. He was only endeavoring to do justice to the Mexican veterans, it was right to make one job of it, and include all pension matters in this bill.

The amendment of Mr. Voorhees was rejected by 12 yeas to 34 nays.

A motion offered by Mr. Wyck, that hereafter no additional rank shall be observed in granting pensions under the Ingalls amendment, but that officers and men, and widows of both classes, shall receive the pension of the grade held at the date of the decease of any pensioner, was rejected after debate. The amendment was rejected, 31 years to 28 nays.

It is expected that the bill will be disposed of to-day.

PAYING THE WORKMEN.

The Reading Pay Car to Start Out Again This Morning.

READING, Pa., June 21.—The pay car of the Reading Railroad company, which has been lying in the yard opposite the depot in this city since the suspension of semi-pay-months, left here this morning for Philadelphia. This is good news to the employes along the main line, East Penn, Lebanon Valley and north of the mountains.

Mr. Wells left here to Reading yesterday afternoon. This morning he will start down the road and pay the employes on the main line, Colebrookdale and Pickering Valley branches. He will go as far down as the men on the Reading and Columbia, East Penn and Lebanon Valley, when he will visit the coal and iron properties of the Reading companies. This, it is said, will be followed by the payment of the May wages. It is thought the Coal and Iron company will pay the employes in this city to-day for the month of May.

All the trackmen, some fifty in number, who were discharged in May, assembled in Reading on Thursday and were paid in full by Mr. Wells. These men were principally employed as laborers and were in great need of their earnings. A number of engineers, driver nearly two months' pay, amounting to a little over $60, and was overjoyed. There is every reason to believe that the payments hereafter will be made regularly about the 15th of each month.

The Pittsburgh Strike.

The Journeymen Plumbers' union did not go on strike yesterday in a body. Although a general lockout is looked for on Monday, emanating from the Master Plumbers' association, it is not believed that it will be enforced, owing, to a Press reporter, that at a private meeting held yesterday the Master Plumbers had failed to agree about prices, in view of the pressure of business, and which they had in hand, under heavy penalties. Anticipating the general strike on Monday, Tomorrow there will be many more men are idle. Other strikes were reported from Quick's shop, on William street, and O'Mara's shop, on Fifteenth street and Third avenue.

More Stringent Rules.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—The Burnside defalcation in the post-office department has led to the issuance of a circular of additional rules, issued by Postmaster-General Gresham, which will throw additional safeguards around the future disbursement of the funds of that department. Briefly all that was required of the disbursement clerk was the presentation of a requisition, with an indorsement thereon by the postmaster-general signed, and then the money was drawn from the treasury. In future, under the new rules, all requisitions will be accompanied by a form to be filled out and a condition of the appropriations, the amount that has been drawn out and the cash on hand.

'Twas Only Sawdust.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—A metallic bomb, with fuse attachment, and bearing evidence of containing dynamite, was stopped in the mails, and sent over to the police headquarters to it a letter addressed to O'Donovan Rossa, New York. The bomb was sent to the post office department and created considerable excitement among the clerks therein. It was first sent to the inspector's office, but he refused to receive it. The chief clerk, General Gilfillan, was then applied to for the war department, where some expert gunners succeeded in opening it. It was found to contain only sawdust.

Of Interest to Correspondents.

PARIS, June 21.—Alle. Van Zandt, the American prima donna, has obtained a verdict in her suit for libel. The offense was stated in the publication in the Boston Herald and San Francisco Chronicle of letters from Mr. Raynie, their correspondent, containing statements reflecting upon her professional and professional reputation. The decision is considered important as a precedent in such cases.

Col. Burnside in Jail.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—Because of recent developments in the post-office department defalcation, which showed that Col. Burnside had been guilty of systematic robbery since 1879, his bondsmen formally surrendered him and he was placed in jail.

TO NOTIFY MR. BLAINE.

The Committee of Delegates Arrive at Augusta, Me.

Paying for Cleveland—Meeting of Independent Republicans—The Prohibition Cause—Still Urging the Nomination of Mr. Tilden.

AUGUSTA, Me., June 21.—The committee of delegates from the Republican convention have arrived here to formally notify Mr. Blaine of his nomination for the presidency. A crowd of about 150 at the depot. The delegates were driven to the Augusta house where they will remain at the headquarters. Mr. Blaine will receive them at 11 o'clock today when Hon. John B. Henderson, of Mo., will formally notify him of his nomination. After dinner the party will have a special train for Portland, where they are to be tendered a great reception this evening. Bates college has extended a formal invitation to Mr. Blaine to be present at the commencement exercises next Thursday and he has accepted.

Messrs. Henderson, Rollins and Frohan called upon Mr. Blaine at his residence, after the arrival of the committee, but beyond exchanging greetings nothing was done except to arrange that Mr. Blaine should formally receive the committee at his residence at 11 A. M. to-day.

Paying for Cleveland.

CLEVELAND, June 21.—Since the publication of ex-Gov. Tilden's letter of withdrawal the supporters of Hon. Henry R. Payne, postmaster, have been working hard in pushing his claims as the Democratic candidate for the presidency, while the friends of Hendly have been similarly engaged in pushing their respective claims. Ex-Attorney Judge R. P. Spaulding, an intimate friend of Mr. Payne, stated to a United Press reporter that it was plain to the senator-elect that Ohio could not be carried both governor and ticket, and fearing a clashing of his interests with those of Hendly, should the friends of both persist in pushing their claims, which would probably result in the loss of everything to the Ohio Democrats—he had determined to withdraw from the field of presidential candidates, and thus give the full strength for Gov. Cleveland. Judge Spaulding further stated that it has been the ambition of Mr. Payne to obtain the office of secretary of the interior, and when the Democrats succeed in electing their candidate.

To Antagonize the Cleveland Boom.

PHILADELPHIA, June 21.—The Telegraph's Washington correspondent sends the following:

Presidential talk at the capitol had a decidedly Cleveland coloring, and the second place on the ticket was more the subject of discussion than the first. But the managers of the other boom have succeeded in forming a combination, and are circulating reports disparaging to the New York candidate. They talk up Bayard or Randall while others are selected by the McDonald-Slocum tickets as the one with which to antagonize the Cleveland boom.

The efforts to get up enthusiasm for the Indiana statesman met with but very little encouragement at first, but later in the day the boom has reached very respectable proportions. Bayard men were through the corridors and lobbies of the house that John Kelly is going to turn his might against Cleveland and will favor McDonald, with Slocum for second place. The latter has preserved to bring that ticket out prominently but the story is not generally credited, and the opinion at the capital still is that Cleveland will get the nomination.

Playing a Waiting Game.

PHILADELPHIA, June 21.—A special to The Bulletin from Saratoga says: Notwithstanding the apparent victory of the Cleveland forces at Saratoga the boomers of the other candidates express themselves as well satisfied with the situation. The Payne men are playing a waiting game, and believe their opportunity will come, and the Bayard, Hendricks and Randall men, driver nearly two months' pay, amounting to a little over $60, and was overjoyed. There is every reason to believe that the payments hereafter will be made regularly about the 15th of each month.

CHICAGO, June 21.—The American Prohibition party convention was called to order in Farwell hall. The chairman of the committee on credentials read that committee's report, which was adopted. The committee, consisting of D. M. Stearns, Senator Pomeroy and the Rev. J. Blanchard, was appointed to prepare an address to the people of the United States. Another committee was appointed to fraternize with the Prohibitionists at Pittsburg, July 2. Senator Pomeroy, of Kansas, addressed the convention on "The mission of the American party to the country," which, he said, was to perpetuate the principles that the government belonged to the people, and to secure the use of the ballot to protect the home. The Payne men are playing a waiting game, and believe their opportunity will come, and the Bayard, Hendricks and Randall men, driver and other boomers are satisfied that there is still good fighting ground left. The Field men especially display a brave grin upon their faces. The ordinary jurist was over to New York a day or two ago, and what he then learned and what has since occurred satisfies him that his chances are fully as good as those of Mr. Cleveland. It is said that a large number of the delegates will be in a quandary from other members of the Field family, who have enough and to spare of the world's goods. It is rather significant that The Day, one of the leading local newspapers of the pacific coast and various members of congress from the south have kind words to say of Justice Field's candidacy.

Not Trusting Tilden's Letter.

NEW YORK, June 21.—Whatever the Democratic managers may think of Mr. Tilden's willingness to be a candidate for the good of the party for the presidency, the rank and file of the party do not believe Mr. Tilden was in earnest when he wrote his last letter. At any rate, the letter does not have the hold upon those trusting gentlemen, and they are bestirring themselves in the sage's behalf. During the past week informal and confidential conferences have been held of men who are in no way politicians nor all Democrats. The result of the deliberations of these gentlemen is the following call:

"Believing that the people of this country want Samuel J. Tilden as president of the United States, and that he is able and honest enough, if elected, to perform the duties of the office, we call upon all citizens to meet with us at Cooper Union on ——, at 8 o'clock P. M., for the purpose of giving expression to this public sentiment and to pass proper resolutions to be forwarded to the delegates of the national Democratic convention to be held at Chicago on July 8 next."

Profited by Experience.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—Representative Vance, of North Carolina, a Democrat, is as earnest a friend of Mr. Tilden as ever. A correspondent he stated that the temperance cause is making tremendous strides towards the front in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama and other southern states. "We in our state," said he, "are yet in the minority, and it may be a long time before we succeed in carrying a majority of votes of North Carolina. We have found that the plan of local option has yielded the greatest results, and I doubt not had we concentrated our efforts more in favor of it in the case of temperance we would have been further advanced to-day. But we have profited by experience, are hopeful, and have reason to feel satisfied with the progress made."

After the Democratic Convention.

NEW YORK, June 21.—At a meeting of the committee of Independent Republicans held yesterday afternoon a circular was prepared to be signed by all the Republicans in New York and vicinity who are opposed to the nomination of Blaine and Logan, for a general conference of Republicans to be held after the Democratic convention, to consider the best plan to adopt in case the Democratic

A GIRL'S QUEER STORY.

How It Was Proposed to Surprise Her Embarrassed Father.

Harsham Rewarded—Berks County's Second Blind Farmer Dead—Was He Is John Anderson's Will?—A Desperado Killed.

SOUTH RIDGEWOOD, N. J., June 21.—Miss Westervelt, a young girl 15, living with her parents in this place, on Thursday evening, made formal complaint before the recorder of Paterson, that a Mrs. Whalley, of that city, aided by Charles Neer, of Spring Valley, N. Y., Mrs. Lucy Neer and Frederick P. Van Riper, of Channel Ridge, Bergen county, and Mrs. Charity Van Riper and Mr. and Mrs. David Thurston, of Pompton, had put the execution of a scheme to defraud her family out of certain sums of money. The story told by the girl was to the effect that Mrs. Whalley had confided to her a plan by which, as a surprise party, Mr. Westervelt, who had met with reverses in business, was to be presented with $1,100, and that he in person of a number of his friends. The persons embraced an arrangement by which the girl, with the consent of her mother, was to be sent to Mrs. Whalley's home of her father's to the amount of one-third of the purchase price of the house and lot. The money was obtained from Mr. Westervelt in small sums, including a check for $600, and at length amounted to $1,100. A few days ago Mr. Westervelt asked for his money, and the mother and she

THE "MAID" WAS A MAN.

London Society Shocked at the Revelations of a Detective.

LONDON, June 21.—Vanity Fair contains a startling sensation in avowing a scandalous charge against a lady of title and high social standing. According to Vanity Fair a young person who has been for some time in the lady's employ as a confidential lady's maid has been discovered by the police to have been practicing a shameless deception. The newspaper does not venture to divulge the lady's name, but refers all inquiries to the police.

This public reference to a scandal which has for several days been whispered about in the clubs is expected to cause a commotion. The story is told in much greater detail by a well-known detective, who is employed exclusively upon what are known as society cases. According to this authority the lady's maid was a modest appearing and clever young person who seemed to give good satisfaction to the lady, but who never mixed with the other servants, and was regarded by them as superciliously disagreeable. An upper housemaid of the lady's household who especially disliked the lady's maid had for her beau a very intelligent member of the police force, and she told him of her dislike for her fellow-servant. This led the constable to take particular notice of the privileged maid, and he soon observed little peculiarities in her manner and bearing that led him to believe that a masquerade was in progress, and that, in fact, the maid was a man. The policeman at once jumped to the conclusion that the young man had gained access to the lady's household for the purpose of robbery, and was biding his time to levant with the jewel case. The officer reported his suspicions and theory to his superiors, and was instructed to follow up the case, and obtain conclusive evidence as to the suspected person's sex. He soon found abundant proof that his suspicions were correct, and made haste to inform the lady that the person whom she harbored as a confidential maid was in reality a young man. It is stated that the sudden information "nearly" felt so cheap and ill rewarded in his life as when he saw that his startling intelligence was received with nothing but contempt, nor even with thanks. The lady's manner crushed him with the conviction that he told her no news, and that he had done an exceedingly impudent thing in presuming to enlighten her concerning the affairs of her own household. He retreated abashed.

If the detective's belief is well-founded the motive of the lady in conniving at the masquerade is an inexplicable mystery to all but herself and perhaps the "maid." It is stated that the young man will be pensioned off by the lady's family, on condition that he will leave England and never return.

Past Time by Maud S.

NEW YORK, June 20.—It has been generally thought in sporting circles for some time that Maud S. can, when properly prepared, lower her own record of 2:08¾, (in trial yesterday at the Gentlemen's Driving park was 2:08¾, which is the best time ever made on this track. The trial of Frank and his running mate was made in exactly the same time. Mr. Bair, the driver of Maud S. received quite an ovation by the crowd.

The other events at the park were: Purse of $1,000 for horses that had never beaten 2:25, mile heats, won by Graham's Bon Car in three straight heats. Time, 2:25¼, 2:24¾, 2:24¼.

The other trotting races were not finished after five heats it was too dark, and the results were postponed until to-morrow.

Relaxation of Customs Regulations.

OTTAWA, June 21.—On behalf of the cattle ranchers of Montana the Canadian Pacific railway authorities have presented to the minister of customs the propriety of allowing the cattle from the western states to be carried through Canadian territory in bond for export. The Montana ranchers propose entering stock at Port Walesh and driving them to the Canadian Pacific railway for shipment. The object will be to make Montreal the cattle market of Montana and other western states. The minister has agreed to a relaxation of the customs regulations so as to bring this trade to Canadian points.

Muldoon and Ross Wrestle.

CINCINNATI, June 21.—The Grand Opera house was literally packed to witness the wrestling match between Muldoon and Ross for a purse of $1,000 and $500 receipts. Both men were in fine condition. Dr. A. F. Heighway, of this city, acted as referee. The first two bouts in Graeco-Roman style were won by Muldoon. Ross won the next two bouts, side holds. The fifth and concluding bout, catch-as-catch-can, was won by Muldoon, which gave him the match. The referee's decision in the fifth bout greatly incensed the people, and a row was imminent, but finally the crowd dispersed peaceably.

Palermo Excited.

PALERMO, June 21.—Intense excitement was caused here by the discovery that one Nicolao had murdered his mother and grandmother and mortally wounded his uncle, who had attempted to defend the women. Nicolao has been arrested and a crowd of incensed people are in front of the prison clamoring for him to be given up to them. All attempts to break down the prison doors have thus far been frustrated, but Nicolao will certainly be killed by the excited crowd if access to him can possibly be gained.

Eno's Counsel Confident.

QUEBEC, June 21.—It looks now as is Eno will be speedily liberated. The decision is likely to be given to-day. The private prosecution, however, hint at further warrants and new proceedings, if he is discharged. Eno's counsel are confident of there being no technical case that they have brought out in evidence.

YOUTHFUL SENATORS

The Pages Take Advantage of an Empty Senate Chamber.

While the Old Solons Are Away the Youngsters Have a Play—A Very Clever Take-Off.

[Washington Cor. Syracuse Standard.]

During the ceremony of unveiling the Marshall statue recently, while the senators were absent from the senate, the pages had a grand lark. The boys are sharp observers of the great men with whom they are thrown in daily contact, and soon detect the peculiar hobby each senator has. As soon as the senators were fairly out of the room the boys prepared for sport. One long, lank, red-haired stripling, by unanimous consent, "cause he's got the most gall," as one urchin said, took the seat of the presiding officer, and in Mr. Edmund's most solemn manner called the meeting to order. The boys heartily entered into the humor of the occasion. They dropped into the seats near the presiding officer. "Mr. President," yelled half a dozen voices. "Now you fellows just shut yer clack," returned the president. "Do yer think this is a Democratic caucus? Now what do yer want," he continued, addressing one.

"I want to talk," he promptly responded.

"Well, go ahead."

"Now, Mr. President," continued the youthful statesman, throwing himself into Senator Dawes' favorite attitude and imitating his peculiar enunciation, "what this country ought to do is to go for them Injuns. Why, Mr. President, just look at 'em. Gaze upon the wild sons of the west who come here on their trips to the Great Father—an ignorant lot, whose chief pleasure consists in tomahawking the teachers we send out to instruct them. What should be done? Why, make 'em learn. Turn the army into a regiment of teachers. Force arithmetic into their thick skulls at the point of the bayonet."

"Well, what does the member propose?" asked one of the senators of an hour impatiently, fearing that his chances to hold forth were being lessened by the prolixity of others.

"Appropriate fifty millions for the purpose of compulsorily educating the redskins," replied the supposed Mr. Dawes. "That will solve the injun question."

The proposition was received with boisterous applause.

"Stay, Mr. President," shouted one who could be easily recognized as Senator Logan's counterfeit presentment, by his proposition. "I motion to appropriate five hundred millions to pay the expenses of a commission to investigate the true condition of the American nigger and ascertain the progress he has made since the war."

"I hope the gentleman will not insist on the motion," remarked a polite page blandly, "because I was going to appoint a committee consisting of ten able Faithful Republicans to investigate the Danville outrages." "Hells, Sherman!" cried one who from his lack of respect was undoubtedly a Democrat.

"I also hope the gentleman will not insist on his motion, for it is clearly unconstitutional," piped a voice in the rear of the chamber.

The lads broke into a loud laugh, recognizing Senator Jones' caricature, and immediately got into an excited constitutional discussion, "Logan" declaring that his scheme was clearly constitutional, remarking that he "had looked up them points, and he sees they wasn't no good." But others, seeing there was little chance of "getting their work in" unless order was restored, insisted on the senator's "drying up." Then followed a number of ridiculous motions—to put cigarettes on the free list; to pay each $100 a ton, to declare women eligible to the presidency. The boys kept up their sport until it was announced that the senators were returning; when they scattered. The whole proceeding was a very clever take-off on the senate.

Severe Language from Brother Gardner.

[Detroit Free Press.]

"De man who has manhood in him needs no 'vorce," he says blandly.

"Heaps o' tears am bein' shed ober dis or dat unfortunate, as folks calls 'em, an' dey am being coaxed, advised, flattered an' dey am bribed into leadin' better lives. Don't you suppose, dat every man who drinks knows what whisky leads to? If it am weakness on his part he will stay sober only as long as somebody holds him up. If it am because he has no moral standard, den de sooner he drinks hisself into de grave de better for de rest of us.

"If martin citizens want to band together to fight de saloon hisness, let 'em band. No man who likes beer or whisky will drink one drop de less, while some one drinks more. Dar am not a boy in our city to-day 10 yars of age who doan' fully realise de evils of drink. He knows dat it will rob a man of his character—dat it leads to hell and degradation—dat it means sickness, rags, and a grave in potters' field. On de odder hand, he realizes just as forcibly dat sobriety means happiness, respectability, friendship, an' me' or less wealth. Let him choose. If he prefers de gutter dat's his own look-out, an' I am perfectly willin' to help him go his way.

"I tell you, my frens, de man who can't lib plumb up an' down bekase dat am de lawful an' moral way—who can't lib a sober life without a law to force him—who can't be a good naybur an' a squar' citizen out of his natural moral natur—can't do any too soon. I have no tears to shed ober him; I have no words to waste on him. He rolls into de gutter bekase dat is his level. He goes dar of his own choice. When anybody tries to make me believe dat it am my duty to interfere wid him, he stakes a case I can't accept. Let us bow purrsed."

Chicago Methods.

[Chicago Journal.]

"When the opera came to Chicago," said the head of the retail trade in a large dry goods house, "I noticed there were two or three expensive lace shawls sent home on approbation and returned the morning after the performance. That set me thinking, and when Mrs. B. came in the day of an opera night and asked to have one of the most expensive wraps sent home to look at, I just slipped out to old Gregg's, the ticket speculator, and bought seats immediately behind those of Mr. and Mrs. B. When I came in, a little later, there was Mrs. B. seated in front of me with the elegant lace shawl she had borne in the morning over her shoulders. When she turned I greeted her politely, and said I was delighted the wrap had suited her. She looked rather unhappy during the performance, but the shawl was not returned to the store, and I charged my opera tickets to expenses."

Why She Didn't Take Cold.

Emma Abbott said to a Philadelphia Times reporter: "I never take cold, though I'm as afraid of a draught as I am of a mad dog. There are some singers who just long a cold to come and take hold of them, but I'm not one of them. The coldest day in winter I ride in my open carriage. Nelson told me about the cold he got in Maine, by talking to the ice in its death to a stage."

When He Wound Horts.

[Chicago News.]

When ex-Gov. Oglesby's turn to relate an anecdote came he gave some army reminiscences. Speaking of the way he was wounded, the old warrior said the ball did not hurt him much after he was almost jolted to death in an ambulance. "Does the old wound hurt you much now?" inquired a sympathetic listener. "Lord bless you, no," replied Uncle Dick, "except every fou years, when I want to run for office."

Wanted to Know if he Could Get In.

[Chicago News.]

A remarkable looking delegate, with gray hair that hung down to his shoulders, approached a Sherman house clerk last evening: "I'm goin' tew be out till night onto 1 o'clock," said he; "will the door be open, so I kin git in?" "Certainly," said the clerk. "If the door isn't open when you get back just rap on the window, and I'll come down and let you in." When the venerable delegate departed the clerk remarked that he was the kind of man that blew out the gas and wanted to go to bed in the elevator.

Not One of the Kissing Kind.

[Bardstown, Ky., Record.]

One day last week a young man, who resides in the country, invited a young lady of Bardstown to take a buggy ride with him. When several miles from home he attempted to kiss her, and she resented by slapping him on the side of the face. The blow knocked off his hat, and it fell to the ground. When he alighted she whipped up the horse and drove home without him. He soaked through the woods and reached home at 12 o'clock that night recovered his horse. He tried to kiss the wrong girl.

Locals.

—Our railroad time table is changed to date.

—Commencement tickets are, as usual, eagerly sought for.

—The scholars of the Public Schools are this week enjoying but one session a day.

—The list of new arrivals at the Hotel Netherwood arrived too late for publication to-day, but will appear in to-morrow's issue.

—Edward Walker, colored, was arrested early Sunday morning for drunkenness by Officer McCue, and has been imprisoned for 20 days.

—Lee Ying is the latest addition to the Chinese colony, having arrived here yesterday. He is employed at the Somerset street laundry.

—The stores generally, and the ice cream saloons particularly, did a thriving business Saturday evening. The thermometer ranged in the nineties.

—The approach to the new Opera House will soon be completed. The front walls at present are half a story above the adjoining buildings.

—Excursion to Ocean Grove on Wednesday all of the Reform Club. Tickets, $1.25. The excursion train will leave this city at 7:30 a. m.

—A grain elevator is being erected at French Bros. mill on Somerset street. The elevator will extend fourteen feet above the roof of the mill.

—Edward Kenny, of North Plainfield, drunk and disorderly, Saturday evening, was arrested by Officers Grant and Mattox and has been jailed for 20 days.

—The Howell Division of the Sons of Temperance and the Dunellen Division will pay a fraternal visit this evening to the Stet Division of New Brunswick.

—A prominent resident of Dunellen has offered, we understand, to be responsible for a fair proportion of the expense of a mechanalized road from that place to Plainfield.

—Mr. James H. Force, the proprietor of Force's Hotel, has been confined to his bed for a week or so by inflammatory rheumatism. He can now eat three meals a day.

—The best of Sunday forenoon led many to seek relief in the cooling shade. The livery stables were depleted. At Mr. Frank Day's there was not a horse to be had at noon.

—An artist, an editor, a lawyer, a merchant and a minister all chanced to meet one evening recently at the residence of a gentleman on Park avenue. All were new comers, and all agreed that Plainfield was among the best of beautiful cities.

—An invitation has been extended by the Plainfield Reform Club to the Matron and Children at the Children's Home, to accompany the club on their excursion on June 25th. The club desire to give the children a day's pleasure and have adopted this means of doing so.

—Communication by telephone between Plainfield and other cities was prevented yesterday afternoon and evening in consequence of wires becoming crossed by high winds. At this vicinity there was nothing more than a pleasant breeze during the afternoon.

—Mr. R. Freeman, of Broadway, has a model vegetable garden which he takes great pride in showing visiting acquaintances. It is managed scientifically, Mr. Freeman being an extensive reader of agricultural papers, and especially of the Agriculturist.

—We understand that a stock company are about to erect a hotel of rather grand proportions on Washington Rock to be ready for business by next season. The view is one of the finest and most extensive in this country. The approaches, however, are not good. It is proposed to remedy the difficulties in this respect by an steam plain tramway.

—An ox, weighing about 1800 pounds, was brought in from the country Saturday evening by Mr. J. Wallace Corlell, and while on Front street, attracted a large crowd by its huge proportions. In connection therewith some interesting facts are gleaned. Such an animal yields, when well fed, about 55 per cent. beef, but when grass fed, only about 50 per cent., the balance being the hide, beef, bones, blood and entrails. A calf yields of veal, 69 per cent. The average of mutton obtained from a sheep is 50 per cent. of its weight alive. In hogs the proportion is much greater, the average for carcass and the hams being smaller in proportion.

Reception to Graduates.

Invitations to the Reception to the Graduating Class of the High School to be given by classes '82 and '83 are out. The reception will take place at Assembly Hall immediately on the conclusion of the Commencement exercises in the Methodist Episcopal Church. The committee of the classes in charge of the affair will leave nothing undone to make the reception, as it always has been, the chief feature of commencement week to both the graduates and their friends.

Wednesday's Excursion.

The Reform Club on their excursion to Asbury Park and Ocean Grove on Wednesday will try the commendable plan of trying to convert the haters at that temperance resort. A grand mass meeting will be held at 2:30 in the afternoon in the grove, under the auspices of the club. The Cornet Band will accompany them and furnish music for the occasion. The speakers will be Third Vice-President Vredenburgh, Mayor Maxson, Judge Wales worth and Frank Dodge.

TEMPERANCE ACTIVITY.

Meetings in the City and Vicinity—Gems of the Fourth Month—Results Achieved.

MEETING AT ST. PLEASANT.

A delegation of the Reform Club of this city consisting of ex-Councilman Lindsley, Thomas Price and John H. Sayres visited the Mt. Pleasant schoolhouse, about three miles out on the Rahway road, on Saturday evening, and addressed a meeting of sixty-five persons. Their remarks were so good and to the point that fifty of the number signed the pledge, including three hard drinkers. The meeting was addressed by a member of the delegation, to be the next a chronistic yet held. The delegation were earnestly requested to come again.

THE BOUND BROOK MEETING.

Ex-Councilman Lindsley, Thomas Price and John H. Sayres, of the Reform Club, attended a meeting held by the Reform Club of Bound Brook in their club rooms in that village yesterday afternoon. The meeting was largely attended, and the Plainfield visitors made addresses.

MEETING AT THE Y. M. C. A. HALL.

The meeting held yesterday morning at 9:15 in the Hall of the Young Men's Christian Association, on Park avenue, was led by John Hope, a member of the Reform Club. The meeting was one of the most successful yet held. These meetings are gradually growing in interest and power.

THE HOLLY TREE INN MEETING.

Mr. Seeley Edsall conducted the meeting at the Holly Tree Inn yesterday afternoon as usual. It was announced that this would be the last Sunday afternoon meeting at the Inn until September. The Reform Club choristers under the leadership of Mr. Marvin Dunham led the singing. "A number of speakers, both ladies and gentlemen, occupied the hour and a half devoted to the meeting.

THE GROVE MEETING.

The first grove meeting for the season was held yesterday afternoon at 4:15 in Berry's Grove on Grove street near the bridge. These meetings, as as heretofore under the auspices of Howell Division, Sons of Temperance. Ex-Mayor Harper, Mayor Maxson, the Hon. Chauncey Schaffer and others occupied the platform. Ex-Mayor Harper presided, and in a few appropriate remarks introduced the speaker of the afternoon, Mr. Schaffer. Mayor Maxson also addressed the meeting. The singing was led by a choir conducted by Mr. Edward Titsworth. The services lasted one hour, and were attended by at least five hundred persons.

THE EVENING MEETING.

The regular Sunday evening meeting of the Reform Club was held last evening in the First Baptist Church. President French, of the club, presided. Addresses were made by the Rev. Dr. Ketchum, Street Commissioner George M. Applegate, James Huntington, Thomas Price and Frank Dodge. Mr. George Bekker, of the Club Choristers, sang by request, "Scatter Seeds of Kindness." The Choristers also sang by request the hymn "Redeemed." One new name was added to the pledge roll. The congregation dispersed while the Choristers sang "We'll stand the storm."

RESULTS OF FOUR MONTH'S WORK.

Yesterday was the beginning of the fifth month of the temperance movement in this city. None ever dreamed on Feb. 22 last, when the first meeting under Mabo and Eschich was held, that the work would assume such proportions as it has, nor that the effects would in any great measure be permanent. But the fact that four temperance meetings were held yesterday in this city alone is a sufficient testimonial to the stability of the movement. The number of pledge signers is over four thousand, and the Reform Club numbers one fifth of that number. Besides the work done in this city, the Reform Club as soon as organized sent out delegations to the surrounding country, and spread the enthusiasm. Delegations from the club have spoken at Scotch Plains, Westfield, Cranford, Rahway, Elizabeth, Rahway, Mt. Bethel, Bound Brook, Trenton and numerous other places. A building has been purchased at a cost of $4,000, and $2,000 have been raised for furnishing it. Part of the building will probably be ready for occupancy in a few weeks. In its meantime the temporary club rooms on East Front street will be open as usual.

The Netherwood Hop.

The first hop for the season for the Hotel Netherwood was given on Saturday evening. The Netherwood hops of last season achieved a degree of popularity which well might make any proprietor proud. The hop of Saturday evening was a very informal one, but the mere mention of it brought a crowd to the 8:42 train to Netherwood on Saturday evening. The occasion was thoroughly enjoyed by the guests, now numbering one hundred and fifty, and the Plainfielders who attended. The music was under the charge of E. Twyford, of New Brighton, S. I., who gave so much satisfaction last season.

The High School Commencement.

The commencement exercises of the High School will take place, as previously announced, on Thursday evening in the Methodist Episcopal Church at 7:45. The admission to the exercises will, of necessity, be entirely by ticket. Citizens who wish to attend may obtain tickets until the supply is exhausted, of members of the Board of Trustees. An early application will be necessary to insure success in obtaining tickets.

A Boy Drowned at Rahway.

On Friday night a young lad about seven years of age, named Thomas Brennen, was drowned in the river at Rahway. He had been playing with some companions about a raft of logs along the river, but soon of them saw him fall into the water, and it was uncertain what had become of him, until his body was found on Saturday in the river under the raft.

Cresents vs. Athletics.

On Saturday afternoon the Cresents added another victory to their score, by defeating the Athletic of Railway. The home nine being much stronger than last year, they were enabled to handle the Athletics with greater ease than formally, and outplayed them both at the bat and in the field.

Malone, the new pitcher for the Cresents, failed to puzzle the visitors, as he did the Jersey City club, on Monday last, and at the end of the third inning, Scheffler took his old place, Malone covering second base, after which the ball remained much nearer home plate. The features of the game, were the two batery by Doane in the first inning; and Keller in the sixth, each of which brought home two men; and two beautiful double plays, by Doane, Malone and Bukeley.

For the visitors, the honors were carried off by G. Barber at short, W. Ayres at first, and Pratt in running the bases.

Personal.

Ex-Councilman Lindsley addressed the Sunday School of the Bound Brook Presbyterian Church yesterday.

Isaac Bonham, Assessor of North Plainfield township, is able to be about once more after being confined to his house for some time.

Mr. W. M. Beekman, formerly of Plainfield, who went last Spring to Stockton, California, to join his uncle as a resident Grain Insurance agent for London, Philadelphia, Fenton and New York Companies, has received copies of the NEWS, and writes to have it sent him regularly. He recently concluded to go on a ranch, and went about sixteen miles to one at a place called Farmington. After five days he quit ranching in disgust, and returned to Stockton. Ranching required too much exposure and hardship generally. He will probably occasionally have letters in THE NEWS. He is a son of Mr. John Beekman, of this city, the miller and wheelwright.

A Sad Fate.

The more that is known of the calamity to Mr. Wm. Lewis, the more sad it becomes. It appears that Mrs. Lewis, the wife Mr. Lewis, a lady of about 45 years of age, and of very healthy appearance, weighing probably 200 pounds, was suffering with malaria. She intended to have taken a trip to New York last Tuesday, but caught cold, and became so ill by Friday that a telegram was sent to her husband in New York to come home immediately with a physician, an old family friend. The husband arrived on the three o'clock train with the physician, and secured a hack to hasten to his suffering wife, when the runaway occurred which as we have already reported fractured the bones of his leg, and from which he is now lying in a precarious condition. He is 60 years of age, and his chances of recovery are very slim.

The body of the wife was taken on the 11:35 train to-day to New York to be interred in Cypress Hill Cemetery, Brooklyn.

Suggestive

To the Editor of THE NEWS:

A lady whose husband does business in New York went to that city to make purchases Saturday, with a view of saving money, returning in the evening wearied after a day of discomfort in the oppressive heat to learn that she could have had the credit and satisfaction of patronizing home trade and have bought the same goods at the same price, less the traveling expenses and loss of time. If many who go abroad to buy would favor local merchants it might remove erroneous impressions and satisfy them that *they can do as well here as any*where, and encourage

HOME TRADE.

A New Enterprise.

Smock's (Assistant Geologist of the State of New Jersey) report of the valuable clay farm which is to be known as the Plainfield Transportation, Clay Mining and Manufacturing Co., situate on the north bank of the Raritan River, Middlesex County, N. J. It is proposed by the party having control of said property to form a syndicate of shares at $500 a share, and if desirable to form a Stock Company thereafter. Any further particulars may be obtained by calling on or addressing Edward C. Mulford, Real Estate Broker, 35 and 37 opposite Depot, Plainfield, N. J.

To Our Friends.

The Reform Club of Plainfield having received generous cash contributions sufficient to pay for and secure title to the proper ty formerly known as the Second Baptist Church, corner of Second street and Central Avenue, in this city, and finds being likewise available, chiefly through the zelous exertions of the Christian Temperance Workers, to furnish and equip the purchased building, when properly altered and repaired for the practical use of the Club, respectfully submit the following appeal to the liberality and kind dy feelings of the citizens of Plainfield and vicinity for additional means to fully complete such needed alterations and repairs.

The good work already accomplished by the Red Ribbon Reformation and the assemble of Divine Providence and the still greater work awaiting future efforts, certainly commends it to the favorable consideration and support of every friend of humanity.

The pecuniary demands made upon the public for various laudable objects, causes hesitancy on the part of the Club to solicit further aid, but relying as its members do the all important Temperance reformation they are striving to permanently establish, emboldens them to this and and induces them to believe, that early and substantive encouragement will follow the asking.

Donations to the aforesaid purpose to the extent of individual ability and inclination, will be thankfully received and acknowledged by the officers of the Club, or, either member of its Executive or Subscription Committee, the names of whom are hereunto subscribed.

ABOUT WASHINGTON MONUMENT.

Some Interesting Facts Concerning Our National Obelisk.

[Washington Letter.]

The obelisk itself, being plain and chimney like, composed of square blocks of white marble, the lapidarium in which are deposited the gift stones is the most interesting feature about the place. They are of all sizes and qualities, and come from all parts of the globe; forty of them have already been placed in the lapidarium, and eighty-three are stored in the lapidarium. It will require an ingenious mechanic to arrange them properly within the walls.

One of the most suggestive of these presentation memorials is a block of gray sandstone from William Tell's chapel, on lake Lucerne, erected in 1288. The inscription says it is "taken from the very spot where the hero of Switzerland escaped from Gessler. Near it is a marble from the ruined palace of Hannibal, at Carthage. It bears a mosaic in black and white, the yellow horse, the red earth and the green cocoanut palm, symbolical of that great kingdom which contested with Rome for the mastery.

A large white marble came from a temple on the Nile, erected by Augustus. The marble is conspicuous for an inlaid fragment of an ancient Egyptian hieroglyphic, said to have been carved 3,000 years ago. Close to it is a modern marble, from an institution also passed away—the volunteer fire department of New York. Then comes a block expressing benevolence and charity in a fine specimen of art.

Some of the stones will possess an archaic interest in time to come. One, for example, there is the one that comes from the former fire companies of Philadelphia, whose terrific combats with each other were the terror of the city, and the wonder of the world. Their gift is of large size and has an old-fashioned hand fire engine, with its brakes, dray ropes and other paraphernalia. Then, from the philanthropic spirit which prevailed in the 50's, an accurately carved relief of a locomotive of that period, quite different from the locomotive of to-day.

Historical plaques are well represented. There are finely chiseled stones from Bunker hill, Bunker Hill, and the home of Shiloh; from Independence hall, and Ship Island; from the temple of Esculapius, in the Isle of Paros, and red-pipe stone from the Indians' sacred region of the Upper Mississippi. The sentiments and all nations have contributed.

Romance of a Tobacco-Keg.

[Chicago Herald.]

"Pretty girls in Richmond! I should say we had!" exclaimed a passenger from Virginia. "The town is full of them. Ever been there? No! Well, you ought to go down. But the prettiest girl in Richmond is not the prettiest girl in our town a thousand times. You don't think you have, but you have all the same. You have doubtless seen the show window advertisements of a Richmond firm that makes a popular brand of smoking tobacco, the advertisement being adorned by a photograph of a pretty young girl.

"Of course you have seen it hundreds of times. They are in every tobacco store. Well, that is a real photograph, and the girl is the belle of Richmond. The original of the romance connected with it, too. The young lady was courted by a young man of our town, but he made poor progress in winning her affections. She was haughty, and was vain and ambitious. She became actually envious of Mrs. Langtry and wanted to go on the stage herself.

"One night she was saying how she would love to have her picture hung up in show windows and admired by everybody like Mrs. Langtry's. She said she would give to have it! inquired her suitor. 'Anything, everything,' replied she enthusiastically, but not thinking it meant anything serious. So a bargain was made, the terms of which were that in six months her photographs were on exhibition all over the country she would grant the young man any boon he might request. He is a manufacturer of tobacco manufacturing firm spoke of and is a smart young chap, with an eye to business, as you can see. They are to be married in June."

A Kentuckian Who Never Treated.

[Louisville Times.]

"Baxter is the only politician I ever knew who was never known to treat," said a gentleman the other day. "He didn't believe in encouraging his fellow-men to drink, I got even with him once. Baxter one day drove up to the Galt house to meet Governor Blackburn and some other distinguished gentlemen. When I got there Baxter gave a dollar and told me to get four cigars. I went in and bought four for the dollar. He handed them around, and after awhile we drove away. For a while I was puzzled to know his game and waiting for me to say something about the change. At last he grew impatient and said: 'How much did that cigar cost?' I gave four for a dollar. You don't think I would offer the governor of Kentucky anything less than a 25-cent cigar,' I answered with an injured look. 'The governor be d—d,' growled Baxter. 'He is no better than we, and a 5-cent cigar suits me. Don't be so free with my money the next time, if it's old Grant himself.'"

UNDER A FALLEN WALL

Two Firemen Lose Their Lives at a Brooklyn Fire.

Eight Horses and a Valuable Dog Burned—One Man Killed and Several Injured by Falling Walls in Montreal.

BROOKLYN, June 28.—Smoldering ruins at Graham avenue and Powers street in the Eastern District yesterday afternoon marked the spot where a fire which broke out in the well-known bakery of Henry Horseman, and where two brave firemen, eight horses and a valuable dog met their death.

While laboring at the fire a wagon in front of the building at 5:30 A. M., John Rittner discovered smoke ascending from a courtyard in the rear. Rushing into the house he warned the employes and they scampered into the street. A small shed was in a blaze. Darting across Powers street Rittner informed the engine house that the breathlessly appointed Chief Engineer Smith.

Instantly all efforts were made to rescue the horses. The firemen dashed through billowing clouds of smoke and flame to release the animals terrified. Some had broken loose from their stalls. They dashed from side to side of the stables, pawing the ground and snorting with fright. Blankets were procured and placed over the horses' eyes, and an attempt was made to lead them to the street. In the yard was a big, fat trotter and the big Newfoundland dog were among the lost. The stables was crackling about the firemen as they brought the horses out and was entirely consumed before their work was completed.

"Men, let those of you take a hose through that alley to the rear," said Chief-Engineer Smith, as he ran down Graham avenue.

John Tyack, of Truck No. 6, George Haight, of Engine No. 15, and Stephen Allen, also of Truck No. 6, passed to obey the command. Grasping a nozzle they dashed through an alley-way between the three-story brick bakery and a three-story frame dwelling.

The men had but a short sight of what there was an ominous roar. The flames shot upward to the height of a hundred feet. Then there was a crash. The alleyway was no more. The brick wall that formed one side of it had fallen against the frame house.

"Run, men, for heaven's sake, and call ambulances!" shouted Chief-Engineer Smith to two of his men. In an instant he was in the debris with a gang of truckmen. Groans could be heard from beneath the ruins. With the strength of a Hercules and heroes the men worked down through the pile. They grasped the hot bricks with their bare hands without a care for the burns. When some of the debris had been cleared it had been consumed a man's head appeared. Then his arm and shoulders came in sight. There was the face of gallant Tyack. He was not dead, but died in a few minutes after he was rescued.

The firemen continued their work, for they hoped to find others alive. Their search was in vain. Next was revealed the bruised and lacerated body of unfortunate Haight. He breathed, the pure air but a few moments. He was quickly taken to the hospital, but died.

Yet another man was missing; but the bricks had all been cleared away and he could not be found. He was Allen, who had taken the last hose line. Happening to go through the lower hall of the adjoining building the poor fellow was found lying upon the floor. He breathed almost audibly, and was covered with wounds. In going through the alleyway he had just reached a doorway in the frame building. When the wall fell it crushed him through it. His injuries, however, though severe, were not dangerous. He was taken to a neighboring hospital, and thence sent to his home.

The employes of the adjoining wagon were removed to the undertaking rooms of John Russell, on Franklin street, Greenpoint. Their funerals will take place on Wednesday, from the Union Avenue Baptist church.

The bakery, with its stables and outhouses, was totally destroyed. The loss on the bakery amounts to $20,000; fully insured. The loss on the stock, horses, thirty-two wagons and thirty-two sets of harnesses foots up $20,000; also insured. The residence of William H. Horseman, a son of Henry Horseman, who owned the bakery, was totally destroyed. It was valued at $4,000 and its contents were valued at $1,000; all fully insured.

The house of James Murray, adjoining the bakery on Graham avenue, was totally destroyed; loss, $5,500; insured for $3,000.

The cause of the fire is supposed to have been a defective flue.

MONTREAL, June 28.—Shelton Bros. & Co's shirt and collar factory was totally destroyed by fire. One man was killed and several others were wounded by falling walls. Loss, $100,000; insurance, $50,000.

Young Clay's Peril.

MOUNT STERLING, Ky., June 28.—Green Clay, a boy 16 years of age, and highly connected, was, on Friday, run away with by two or three years his senior and much larger, and was severely beaten with a club. Clay, rising from the ground, flashing and broke himself from the mob onslaught by drawing a knife and plunging the large blade into the negro's back, breaking it off in the marrow of the spinal column. The negro is not yet dead, but is sinking fast, and cannot survive the night. The negroes here feel that they have been outraged, and swear vengeance. They purpose to surprise the jail and forcibly take him out and hang him. The Corro Gordo guards have been notified, and at a moment's notice will be called into requisition. The white people are terribly frightened. Young Clay is at his brother's house under a heavy guard.

The Grain Crop in the Northwest.

ST. PAUL, June 28.—Reports from various points throughout Minnesota and Dakota show that more or no material damage has been done to growing crops by the recent rather abundant rains. At nearly every point wheat is said to be in excellent condition, and promising a large harvesting. The first Manitoban crop bulletin of the year, based on replies from the correspondents of the department of agriculture, has just been issued. It shows that 787,103 acres were prepared last fall for the spring crop, an increase of 85 per cent. over the former year. Fall wheat was winter killed. The total acreage of spring wheat sown, mostly in March, is 1,000,000 acres, an increase of 213,000 acres over last year.

COLD-BLOODED MURDER.

A Landlord Asks for Rent, and is Shot Dead in His Own House.

HUNTER'S POINT, L. I., June 28.—Long Island City was again thrown into the wildest state of excitement yesterday morning by another cold-blooded murder, the third in as many of its immediate predecessors. Mr. Peter McCormick, one of the best known and wealthiest residents of this place, was shot and instantly killed in his own house by one of his tenants, Patrick Kernan, who was arrested shortly after. On the 1st of May last Kernan hired from McCormick the store No. 95 Davidson avenue, which is near the Thirty-fourth street ferry, which he has since occupied as a liquor store. He paid, from what can be learned, one month's rent in advance, and that was the last month for which Kernan was not ready to pay. He asked for more time, and McCormick gave him a week. Saturday evening McCormick called at the store and again demanded the rent. Kernan told him that he would call at his house in the morning.

Yesterday morning Kernan called at McCormick's home and asked him what he intended doing. Mr. McCormick said that all he intended doing was his own business. Kernan then drew a revolver, saying, "Well, I'll pay you," discharging its contents into McCormick's body who fell to the floor and instantly expired.

Kernan, after the fatal shot, ran out of the house but was arrested by Officer O'Brien, who took him to the police station.

When the news of the shooting got abroad in Hunter's Point the wildest excitement prevailed, and ominous threats of vengeance against the murderer could be heard on all sides. The officers of the jail became alarmed at the crowds that hung around the building, and telegraphed for Sheriff Freeman and Under Sheriff Wiggins. The latter arrived at the jail about 4 o'clock, accompanied by several deputy sheriffs.

At a late hour last night everything was quiet at the jail, and excitement on the outside had subsided.

Peter McCormick, the murdered man, was one of the oldest and most respected citizens of Hunter's Point. He was 57 years of age, and resided with his wife and six children at No. 124 Twelfth street, a neat three-story frame dwelling. For years he had been employed as oil inspector by Messrs. Lockwood Brothers & Hurly, whose office is at No. 62 Beaver street, New York, for the past twenty years. He was a prosperous, hard-working man, and owned considerable property in Hunter's Point. It is not known that McCormick had any enemy, as he was a quiet, industrious saber and charitable man.

Their charming rendition of the parts Little Hendrick and Little Meanie in "Rip Van Winkle" can never be forgotten by those who have seen the bright young actresses reflect great credit on Mr. Jefferson, their illustrious teacher. Miss Fannie Hamblet, a very lovely and brilliant promise and great beauty, will be asked to accept the leading role.

The Sons of St. George.

LONDON, June 28.—The Times remarks that of all the conventions at Chicago none is less invidious in its methods nor more philanthropic in its objects than that of the Sons of St. George. This grand benevolent society serves to assure the land of its adoption against a possible future influx of paupers. Amid the tumult and discord of American public life, the Americans must envy the repose and prosperity exhibited by the little band of loyal and behaved persons, and wish them all success.

POLITICAL GLEANINGS.

Mr. Blaine Formally Accepts the Presidential Nomination.

Gen. Logan Serenaded—Bayard and the Politicians—War Spirit in the South—Judge Forster on Cleveland.

AUGUSTA, Me., June 28.—Owing to the oppressive heat the committee appointed to notify Mr. Blaine of the nomination for the presidency assembled at the executive chamber in this city, and proceeded in carriages to Mr. Blaine's mansion. When all was in readiness Mr. Blaine was escorted to the lawn, where he listened attentively to Gen. Henderson's address, and at its conclusion said:

"Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the National Convention:

"I receive without deep sensibility your official notice of the action of the national convention, already brought to my knowledge through the public press. I appreciate the honor which it confers. I express the honor which is implied in the nomination for the presidency by the Republican party of the nation, speaking through the authoritative voice of duly accredited delegates. To be selected as the candidate from such an assemblage from the full of eminent statesmen, whose names were presented, fills me with embarrassment. I can only express my gratitude for so signal an honor and my desire to prove worthy of the great trust confided to me.

"In accepting the nomination, as I now do, I am impressed—I am also oppressed—with the sense of the labor and responsibility which attend the position. The duties before me, if I am honored with an election, will be lightened, however, by hosts of earnest men, who support my candidacy, many of whom add, as does your honorable committee, the cheer of personal friendship to the pledge of political fealty. More formal acceptance will naturally be expected, and will in due season be communicated in writing, but it may not be inappropriate, at this time, to say that I have already made a careful study of the principles announced by the national convention, and that I cordially approve them. If they have my heartiest sympathy and meet my unqualified approval.

"Apart from your official errand, gentlemen, I feel sensibly honored by the opportunity to call to my house. With many of you I have already shared the duties of public service and have enjoyed most cordial friendship. I trust your journey to and from the city of the great republic has been agreeable, and that during your stay in Maine you will feel you are not among strangers, but among friends. Invoking the blessings of God upon the great cause which we jointly represent, let us turn to the future without fear and with manly hearts."

John A. Logan Serenaded.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—The soldiers and sailors retiding in Washington serenaded John A. Logan Saturday evening. They met at the City hall and, headed by the Marine band, marched to Mr. Logan's residence on Twelfth street, where a crowd of 3,000 or 3,000 citizens had already assembled. The veteran was called for, and Mrs. Logan was displayed from an upper window in Mr. Logan's house. His appearance was greeted with a storm of cheers. After the applause had subsided Mr. Logan addressed the assemblage. He said, among other things:

"So long as the Democratic party shall cling, either in an open or covert manner, to the traditions of the past, so long as it is supported on the one hand by the solid South, and on the other by the Northern Democracy, just so long will the Republican party be charged with the administration of our government.

"The unanimous call to the front of the ranks of this party in the coming campaign is the lion. James G. Blaine, known throughout the land as one of its truest and most representative men, has been called to this position by the voice of the people, in recognition of his especial fitness for the trust, and in admiration of the intrepidity, unswerving loyalty, political courage, faithfulness, persistency and research that has made him one of the most remarkable figures which has appeared upon the stage of the political history of this great country; that such a man should have enemies and detractors is as natural as that our best fruits should be infested with parasites, or that our noblest oaks should exist where minds which seek to belittle that which they can never hope to imitate or equal; and that he shall triumph over these and lead the Republican party to another victory in November, is as certain as the succession of the seasons or the rolling of the spheres in their courses."

Bayard and the Politicians.

NEW YORK, June 28.—A dispatch to The World from Washington says that Senator Bayard has been urged by his friends to take some step to counteract the feeling that has been worked up against him on account of his old speeches, but he steadily refuses to take one step to please the politicians. This resolution upon the part of Senator Bayard his friends, who think Bayard might strengthen his chances if he would only come out and do something to help himself. Bayard says he can and will do nothing. It is now agreed that he will be pretty strongly pushed by the reverse reformers, who are bound to get him out of the way, for a strong plank in the platform, if possible. A reverse reformer who is a delegate to the Chicago convention gives the following plank upon the subject: "The civil service law will be presented and pushed for consideration by the Bayard people at Chicago: "The revenues of the government of the United States should be limited to the amount necessary for the payment of the public debt, the common defense and the general welfare of the United States."

Mysterious Influences at Work for Cleveland.

NEW YORK, June 28.—A Washington dispatch to The Times says:

"Judge Forster passed through this city on his way to the home of Mr. Blaine. In the course of a conversation with a prominent Democrat he said that all the political signs in Ohio during the past ten days pointed directly to the nomination of Grover Cleveland at Chicago. He was at first surprised to see so general a movement in that direction all over the country, but he was now satisfied that Mr. Cleveland will be the Democrat nominee. Judge Forster's impressions are confirmed by the news from various parts of the country which is wafted to this political center. A mysterious influence has been at work in the east, the west and the south, for convention after convention has either declared in the preference for Gov. Cleveland, or has indicated in which good will toward him and his methods of administration. Vermont, in the extreme east, will unite with Nebraska, in the west, in approving of the selection of New York's governor as the party's nominee, and of her chief executive. Every union may be expected to follow their example."

War Spirit in the South.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., June 28.—The Avalanche says: "Down magnetic Republicans come on a southern boom for Blaine. Blaine would have Cuba peaceably if he can and forcibly if he must. Spain has repeatedly refused to sell the island, but it would be easy for Blaine to pick a quarrel with Spain. Any-

RHINELANDER'S CRAZE.

Shooting Lawyer Drake Because of Preposterous Jealousy.

He Tells a Story About Domestic Difficulties — Lawyer Drake's Condition — The Bullet Not Yet Removed.

NEW YORK, June 28.—The shooting of Lawyer John Drake by William C. Rhinelander, the son of his client, appears to have been the result of a lunatic's vain imaginings, and not of any premeditated murderous intent. Young Rhinelander married a servant in his father's house, and the family looked upon the alliance as a degradation. The Rhinelanders refused to accept their former servant as a member of the family. Whether from real affection or other reasons the young man refused to give up his wife, although he was subjected to numerous efforts were made to induce him to do so. The family practically disowned him. His father gave him an allowance of $100 a week to live upon, and the money was paid to him through Mr. Drake. It is understood that the lawyer was made the sole medium of communication between the father and the son. Young Rhinelander apparently fancied that his wife compromised herself by frequent visits to Mr. Drake after business hours at his office, and the lawyer encouraged these secret visits. He declares that on the morning of the shooting his wife made one of these clandestine trips to the office of her husband's friend, and that he shot Mr. Drake to preserve her honor.

Lawyer Douglass was very indignant when he heard that the young man had charged Mrs. Drake with improper conduct with Mrs. Rhinelander. He said: "It is an utter falsehood that Mr. Drake was anything to either of the young couple but a faithful friend and adviser. He was his counsel, as attorney to Rhinelander's father, to reconcile all difficulties in the family so far as lay in his power. He was a courteous, discreet and honorable man."

Rhinelander was taken to the Tombs on Saturday, and arraigned before Justice Wilde. Both counsel and witnesses against Lawyer John Dicks. He asked if he could be admitted to bail. Bail was refused, and the jailer committed him to await the result of Drake's injuries. Late in the afternoon Rhinelander sent out the following statement for publication:

"I was married in 1879 to Miss Maggie McGuire, of New York. Immediately after the marriage we went to Canada to live. Lawyer Drake came to us. He threatened that if I did not forbidden give up my wife he would have me locked up as a lunatic asylum. He was represented as acting at the instigation of my family, but I am not certain of this. I accepted the idea of a separation. I appealed for protection to the consul. My wife's health compelled me some time afterward to come to New York. On my arrival at the steamer I was arrested in a lunatic asylum were renewed. The relations between my wife and me were disturbed for a time last year. John Drake advised my wife to go to Europe. I told him I did not want to see him. She had left me, and was living in 142 Schermerhorn street, Brooklyn. I was at 247 Schermerhorn street. When my wife left me I went to see her. She was not at home. I called. I then told Drake not to allow my wife to visit his office. On Monday last, when I spoke to her about these matters she refused the visit of the previous Saturday. He said he would receive my wife at his office, and would give her money if he chose. On Tuesday, June 23, he showed her the letter that my wife had been to see him any of the previous days. I told him that I knew differently. He said he would take care of her, and advised her to take a trip to Europe. I said that when I married I forfeited $300,000, and no man should take my wife from me. Drake became abusive and aggressive. He struck me and I struck him in return. On seeing another attack about to follow, I sent a bullet through his shoulder. If this was the act of a madman, it is a pity that there are not more such cases."

"The sword that John Drake continually held over my head and threatened to let fall at any moment was the publication of my marriage. I now wish to stand trial for my act, and to state my wrongs before a jury."

There is much improvement in the condition of Mr. Drake, who is still in the Roosevelt hospital. House Surgeon De Bouttiller said that his injury is severe and dangerous. that there was no immediate danger of his dying, but that probably the fracture of the bone arise his condition would be critical. The fractured bone is much splintered. The bullet has not yet been removed.

INDIAN TROUBLES.

Robbing the Government Storehouse and Assaulting the Pursuers.

WINNIPEG, Manitoba, June 23. — Telegraphic reports from Battleford indicate a serious state of affairs between the Indians and mounted police. Two days ago the Indians on the reserve north of Battleford assaulted Farm Instructor Craig, and robbed the storehouse. Maj. Crozier, with thirty mounted police, left to arrest the Indians. The police returned with two prisoners, being those who had beaten Instructor Craig. While the prisoners were being taken, several Indians threw themselves on Constable Cole, taking his belt and rifle, but he secured his revolver and kept them at bay. During the interim Chief Poundmaker struck at Instructor Antrobus with a war club studded with knives, but the blow missed and Poundmaker was instantly covered by several rifles, when he threw himself on the ground. Poundmaker has been elected chief of all the Cross. Great dissatisfaction is expressed that Poundmaker and other ringleaders were not arrested, as it is felt that there can be no security until Poundmaker is disposed of in some way. He threatened last winter that blood would flow when the leaves ripened," and the present trouble has been brewing for a long time. The result of the fracas will lead the Indians to believe that the authorities are afraid of them. A home company has been organized under command of Capt. Scott. A general feeling of dissatisfaction and insecurity prevails, as several other chiefs have joined and have agreed to resist the police.

A RIOT AT ALPINE GROVE.

Pistols Fired and the Hotel Wrecked. Police to the Rescue.

NEW YORK, June 23.—The Frederick Fleck Association left the foot of Franklin street yesterday morning in two barges towed by the tug F. J. Leonard, bound for Alpine Grove.

Scarcely had the excursion started before a general fight began, and in a short time there was a general melee. Pistols were fired, and a number of persons were injured. The greatest excitement prevailed on both barges and many of the women, were with difficulty restrained from jumping overboard.

When the party reached the hotel at Alpine grove the fight was renewed, and the hotel was wrecked by combatants. The police of this city got wind of the row on the boat and a detachment of officers were sent after the party on the police patrol boat. The policemen restored order, and kept the rowdies in subjection during the return trip. No arrests were made.

Lost in the Mountain Snows.

ILION, N. Y., June 23.—Coroner R. W. Harper, of Ilion, has returned from the North Woods, where he went to hold an inquest on the body of an unknown man who was found near the Moose river, eight miles from Bishop camp. The body was found last April by a couple of guides, who made the fact known. On the person of the deceased was found a Grand Army badge, personal effects, compass, a match box and $1.50 in money. Dr. Abbott, of Forestport, made a post-mortem examination. John Stell, a guide, testified that he saw the deceased leave Dean's pinery in February, 1883, to go to Bisby Lodge, forty miles distant. It is supposed the man had lost the trail and was frozen or starved to death. The Grand Army post here will take measures to trace out the name and residence of the deceased man.

Remaard then started away, when Graham called to him, "Come back and I'll shoot you." WRITING "ENGLISH."

Angular Chirography the Only Kind in "Good Form."

Round, Old-Fashioned Penmanship Relegated to the Use of Shop Girls and Clerks.

[New York World.]

"No, I can't go with you this afternoon," explained a fashionably dressed lady as she stood on the stoop of her residence in Fifth avenue, bidding farewell to the lady about to leave her. "I have my regular lesson in an hour, and after that I shall be engaged."

"Your lesson?" queried the friend.

"Yes, my writing lesson—I am learning to write English."

"Why, who wrote your notes to me?"

"I did, but they were not English. The writing was the American. And with a friendly good-by the lady turned to go. She was middle-aged, richly dressed, spoke correctly, with an affectation of English pronunciation, and seemed hardly the person to begin the study of penmanship so late in life. Stopping on the second step, she lowered her parasol and, leaning forward, said: "You see there are six or eight ladies in our set who are heartily ashamed of their round American style of writing, and formed a little club to learn the angular English style. We meet once a week in The Century building and spend an hour like school-children over our copy-books. And she pulled in the receipted picture of half a dozen society ladies in white bibs industriously learning to write.

"But this angular style is not nearly so legible as the round, round hand you used to write," commented her friend.

"Well, perhaps not. But it is the thing—thoroughly English, you know, and one must learn it. It's like the opera, sometimes not always pleasant, but always popular. But won't you come with us—join our class?" The friend declined, said she had done with the three R's 'reading, 'riting and 'rithmetic) twenty years ago, and moved down the street as the other lady disappeared in the house.

A visit to The Century building, showed a prettily furnished room occupied by a score of desks. Over half the desks were seen as many ladies, each with a little white apron or bib tucked under her chin, as elderly gentlemen sometimes tuck in their napkins at dinner. Each pretty face was bent close to the paper, and as each pair hand followed the teacher's, the plumes on the lowered bonnets waved in unison like a field of wheat waved by the wind. The bare arms and hands laid across the note paper were whiter than the cream-colored texture, and the black-mounted teacher, as he turned from the black-board to smile approvingly at his pupils, seemed immensely proud of his class. All were so eager to learn that his task was an easy one.

Mr. Abercrombie, the teacher, was enthusiastic over the success he is meeting with. Ladies at the Victoria hotel, two from the Winslow, and many of those "in the swim" were only too glad to join him. The class lessons were given principally by mail. In a circular he tells why every lady—every well lady—should write "English," as follows:

A lady's style, speech, manner—these are eloquently expressive of herself; ordinarily, they indicate her social status. So should her hand-writing possess beauty and elegance. Above all should it express a pervading charm of womanliness, to cultivate which is the purpose of my undertaking.

The general plan is based upon the old Italian style, which to-day is recognized and understood as pre-eminently an "English" style for ladies. Shunning, as I do, all ways to a reduced popular basis, in introduction to meeting with gratifying success at the present time, when to be "very English," is to be wholly fashionable.

"But why," ventured the visitor, "should this style be considered more desirable?"

"I suppose because it is English, as it really is. Take 100 English ladies born in the same circles—that is, the upper circles—and ninety-nine of them will write alike this angular hand." Take 100 American ladies and no two of them will write in the same way. Why, I can hardly say. It has always been thought good form in England to write this way, and so all have been taught alike, and the round, old-fashioned hand-writing has disappeared. At the present rate of progress it is only a question of a short time when the curved line—once the line of beauty in penmanship—will be relegated to the use of clerks and shop girls."

"Then you do not have many shop-girls as pupils?"

"Hardly," with a quiet smile at the innocent question. "That is hardly the class of—er—persons we desire to teach. Angular writing is usually a clear-like accomplishment, and fitted only for the better classes. Who cares whether a shop-girl writes an up-and-down or a regular hand?" and the teacher waved the black-board eraser, obscurity with a magnificent flourish. "What they want is to learn short-hand."

"And your gentlemen pupils?"

"We have some, many men, as a rule, must write plainly, and the few that do attempt anything out of the ordinary, learn at their own convenience and in the privacy of their clubs. Besides, the chirography of men betray an individuality which is not often seen in the hand-writing of ladies, and they desire to give this up. After all, the writing in an 'English' way is one of those little accomplishments that betray the lady, like the selection of costumes or the use of perfumes."

Michael's Midnight Call.

[Boston Globe.]

In we sun until very dark hours of Saturday morning Mr. Blank's front door bell rang violently. The worthy citizen went at once to the door, where he found his man Michael in a state of great excitement. Michael said that he had that night been blessed with an addition to his family; that the doctor called in attendance had demanded immediate payment for his services. Having no money in the house, he had called upon Mr. Blank to borrow some. Michael immediately received what he wanted, and with profuse apologies for calling at such an unreasonable hour, departed. The next morning Mr. Blank's daughters, who had heard the story, told their father that he was called so late, and they were informed of the circumstances. "Poor little thing!" sympathetically exclaimed a bright little miss of twelve summers; "name c. b. d., didn't it?"

Fantastic Appellations.

[Chicago Herald.]

Bishop Warren, of the Methodist church, was struck in Mexico by the odd and sometimes fantastic appellations of the small towns. A grocery in a remote village displayed the name of "The Philosophy." On the grog shops may be seen the following: Frank and Support Hope; "The Closeness of the Subscribers," "The Birth of Venus," "The Kiss of Love," "The Toast of Bacchus," "The Life Eternal," "The Vesuvius," "The Shipwreck," "The Delirious Tremens," and "The Little Hell."

GRANT AND THE CHILDREN.

The Story of One of the General's Early Successes.

[Inter Ocean—Chicago Dispatch.]

"I remember one occasion," said a tall man in a down hat, "when Grant stood for hours keeping in a hundred embarrassed boys a young crowd of 50,000 people. The boys came and Ulysses stood in the balcony with him, but soon they settled down to play as the general's friend. For many of us coming later to do they proceeded to the general's legs to the sprights of the balcony railing, and worked away absorbed and earnest, paying no attention to the crowd below nor the smiles of the distinguished people about them. All this time Grant was so absorbed that he didn't notice what the boys were at. Then the last bit of attention was called to it when he observed the enterprising youngsters to untie him, without a shade of impatience or annoyance in his voice or manner.

"At that time, and for all that era of his life, Grant made no speeches, and spoke only in a monosyllable way in response to the hand-shaking and cheering. He looked as quiet as he was, and as unimpressed as he seemed, he was often touched and moved by little incidents. Once I remember a poorly dressed little girl pressed through the line of governors and major and brigadier generals formed about Grant to keep off the crowd intent on handshaking, and walking up to the commander of the armies, began a search for his hands. These were in his pockets, and satisfying herself on this point, the little girl took his right hand out, gave it a little shake and a little caress, and then put it back as she would tuck a little bird in a nest.

"The general watched her with a surprised, amused look, and as she was about to slip away stooped and kissed her. There came to the girl's face such a glorified expression that the general's eyes were dewy as he turned to speak to the gentleman awaiting introduction. Another time, after he had shaken hands for four hours with a crowd passing him in four ranks, the reception committee placed him, three or four steps up a side stairway so the crowd could not reach him. But scarcely had the arrangement been made when the schoolgirls came in, a thousand strong. When they learned they couldn't shake hands their disappointment knew no bounds. One little miss stepped under the general rail, holding up her hand, looked at him so longingly that Grant, saying, 'I can never stand that,' stepped down, and shaking hands with the girl, precipitated a whirlwind of girls in his arms. They broke ranks, broke through the guards, broke over regulations, and alarmed about the general with eager, upturned faces, and for half an hour the committee on order of exercises was stampeded."

Cassius Clay's Circus.

[Cor. Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.]

Cassius M. Clay's home is near Foxtown, twenty miles east of Lexington. A reporter called on him one evening Mr. Clay said: "Tell me what's going on, for I'm out of politics now. I'm here alone alone—no, I'm not alone, for I have a circus. Yes, dogs, birds, flowers, and books. And, by the way, I am writing a book—my memoirs." It was a beautiful evening and the scene was one of peace. Orchard trees and flowering shrubs surround the house, or mansion, for such it really is. To the west is a sweep of "blue grass." At the east side are low lands, from which came the tinkling of sheep bells. "I have 400 sattlebows," said Farmer Clay; "my father used to be a great nursing sheep-raiser, and I follow southdowns." You may people might think it curious when I say that my sheep give me a great deal of comfort. To my mind, no landscape is complete without the picturesque dis-tributed about. In England, and in the east here, they are placed in the public parks as ornaments. The southdowns are to sheep what the shepherds are to girls. I have great fun watching the lambs. Upon my word, I think the little rascals know I enjoy their gambols. Over yonder is a circular depression in the pasture, out of which was taken, before I was born, the clay for the bricks of the house here. Well, I go there every day and run around in the ring. It's a perfect circus. Sometimes I have to hold my sides laughing to see them panting and catching their 'second wind,' and then go tearing around the ring again."

We sat before an old-fashioned wood-fire. The logs crackled and blazed on a capacious hearth, which was guarded on each side by a large brass "dog." Lying on the table was a thick bundle of manuscripts. "I have finished writing," Mr. Clay said, catching a look of inquiry on my face, "and am now negotiating with the Harpers for the publication of the memoirs. They published my other book, edited by Horace Greeley. The events there treated were only up to 1848. The present memoirs will be in two volumes; they will include the gist of the matter in the book prepared by Mr. Greeley, and will come down to when I retired from the active discussion of politics." Pointing to a box full of letters, he said he was going to try to have all of them published; he had "boiled them down" as much as possible, and he was now now afraid he had too many. "There are letters in that box," Mr. Clay went on to say, "from almost every prominent man in the United States." That Mr. Clay failed for more than an hour of what they contained and what he was going to write.

The Wire Age.

[Exchange.]

Future annalists may well describe this period of American history as the wire age. In no part of the country is this more true than we are we divorced from wire. It is our slave, and yet an ever present master. Sleeping, we repose on wire mattresses. Eating, we see foods which are protected by wired sieves, and which are sheltered from insect appetite by wire covers. Calling, we pull wires to ring curled wire gongs. Traveling, we are conveyed by cable and wire railways, hoisted by elevators hung on wires and hurried over wire bridges. We announce our coming by telegraph or telephone wires, and we send our regrets by night messenger streets lighted by means of electric cables. Across our fields are strung thousands of miles of barbed wire. Our clocks are wire driven. Our watches are wound by wires, our books are stitched with wires, our pictures hung by wires, and our politics managed by wires.

The Good Old Times.

[Pingaree Blatter.]

Fifty years ago or so the commanding officer in Marigold had to send a report to his superior. He summons for this purpose a subaltern. "Have you pen, ink and paper?" "Yes, your honor." "Now write. March, Marigold, the 18th; got that down?" "Yes, your honor." "What have you got?" "Marigold, the 18th." "Good; go on; October, the 19th." "Got it down, your honor." "What have you got?" "October." "Good; now read it all." "Marigold, the 19th October." "Proceed; 1848—got that down?" "Yes, your honor." "What have you got?" "1848." "Good; now read it all together." "Marigold, the 18th October, 1848." "Well, now, let's rest an hour or so."

Dr. Burlingham has been seriously ill, and it has been found necessary to call in Dr. Loomis, the noted physician of New York.

Stiger, of the firm of D. M. Stiger & Co., Wholesale Druggists, of New York, and families, are among the guests stopping at the Park House.

Mr. Seney's Home at Bernardsville.

It is said that every acre of Mr. Seney's property on Basker's Mountain, at Bernardsville, Somerset County, has cost him $1,000. His house is a magnificent specimen of architecture and is surrounded by hundreds of feet of broad piazzas. Every room is a marvel of decorative art. An embossed leather dado on the dining room alone cost over $8,000. The Mr. E. Church and schoolhouse in the place were both built by him. In his mammoth and costly barns are 200 horses, of which 150 are finely bred Hambletonian stallions, mares and colts. He had even a race track, upon which he hoped to develop a trotter which would beat the world. In the winter time he has donated as high as sixty barrels of flour at a time among the poorer families, and he has always provided the laboring people with daily newspapers and the best periodicals for their reading and improvement. It is said now that the property will pass out of Mr. Seney's hands, and all Bernardsville mourns his unfortunate circumstances.

The Wife's Commandments.

A wife, the mother of a family sends us the following with a request to publish it:

1. Thou shalt love no other wife than me.
2. Thou shalt not take into thy house any beautiful brazen image of a servant girl, to bow down to her and worship her, for I am a jealous wife, visiting, etc. 3. Thou shalt not take the name of thy wife in vain. 4. Remember thy wife to keep her respectably. 5. Honor thy father and mother-in-law. 6. Thou shalt not fret. 7. Thou shalt not find fault with thy dinner. 8. Thou shalt not chew tobacco. 9. Thou shalt be behind thy neighbor. 10. Thou shalt not visit the rum tavern; thou shalt not covet the tavern-keeper's rum, nor his brandy, nor his wine, nor anything that is behind the counter of the rum-seller. 11. Thou shalt not visit the billiard hall. And the 12th commandment Thou shalt not come home after nine o'clock at night.

Sympathetic.

Gentleman on Front street with a copy of THE NEWS, to lady acquaintance a few evenings since—Do you take this paper?

She—Yes, I use you do. How do you like it?

He—It's a mighty good paper. Do you think it will pay?

She—I hope so, for it is splendid. It must pay in time.

He—Yes, unless the poor fellow gets starved out in the meantime. I am afraid this paper is too good for Plainfield.

LEX OF REFORM.

Reformation, cry the people
Let us move, it can be done
Form in club and be effective
Work, (the watchword) every one.

Let us work and toil together
'Tis an easy done, as said
Bring them in from street and gutter
And adopt the ribbon red.

Yes—ribbon 'tis but a symbol
To remember you by now,
He will guard his pride of manhood
Nor again to Bacchus bow.

We do not denounce the seller—
He's a brother, he's a man,
But the business and the traffic
We will stop if we can.

Doubting Thomases, will ever
Throw cold water on the cause
Won't believe 'till hand or finger
They call law upon the laws.

We'll show the fruitless of our efforts
By our works our fruits are shown,
Numbering on every hand
And each day hath larger grown.

Now the only way to conquer
And to seal the poison up,
Is to touch not, taste, nor handle
The accursed liquid of the cup.

And induce each brother, neighbor
If should be ever your plan
And so near the customed banner
This the rule, and this the way.

ARGUS.

A Quaint Letter.

The following is a curious letter from Mr. Hugh Thorn, father of M. M. Thorn of this city, written in 1787, from the Short Hills in this State, to a watchmaker in Philadelphia, Philadelphia:

FRIEND JOHN:—I herewith send my pocket clock which greatly stands in need of thy friendly correction. The last time he was at thy school he was to be reformed nor is the least benefitted thereby, for I perceive by the index of his mind that he is a liar, and the truth is not in him; that his motions are irregular and wavering; that his pulse is somewhat slow, which betokeneth not an over-eager desire to work. He wanteth sluggish, notwithstanding I frequently urge him when he should be on his duty as thou knowest his vanse knoweth. I find him slumbering, or as the vanity of the human reason phrases it, I catch him napping. Examine him therefore, and prove him. I beseech thee thoroughly that thou mayest, being well acquainted with his inward frame and disposition, draw him from the error of his ways and show him the path wherein he go. It grieveth me to think and when I ponder therein I am verily of the opinion that he is foul, and that the whole mass is corruption. Cleanse him, therefore, with thy charming medicines from all pollution, that he may viewed according to truth. I will place him for a few days under thy care and pay for his board as thou requirest. I send five pounds, John, to seaman thyself on this occasion with judgment according to the gift which is in thee and prove thyself to be a workman. And when thou layest thy correcting hand on him let it be without passion lest thou drive him to desperation. Do thou regulate his motion for a time to come by the motion of light that runeth the day, and when thou findest him convicted from the error of his ways and more compatible to the above mentioned rules, then do thou send him home with a feel full of the change directed in the spirit of moderation and it shall be sent to thee in the root of all evil.

HUGH THORN.

Forming Clubs in Rahway.

The Blaine and Logan Club of Rahway Saturday night elected the following officers: President, Hon. Garret A. Hobart (President of the New Jersey Senate); Vice-Presidents, U. M. Osborne, C. D. Ward, ex-Senator J. Henry Stone, George H. Waters; Treasurer, William Mershon; Secretary, Daniel G. Urmston. Amongst the officers and members of committees are many men who have not hitherto taken an active part in politics.

The young Republicans of Rahway met on Thursday evening for the purpose of forming a Blaine and Logan Club. H. B. Rollinson called the meeting to order, and S. O. H. Mills, one of the prominent young citizens of Rahway, made a stirring speech. A committee on permanent organization consisting of Councilman Ward, Charles Reed and W. A. Mills, was appointed, which is to report at a meeting to be held next Thursday night. It is expected that several hundred will be enrolled as members.

Plainfield vs. North Plainfield.

A close and interesting game of ball was played on Mr. Lyon's field Saturday, between seven of the High School Nine, and seven of the North Plainfield Nine. The game resulted in a tie, 21 to 21. Among the principal features of the game were home-runs by W. Worth and J. Sanford, a triple out play by Newman, Peck and Horn, in the 5th inning, when there were three men on bases and none out, and a 3 bolt-stop by G. Vickl. The nines, or teams, were chosen: High School—F. Newman, Captain, J. Sanford, H. Peck, T. Horn, A. Holcomb, W. Burt and F. Sanford; North Plainfield—W. Worth, Captain, R. Townley, J. Bailey, F. Voehl, G. Wann, J. Young and G. Worth.

A Fatal Accident.

Mr. Vincente Martinez Picabia, age 33 years, nephew of the Delmonicos, one of the guests of the Hotel Netherwood, went to his factory in New York as usual yesterday to look after some business details. While adding some a jar of acid, a workman accidentally dropped a lighted candle in it. In his efforts to prevent any damage being done, Mr. Picabia became seriously affected by the acid. He immediately returned to Netherwood, and several physicians were summoned to attend him. They were unable, however, to permanently relieve him, and he died last evening at ten o'clock.

Plainfield Ahead.

If there is a city in this country of the size of New Brunswick that can boast of more tastefully dressed ladies than this city can, it is yet to be heard from.—New Brunswick Home News.

Plainfield can discount you. It will surpass any city in the Union of similar dimensions, not only for the number of its beautiful women, but for the number of its refined, cultivated, Christian (and) philanthropic women. These are more to be prized than beauty.

Magistrate Kerswell and Jailer Swindells, of the Camden County Jail, were apprised yesterday afternoon that an attempted jail delivery was to be made. An examination of cell No. 2 disclosed the fact that a hole had been cut in the ceiling leading to the sheriff's office. The debris from the aperture was found under the bed. To Our Friends.

The Reform Club of Plainfield having realized a sufficient amount of subscriptions sufficient to pay for and secure title to the property formerly known as the Second Baptist Church, on the corner of Second street and Central avenue, this city, and funds being likewise available, chiefly through the exertions of the ladies of the Christian Temperance Ladies, to furnish and equip the purchased building when properly altered and repaired for the practical use of the Club, respectfully though urgently appeal to the liberality and kindly feelings of the citizens of Plainfield and vicinity for additional means to fully complete such needful selection and purpose.

The good work already accomplished by the Reform Club, under the approving smile of the Divine Providence, and the still greater work awaiting future efforts, certainly commend it to the favorable consideration and support of every friend of humanity.

The pecuniary demands made upon the public for work and labor, and the general inactivity on the part of the Club to solicit further aid, but waiting as in abeyance in the all important Temperance reformation they are striving to permanently establish, induces them to this ask and induce them to believe that early and substantial encouragement will follow the asking.

Donations to the aforesaid purpose to the extent of individual ability and inclination, will be received and duly acknowledged by the officers of the Club, or either member of its Executive or Subscription Committee, the names of which are hereunto inscribed.

ACTS OF THE COUNCIL AND GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

of the State of New Jersey, from the establishment of the present Government, and Declaration of Independence, to the end of the first sitting of the eighth session, on the 24th day of December, 1783, with the Constitution prefixed. An Appendix, containing the Articles of Confederation of the United States, etc., with two alphabetical tables and an index. Compiled under the appointment of the Legislature, by Peter Wilson, A. M. Printed by Isaac Collins, Trenton, Printer to the State of New Jersey in 1784.

At a General Assembly held at Princeton on the twenty-seventh day of August to the eighth day of October 1776, (being the first Assembly of the State of New Jersey after the formation of the Constitution) the following laws were passed,

SESSION FIRST—SITTING FIRST.

CHAPTER I.

An act for repealing an ordinance of the Convention of the State of New Jersey of the twenty-first of August last, and for recovering and appropriating the several militia fines; and to prevent excessive distresses.

Passed Sept. 13, 1776.

This act serves only to repeal an absolute ordination of the Convention of the 21st, of August 1776, and to direct how fines incurred by two preceding ordinances of the said Convention, to be disposed of in a manner prescribed by another ordinance of the 3d of August, and therefore is unnecessary to be repeated.

CHAPTER II.

An act for the security of the Government of New Jersey. Passed Sept. 19, 1776.

Whereas it is essentially necessary for the safety of the State, that every person who holds any office or post of a public nature should evince his fidelity and attachment to the government, from whence he derives protection, and under which he is authorized to act: And whereas, to effect this important purpose, it is necessary that a proper test be established to be taken by all officers civil and military within this State.

The remainder of the preamble to this act, having reference only to such parts thereof as are repealed, is here omitted.

Sec. 1. Therefore be it enacted by the Council and General Assembly of this State, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same. That the following test shall be taken by all officers civil and military, who are now in office, or hereafter shall be appointed, elected or commissioned within the several counties of this State, that is to say.

I A B do sincerely profess and swear, (or, if one of the people called Quakers, affirm) that I do not hold myself bound to bear allegiance to the King of Great Britain. So help me God.

I A B do sincerely profess and swear, or, if one of the people called Quakers, affirm) that I do and will bear true faith and allegiance to the government established in this State under the authority of the people. So help me God, "

The remainder of the first section, and the second section directing the aforesaid oaths to be administered by persons authorized to tender the same by declinous protestatem, and authorizing the Governor to issue commissions for that purpose, are repealed and supplied by Chapter XCXIV.

5. And be it enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the act passed on the fifth of May One Thousand seven hundred and twenty-two, entitled (Allinson, Chapter CV.) An act for the security of His Majesty's Government of New Jersey, and so much of the act passed the tenth of February One Thousand Seven Hundred and twenty-seven, entitled, (Allinson, Chapter CXXIV.) as act prescribing the forms of declaration of fidelity, the effect of the abjuration oath and affirmation instead of the forms heretofore required in such cases, and for repealing the former acts in the like cases made and provided, as relates to taking affirmations to the King of Great Britain, and the acts thereby repealed, shall be, and the same are hereby repealed.

THE BATTLE IN INDIANA

Democrats Very Uneasy Concerning the Situation.

Payne's Flattering Prospects—Independent Republicans Not for Cleveland—Gen. Noyes to Take the Stump for Blaine.

PHILADELPHIA, June 24.—A special dispatch to The Telegraph says that the Democrats are very uneasy at the situation in Indiana, and fear that they will not be able to carry the state under any circumstances. Many have given up all hope of Hendricks accepting the nomination for governor, and charge him with still having the old ticket in his head. Gray, the other man most prominently spoken of for governor, is said to be very unpopular in the southern portion of the state and quite distasteful to McDonald's friends on account of a little circumstance which occurred at the time of the election of Harrison to the senate.

It was then intended to give the Democratic complimentary vote to McDonald as opposed to Harrison, as it was deemed that he was most worthy of this consideration at the hands of his party, but by some means Gray secured this vote for himself, contrary to all expectations, and consequently is not popular with the McDonald men. McDonald, they think, is probably the only man who could carry the state, but his acceptance is out of the question, as he expects to get somewhere on the Democratic national ticket. Hendricks, Thurman and other Democrats who, it is thought would stand any chance of carrying the state. But there is some doubt about either desiring to run against Colkins.

Blaine and the Brewers.

NEW YORK, June 24.—Mr. A. E. J. Tovey, editor and proprietor of the Hudson and American Brewer's Journal, was asked today:

"What is the real position of the brewers and maltsters toward Blaine?"

"In view of the colossal and rapidly growing brewing and malting interests of the country, involving many millions of capital and many thousands of men, the question is important—so important that both the great political parties are bound to try and are trying to maintain it in the first place, most of the brewers are Democrats."

"But, no matter for or with whom they have voted in the past, how do they stand in regard to the matter of the presidential candidacy of James Gillespie Blaine?"

"The brewers want to know how Blaine stands in regard to them. He has made no distinct utterances in regard to the prohibition question. It is an open question until he speaks explicitly upon it. If Mr. Blaine is opposed to the brewing interests, the brewers will most assuredly be opposed to him. If he is not opposed to the brewing interests, and if the Democrats should nominate unobjectionable men, as a matter of course he would have a fair showing."

Cleveland's Enemies.

PHILADELPHIA, June 24.—There is a report among Democratic congressmen and others at Washington, says The Philadelphia Telegraph, "that Mr. John Kelly and Tammany hall have evolved a plan of action for anti-Democrats in New York this week for the purpose of consultation regarding the presidential nomination. The movement is supposed to be intended for the inauguration of an opposition to Governor Cleveland's nomination, and is alleged to be incited by a desire to get votes in order to defeat the unit rule in the New York delegation in case a majority of the delegates should be found to favor Mr. Cleveland. It is not known who are invited, but as Messrs. Morrissey, Campbell, Bayard and Dorsheimer are said to be among the number, the conclusion is reached that the center of it is to be mainly made up of free-silver Democrats."

Will Take the Stump for Blaine.

LONDON, June 24.—Gen. E. F. Noyes, ex-minister to France, was seen by a United Press correspondent and asked for his opinion regarding the presidential contest in the United States. He said: "Mr. Blaine was not my first choice, and I am not at all sure that the nomination was the best that could have been made by the Republican party. Still, it is certain that his great personal following, and his magnetic influence will arouse the enthusiasm of the masses as the campaign progresses. I intend to return to the United States early in the fall and will take the stump for Blaine. I believe he can and will be elected, and I will certainly put forth all possible efforts to aid in accomplishing that result."

Looking Towards United Action.

NEW HAVEN, CT., June 24.—A meeting of the Independent Republicans of this city and vicinity was held last night. Considerable enthusiasm was manifested and sentiment was displayed. The meeting organized with Prof. Simon E. Baldwin as chairman; Prof. Fisher, J. B. Sargent, Wm. D. Whitney, Eli Whitney, jr., and others as vice presidents. The addresses were made by Profs. Baldwin and Fisher, Morris F. Tyler and others. Resolutions were adopted expressing dissatisfaction with the platform of the Republican party as adopted at Chicago, and with the nomination of James G. Blaine and John A. Logan. A committee of twenty-five will be named to correspond with similar bodies of Independent Republicans, looking toward united action.

Payne's Flattering Prospects.

CINCINNATI O., June 24.—A Post special from Columbus says: "Payne men are on the ground and confident. County after county will be either instructed for or elect Payne delegates, and control the state convention. While only things remaining for them is to agree upon a delegation at large to look out for doubtful congressional districts, and to let Payne men are elected. Also to fix the whisky and tariff planks in the platform. Hoadly and Payne's interests are pooled in this convention, and the delegation will be used to select the most available candidate at Chicago."

The New Jersey Delegates.

NEW YORK, June 24.—Members of the New Jersey delegation to the Chicago convention state that there is but little sentiment in favor of Cleveland. Of the eighteen, there are four Randall, two non-committal and the rest are divided between Bayard, Cleveland, McDonald and Payne. The complimentary vote of the delegation will be cast solid for Gov. Leon Abbott. Two of the delegates at-large, Stockholm and McPherson, are Bayard men. The other two are non-committed.

Independents Not for Cleveland.

NEW YORK, June 24.—The Star says the Cleveland men claim that the delegates will each Independent Republican votes. If Gen. Francis S. Barlow, a leader of the Independents, is to be accepted as authority, they will do nothing of the sort. Gen. Barlow yesterday said: "Our party intends to nominate another Republican candidate for President, and will not support a democratic nominee—men whom we can honestly support—a man like Bayard or McDonald, for instance. I do not think we can carry the full vote of the Independents for Cleveland, and I am sure that the Democrats could not carry it."

Tarsney Toward Tilden Again.

PHILADELPHIA, June 24.—The Bulletin has the following special from Washington: "It is a curious fact, and one which interests both member and commentator, that despite Mr. Tilden's letters there are a large number of prominent Democrats here who still believe that he can and will be forced to accept the nomination at Chicago. These men insist that there is no other candidate who can lead the party to success in November, and that it is a great pity that the action of Mr. Blaine will not be a strong candidate before the people, and that the latter will not use every effort to make the canvass of 1884 one of education. They think that at the time the convention meets on the 8th of July this fact will become so manifest that the party will be obliged to turn to Mr. Tilden and oblige him to become the candidate.

Gen. Neal Dow Holds the Nomination.

PORTLAND, Me., June 24.—Gen. Neal Dow has held the nomination of his prohibitory party and will support Blaine. He said: "The temperance men of Maine, Kansas and Iowa cannot afford to sacrifice the legislation to prohibition. In these states the Republican party has adopted prohibition as an important part of its platform and is in favor of enforcing it as much as is necessary to carry out that policy. I think the temperance men and temperance women of these states will stand by the Republican nominee."

SEVENTEEN HOUSES BURNED.

The Town of Shenandoah Swept by a Fire—Two Persons Injured.

SCHUYLKILL, Pa., June 24.—A fire broke out at 1 o'clock yesterday in a block of tenement houses owned by a person named Malone, and before it could be checked it had spread to the other tenements. The firemans axe-hang-ing did were sent to Tamaqua, Ashland and Pottsville, and the entire town was thrown into a fever of excitement. The water supply got exhausted and was proved useless. Seventeen houses were destroyed before the fire was gotten under control. Men, women and children rushed around and impeded the work of the firemen. The houses were inhabited by about 200 Hungarians of the lowest class. Four American families were burned out of homes. The loss to the property-owners will be about $15,000, one-half of which amount is covered by insurance. The loss to the tenants will reach nearly $1,000. Two firemen were severely injured while attempting to remove some of her household effects, and a small boy, named Grimes, was seriously injured in attempting to escape from the second-story window of a blazing tenement. The fire is supposed to have been caused by sparks flying from an engine on the Lehigh Valley railroad near by. The buildings were all frame structures, and the roofs being of tar-covered material rendered them exceedingly combustible. The fire-fighting apparatus at the fires here during the past six months has destroyed all feeling of confidence on the part of business men. The Hungarians are destitute from the cessation of labor in the mining out on the hillsides. The feeling against them here being very bitter, they are refused any assistance by the native citizens.

DUEL WITH RAWHIDE AND DIRK

One Missourian Killed and Another Mortally Wounded in a Battle.

ST. LOUIS, June 24.—A horrible carving affray occurred in Bollinger county, Missouri, on the 14th inst. Asbury Dunn, a wealthy dairy farmer, was arrested last winter on a serious charge preferred by the sister-in-law of one Tom Asbury, who has since died. The case is now in the possession of the defendant, which has been out on bond waiting trial. Chapman, who is a giant in size announced publicly his intention of horsewhipping Asbury. The latter, he heard the news, stated that he would certainly defend himself if attacked.

The next 4,000 words that ensued produced a rawhide and told Asbury that he was about to punish him. Asbury drew a long-bladed dirk knife from his sleeve. Chapman struck Asbury several times the first time he was assaulted, each stroke of Chapman's rawhide being followed by a slash of Asbury's knife. Purpose thoroughly possessed each man that he secured unconscious of injury from his antagonist's weapon, even though at every stroke the whip drew blood from Asbury's face, while at each thrust the long knife sank deep into Chapman's body. After fully five minutes of this work Chapman's strength suddenly gave way and he sank down. His body was found several weeks later by the knife. Chapman died soon after. Asbury's face is so horribly cut up that is feared he cannot survive long.

Censuring President Arthur.

NEW YORK, June 24.—A Washington special to The Star says: "Representative Cook, of Illinois, has been chosen a member of committee. Mr. Cook is a member of the committee, and the Chalmers contest case has been under consideration for a considerable period. As a member of the body Mr. Cook was instructed to make the report in favor of Chalmers. He has done so, and in it has charged that Chalmers has been victimized by a corrupt bargain with Chalmers, and has attacked Chalmers' private character. This report the Republicans are expected to sign. They do not occasion in the committee room. To tell Mr. Cook what they thought of him. The reply of the man from Iowa was simply and to the point. He said that fraudulent ballots had been cast for Chalmers, and that President Arthur had shamefully bargained with the southern contestant for support at Chicago. Representative Cook, of Mr. Chalmers became a majority of the committee and so instructed, and nothing could be gained by opposing his pretenses.

Fatal Accident to a Yale Student.

NEW HAVEN, June 24.—A serious accident, which, it is feared, may terminate fatally occurred in the gymnasium connected with Yale. J. C. Oliver, the short stop of the Yale nine, was with several others practicing batting. Winston, of '87, having been asked to take the place of a pitcher, got awkward, and although Oliver dodged he was not quick enough to avoid it, and was knocked senseless. Dr. Bryant was called, when it was found that there was reason to fear that hemorrhages of the brain had set in and that Oliver's injuries must prove fatal. This will be a great blow to the baseball interests of Yale this year, Oyer having come to his death during the last winter games. Oliver is a member of the junior scientific class and belongs in Pittsburg.

The Lull Before the Storm.

CINCINNATI, June 24.—The anticipated strike, or lockout, in the boot and shoe trade that was expected directly after the failure of the board of arbitration and its final abandonment of the question, has not been materialized; but the trouble has not been settled by any means. The men, it is true, are all at work, and wages are being paid upon the basis of last year's schedule, but they have formulated other and advanced demands, which will be submitted at a meeting of the employes to be held for a day or two. As a prominent employer said this morning: "This is a lull before the storm."

OUTBREAK OF CHOLERA

Thirty Deaths in Toulon Since Monday and the State Increasing.

A Large Spain Number Suspected—Cholera Also at Gallipoli.

Russians Bloodless on Galicia—The Louzon French on American Railway Securities—Other Foreign Gossip.

PARIS, June 24.—An alarming outbreak of cholera has occurred on Toulon. The press of that city and vicinity having combined in an attempt to conceal the fact, it has been impossible to learn to what an extent the epidemic has reached. There have been thirty deaths since Sunday, and the ratio of mortality has increased each day. Panic has seized upon the people. Eight thousand persons have fled from the city, and thousands of the residents of the poorer quarters have been driven out. They have been driven into the suburbs by the police, and are now camping in the fields. The bodies of victims of the disease are buried in large trenches and covered with quicklime to hasten their decomposition. None have been buried in the regular cemeteries for fear of giving opportunity for the infection to spread. Great terror is shown by the inhabitants of the surrounding country upon the approach of any of the refugees from the city, lest they should carry with them the germs of the dreaded malady. It is claimed, however, by the physicians, that the disease is not Asiatic cholera, but that it is of sporadic origin.

To Be Lesseps Confident.

PARIS, June 24.—M. de Lesseps, in an interview, pronounced false the rumor that the work of excavating for the Panama canal was a failure. He asserted, on the contrary, that the progress of the work was more considerable than had been expected. He felt confident that the canal would be finished in 1888, and he intends to be present at the opening and direct the proceedings on the occasion. He also promises his numerous children the pleasure of a trip to America with him on that occasion.

England will propose that Egypt and the Suez canal shall be placed in an entirely neutral position, and that a mixed commission shall be appointed to govern the country after the withdrawal of the British troops.

As to the proposed canal across Nicaragua, M. de Lesseps did not fear that it would ever injure his own enterprises. He was understood that the Nicaragua scheme was only supported by a few speculators. He had found when in the United States that the American railways encouraged the Panama project. In any event, however, he cared no more for the attitude of the United States toward the Panama canal than he did for that of England toward the Panama canal. He had no doubt that the rights of shareholders in each would be preserved inviolate.

Miss Griswold's Debut.

LONDON, June 24.—Miss Antonia Griswold made her operatic debut at the Covent Garden Theatre as Marguerite in "Faust." The house was crowded and the audience was an exceedingly brilliant one. Almost every American of note now in the city was present, and Mr. Gillig's box contained Minister Phelps, Mr. Manning and Mr. Attorney Tenney. Miss Griswold's welcome from the audience was hearty and generous. She was repeatedly recalled and received many floral gifts. During a love scene she was presented by Miss Emma Thursby. Miss Griswold has a pure and sweet soprano voice, but she proved somewhat deficient in dramatic power and histrionic ability in the scenes which will probably disappear as she becomes more familiar with the operatic stage.

Disastrous Floods in Galicia.

VIENNA, June 24.—The floods in Galicia continue to increase in extent. The large bridge at Ivangorod fell into the Vistula, its shorings having been undermined. It carried with it several houses and those on the banks and a number of persons, twenty of whom were drowned. The damage by the floods up to this time is estimated at $10,000,000. The fall of rain has been unusual, at a moment when hundreds of persons were congregated on the structure watching the progress of the swollen waters. In addition to twenty known to have been drowned many others are missing, and are probably lost. The victims were mostly of the peasant class.

More Beneficial than Hurtful.

LONDON, June 24.—The more common expressively upon the condition of the American railway securities market. The unanimous opinion expressed is that a threatening state of affairs exists. The publication, in advance of the article, discredits the rumors of Mr. Gould's embarrassment. It gives him credit for "not minding cutting to have been able to profit by the storm which has been so disastrous to others. Yet if it should happen that he were obliged to suspend, The Times is not certain but that it would be on the whole more beneficial than hurtful to the sorely tried market, so long held subject to his operations.

Anxious to Hear Mr. Gladstone.

LONDON, June 24.—The house of commons was packed to its utmost capacity, the members' benches being fully occupied and the galleries crowded with people anxious to hear Mr. Gladstone's statement of the preliminary negotiations for the Egyptian conference. The Prince of Wales and scores of members of the nobility occupied seats in the peers' gallery. The Liberals are profuse in their expressions of approval of Mr. Gladstone's presentation of the subject, and the Tories are thoughtful and indisposed to talk.

Because He Is a Freemason.

DUBLIN, June 24.—Archbishop McCabe has written a letter denouncing Mr. Winstanley, candidate for mayor of Dublin, and forbidding Catholics to support him, because he is a Freemason. The archbishop expresses surprise that it should be necessary to warn Catholics against aiding or encouraging Freemasonry, the condemnation of the pope on the subject. Mr. Winstanley is a Home Ruler.

England to Control Egypt.

LONDON, June 24.—Duplicate statements of agreement have been proposed and will be laid before parliament. The French chamber by which France renounces any claim to joint dominion with England in Egypt, and engages not to send troops to that country without England's consent. The occupation of Egypt by England shall cease in 1888. At the coming Egyptian conference questions of the financial administration will considered.

Refuses to Resign.

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., June 23. — Four weeks ago the trustees of the Williston seminary asked ex-Lieut. Gov. Horatio G. Knight to resign from their board, owing to a scandal involving a young lady which had been connected with Mr. Knight's name for some time. Mr. Knight refuses to resign and says he will not be driven from the board by public opinion. Williston appointed him a trustee for life, and a meeting to consider the action of the board was made public Monday.

A Large Spain Number Suspected—Cholera Also at Gallipoli.

Russians Bloodless on Galicia—The Louzon French on American Railway Securities—Other Foreign Gossip.

MOB LAW AMONG ITALIANS.

The Son of an Absconder Threatened by Unpaid Laborers.

WILMINGTON, Del., June 24.—Dr. Edan Ekton, Md., special says: "Intelligence has reached here that a crowd of Italian workmen at Principio has attacked, imprisoned and threatened to lynch John Wallace, jr. Wallace is the son of John Wallace, sr., a subcontractor on the Baltimore and Philadelphia railroad, who last Friday received $900 from the company, and departed leaving his son in charge. Sheriff Smith, with a posse, has left to rescue young Wallace."

A later dispatch says the riot is at an end. Sheriff Smith, with a posse, visited the scene and found John Wallace, son of the absconding contractor, besieged in a shanty with some 300 laborers surrounding it. They were ready to string him up unless the money was forthcoming. Sheriff Smith conferred with the original contractors, Messrs. Simmons & Mc-Hugh, and they gave assurance that the men would be paid whether Wallace turned up or not. When the men received this guarantee from the gentlemen named, Mr. Wallace, jr., was allowed to depart. The riot at Principio seems to be contagious, as a report has just reached here of a serious disturbance among the laborers on the Penn railroad at Elk Mills, three miles north of here. The failure of sub-contractors appears to be chronic on the road.

"I WOULD LIKE TO FINISH HER."

Threats of Lynching the Assailant of Miss Mollie Gherkin.

VINCENNES, Ind., June 24.—Oliver Cambell, who attempted to murder Mollie Gherkin, while in jail told Officer Rumer that he would like to see the girl, and he was granted the privilege. When he entered the room where she was lying, he laughed at her. Officer Rumer took him out of the room and asked him what he thought about it. "I would like to finish her," said Cambell, and Rumer left him alone for a few minutes to find out laughing. The city is somewhat excited, and the officers of the law claim that they expect Cambell will be mobbed. There is no organized effort, but only two mob organizations. Cambell's crime is the most fiendish ever recorded here. He took his victim in his arms, instead of embracing her, he shot at her five times, two of the bullets lodging in her brain. She has been conscious but once since she was shot. Her case is a most remarkable one, and has attracted wide attention from physicians.

She Hails From Buffalo.

BUFFALO, June 24.—Some one, giving her name as Mrs. Keiser, who last Wednesday robbed Edward Baker of $1,100 in the Sherman house, Indianapolis, hails from this city. She had a very lengthy reputation here, and when she departed took $50 in money her landlord had given to make repairs on the house. She lived for some time with a man named August Keiser, passing him off as her brother, but later on they were married. She induced Baker to go to Indianapolis with her to buy out a saloon and he drew $1,000 in bills for that purpose. August Keiser followed them to that city, and when the woman secured the money she left with her husband.

Derelict Selectmen.

BRIDGEPORT, CT., June 24.—Mrs. Wells hunting in a field this morning found and discovered the body of a woman wrapped up in old newspapers. The head was gone, but the remains were badly decomposed it could not be ascertained if the head was cut off by the parties who placed the body there, or whether it had been carried away by dogs. Dr. Beardsley, whose farm the body was found, said he has been notified of the matter since June 3, and had notified the selectmen of the town, who had taken no action.

A Little Fortune to Sparkler Dem.

NEW YORK, June 24.—Mr. Sparkler Deming, who has been in the jewelry business for many years in Broadway, sold out three weeks ago. He visited a friend in Twift, Valley of the Nile, on Friday last. In his inside pocket he had pocket-book containing precious stones worth about $5,000 and various papers and securities aggregating about $10,000. In the same he took his pocket-book out to show the precious stones to a friend. When he felt in his pocket for the pocket-book it was gone. One thousand dollars worth of loose diamonds in an upper outside coat-pocket were untouched.

The Murdered Landlord.

HUNTER'S POINT, L. I., June 24.—Patrick Kiernan, the saloon keeper, who shot and killed his landlord, Peter McCormick, in this city on Saturday, was arraigned before Justice Delehanty at the City hall. An immense crowd filled up court room long before the time set for the hearing, and when the prisoner was brought into the room a large police number of deputy sheriffs and policemen guarded him. His counsel asked that the hearing be postponed until after the coroner's inquest, which has been adjourned to Friday evening.

Business Suspension.

CHICAGO, June 24.—The Brown & Van Arsdale Manufacturing company have assigned for the benefit of their creditors. Charles B. Brown, president of the company, said his failure was due to inability to meet certain paper which became due. Liabilities, $100,000; assets, $150,000. The firm has been making $300,000 worth of cast iron wagon material yearly. Their works occupy an entire block on the west side.

IN THE FROZEN ZONE.

Speculations as to the Safety of Lieut. Greely and His Men.

The North Carolina Exposition. Senators Laying Out Their Work. First Installment of the One and Two Dollar Notes.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—About a month ago hopes of tidings from the Lieut. Greely party were received by a report that whalers, who returned from the Arctics, regarded him as dead. No such report was forthcoming from the whalers, who returned from the Arctics, but there were no traces of them. No corroboration of the report has been received, but, on the contrary, more recent information from the north shows that the past winter has been of unusual severity in the frozen zone, a fact that makes the prospect for the rescue of the last men a gloomy one indeed. Army officers who know Lieut. Greely regarded him as a man who would obey orders under any circumstances so long as that course were possible. A knowledge of this fact left no superiors to select him for the command of the expedition. When he was left up there in the summer of 1881 it was definitely understood that if a vessel should fail to reach him by the 1st of September, 1883, he should conclude that the ice precluded the possibility of a vessel getting through, and then, with his men, begin a retreat southward. It is the opinion of almost all Arctic explorers that he did so. The loss of the Proteus last year and the consequent failure to leave supplies for him at the points designated along his proposed line of retreat, has given rise to the fears for his safety. But as supplies it is believed, he would successfully make his way to the settlements. It is possible, though improbable, that he, fearing some accident like the loss of the Proteus might have brought with him provisions from Lady Franklin Bay, on the west, what provisions he may have he there until the return of the present summer. It is possible that he found some game on his journey, or that he was fortunate enough to kill bears from stray bands of Esquimax. These are simply possibilities. His camp was hundreds of miles from the nearest settlement, and the route to it difficult and dangerous. One thing in his favor was that he knew the geography of the region. It will probably be a couple of months before any definite information of will be received from the party. Meanwhile his friends are hopeful that they escaped the doom which so many fear did befall the brave officer and his men.

A Misunderstanding.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—The charge made by Mail Contractor Colgrove before the Springer committee on Saturday that Mr. Ker, of counsel in the star route cases, offered to drop Colgrove's case for a consideration of $5,000, Mr. Colgrove now says was a misunderstanding: that Mr. Key declares what he did say was that Mr. Ker insisted to him that Colgrove ought to be compelled to refund the money he had received from the government. Mr. Key was summoned before the committee, but failed to put in an appearance. Mr. Ker says he was not asked to appear as a witness, and might have intimated to his counsel, that by appearing as a witness for the government he could save trouble.

The North Carolina Exposition.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—The committee of the North Carolina state exposition, consisting of Governor Jarvis, Lieutenant Gov. H. S. Burgwyne and John Nichols, with Senators Ransom and Vance, waited upon President Arthur this morning to invite him to visit the grounds of the exposition at Raleigh next October. The president was not able to give a definite answer, which he will do in a few days, but said he would try to do so. The same committee waited upon Senator Hawley, who was requested to make the opening address of the occasion. The request was accepted and agreed to be on hand October 1.

The Work to be Done.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—At a Republican senatorial caucus last night it was decided to proceed with the consideration of measures now on the calendar, and the order is as follows. First, Mexican pension bill; second, appropriation bills which may be ready: third, interstate commerce bill; fourth, land grant forfeiture bill; fifth, postal telegraph bill; sixth, District Columbia railroad bills.

The question of final adjournment was not discussed, but in the opinion of senators in attendance the time of adjournment can be reached previous to the date fixed for the Democratic convention.

More to Come.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Treasurer Wyman has received the first installment of one and two dollar notes, the printing of which has been going on for some time past at the engraving and printing. The amount received is small and will not satisfy demands already made. It is expected that about $2,500,000 will be ready for issue by the end of the week.

Washington Items.

The president will lay the Fitz-John Porter bill before the cabinet to-day.

The opinion is quite general at the capital that if members are not disposed the present session can be adjourned without difficulty July 5.

The conference committee on the bill to create a bureau of labor statistics will report in favor of placing the appointment of clerks in the hands of the secretary of the interior.

The court of inquiry, convened to investigate frauds in the navy department, met and began the investigation with closed doors. Testimony will be taken with open doors.

The senate public lands committee has decided to report in favor of declaring the forfeiture of the land grant to the Memphis, Houston & New Orleans, and Ontonagon and Brule River railroads in Michigan.

CONDENSED NEWS.

The powder mills at Pontremoli, Italy, exploded on Sunday. Thirty persons were killed.

Brother Moroney, a promising member of the order of Oblate fathers, was drowned at the head of the Lachine rapids on Sunday afternoon.

MM. Pashkoff and Baronikoff, chiefs of the Evangelical brotherhood, have been expelled from Russia, and their books, tracts, and pamphlets destroyed.

Twenty-five Mormon missionaries, with 501 converts, 401 Scandinavian, and 100 English, arrived in New York by the steamer Lessing, and left immediately for Salt Lake City.

Capt. Drake, of the schooner A. V. Drake, at Philadelphia from Cardenas, reports that his vessel was fired upon by a Spanish gunboat, while he was entering the Cardenas harbor.

A rumor reached Wall street to the effect that ex-Judge Hilton, of New York, of the late firm of A. T. Stewart & Co., had failed. Mr. Hilton was seen at his office, but refused to speak in regard to the rumor, saying that he had no information for the press.

THE CLIMAX OF INACCURACY.

Innumerable Blunders and False Reports of Important Events.

CHICAGO, June 24.—The Detroit Times heads its editorial columns to-day as follows: "The representatives of Associated Press has made innumerable blunders and false reports of important events in times past, but the climax of its inaccuracy was attained in its account of the American, or Anti-Masonic convention held at Chicago. The Times of Saturday told the true story of the nominating session of the convention as reported by the wide-awake and trustworthy United Press, and in its report we re-chronicled the nomination of Samuel C. Pomeroy for president. The Free Press and Post and Tribune of Saturday morning printed the false and ridiculous report furnished by the Associated Press, and in it was the following statement concerning the choice of a presidential candidate: 'The convention then proceeded to nomination for President of the United States. S. C. Pomeroy, of Kansas, named by St. John, and the Rev. J. Blanchard, of Illinois, was named. Of seventy-seven votes cast St. John received seventy-two, and his nomination was made unanimous.'

"What reliance can be placed in the Associated Press humbug after such a monumental and asinine blunder as the misstatement of the nomination for president by a national convention?"

EXTRAORDINARY PRECAUTIONS

To Secure the Safety of Queen Victoria and Princess Beatrice.

LONDON, June 24.—The prevalence of the dynamite scare is again demonstrated by the extraordinary precautions which have been ordered to secure the safety of Queen Victoria and Princess Beatrice in the approaching journey from Balmoral to Windsor castle. The special train in which her majesty is to travel will be preceded throughout the journey by a pilot engine to see that the track is free from obstructions, and to remove any that may be placed upon it. During the progress of the journey the public will be rigidly excluded from all the stations along the line, and no platforms will be permitted at any of the railway crossings, especially in the cities. All trains going in the direction opposite to that of the queen's will come to a full stop on the approach of the royal train, and will remain stationary until that train has passed, to avoid the possibility of a collision. In order to make the clearing of the stations and the interruption of traffic as little burdensome to the public as possible, the queen will make the journey at night, arriving at Windsor castle in time for an early breakfast.

A REQUIEM SUNG BY BIRDS.

Suicide of a Newark Man in Presence of His Songsters.

NEWARK, June 24.—A bird-fancier named John Ackerman committed suicide at his home on St. Charles street. Ackerman was well known in the city. In his business he showed a kind disposition and made pets of his birds, but he was a terror to his family and neighborhood. The household consisted of three daughters and one son, all grown up. Just previous to his death he threatened to murder his wife and daughters, and rushed madly at him with an open razor. The police were called in and arrested the frenzied bird-fancier.

"Let me go into my room," said he to the police, "for my coat and hat."

No sooner was the door closed behind him than a dull thud was heard. The police broke open the door, and Ackerman lay dead on the floor with his throat cut. The walls of the room were hung with cages of singing birds, and the feathered songsters were rivaling each other in chanting the dead man's requiem. Ackerman was a native of Baden-Baden, and had been in this country about seventeen years. He was a morose, hard-featured, ill-tempered man, 50 years old, and appeared to have little affection for any one but his birds.

An Oil Refinery Burned.

FRANKLIN, Pa., June 24.—The oil refinery of Geo. Allen & Son was entirely destroyed by fire yesterday morning. The fire was caused by an explosion in the boiler room, and spread rapidly to the adjoining tanks and buildings, which were speedily consumed. Loss, $15,000; insurance small. The track of the New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio railroad for a distance of 100 yards was entirely destroyed. All trains are transferring their passengers. Hugh Carr, superintendent of the refinery, had a very narrow escape from death by being enveloped in the flames.

Two Murders Within Two Days.

PORTSMOUTH, O., June 24.—As the steamer Minnie Bay arrived at Portsmouth with a crowd of excursionists, a dispute arose between Richard Duckworth, of Syracuse, and George Fox, colored, of Huntington. Duckworth crushed Fox's skull with a beer bottle. Duckworth is in jail and Fox is dead. This is Scioto county's second murder within two days.

1,200 Plumbers Locked Out.

NEW YORK, June 24.—The master plumbers say that 1,200 men have already been locked out. This is about 90 per cent. of the Journeymen Plumbers' Union. The journeymen plumbers, however, assert that not more than 400 men have been locked out. The bosses intend to advertise for out-of-plumbers.

The Oil Excitement.

TITUSVILLE, June 24.—The oil market yesterday was in a very excited state and a large business was done. New York bought heavily. A slight reaction is looked for to-day, but it seems that prices have certainly touched bottom. The market opened at 55. Highest 60, lowest 54½, closed 59¾.

He Wanted a Bicycle.

BOSTON, June 24.—Willie B. Steward, 14 years of age, messenger in the post office, was held in $2,000 on charge of embezzling sums of money from New England returns to the postmaster at Boston. He spent part of the money for a bicycle, and gave the balance to his Sunday school teacher.

The Philadelphians Lead.

LEICESTER, England, June 24.—In the 25-to-1 game the Philadelphia team scored 50 runs in the first innings. The Leicester team scored 37 in their first inning, and in the second 51 with four wickets down.

Struck by Lightning.

AKRON, O., June 24.—Lightning killed Jacob Festlinger, aged 30, in the storm at Rhodes, six miles east of here. At Seiberling, near Magnolia, an unknown man was also killed by lightning.

PHILADELPHIANS.

A Few Men who are Widely and Favorably Known.

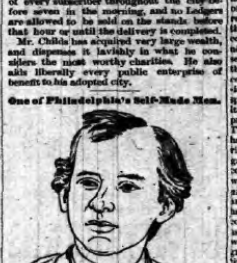
Prominent Bishops and Editors—A Congressman, a Surgeon and a Merchant from the City of Brotherly Love.

The Proprietor of the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

GEORGE W. CHILDS.

Philadelphia's acknowledged host for the reception and entertainment of its distinguished literary, political, scientific visitors, both native and foreign, is Mr. George Washington Childs, and his round genial face indicates his charitable and hospitable disposition. Mr. Childs is a native of Baltimore, where he was born May 12, 1820. He received a common school education and afterwards served before the mast in the United States navy. The life not suiting him he entered the store of a Quaker bookseller in Philadelphia, after four years he was enabled through patient and close study, to open a small store for himself, and subsequently to enter partnership with G. Peterson, the well known publisher. He was also for a time a silent partner in the firm of J. B. Lippincott & Co. In 1863 his desire to dabble in journalism caused him to start The American Literary Gazette, which he afterwards sold to purchase The Public Ledger in 1864. This paper had been published at a loss, but under his management it has reached such a success as to become one of the most valuable newspaper properties in the country. Mr. Childs assumed a certain style in his paper that has rendered it famous, notably the attention paid to literary notices. Then he has established a delivery system which insures the placing of the paper in the hands of every subscriber throughout the city before seven in the morning, and no Ledgers are allowed to be sold on the stands before that hour or until the delivery is completed. Mr. Childs has acquired very large wealth, and dispenses it lavishly in what he considers the most worthy charities. He also aids liberally every public enterprise of benefit to his adopted city.

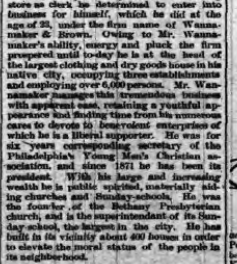
One of Philadelphia's Self-Made Men.



JOHN WANAMAKER

Was born in 1837, the son of a brickmaker in moderate circumstances. He received but an ordinary public school education. After spending a few years in a clothing store as clerk he determined to enter into business for himself, which he did at the age of 23, under the firm name of Wanamaker & Brown. Owing to Mr. Wanamaker's ability, energy and pluck the firm prospered until to-day he is at the head of the largest clothing and dry goods house in his native city, occupying three establishments and employing over 1,000 people. Mr. Wanamaker manages this tremendous business with apparent ease, retaining a youthful appearance and finding from his enormous cares to devote to benevolent enterprises of which he is a liberal supporter. He was for six years corresponding secretary of the Philadelphia Young Men's Christian association, and since 1871 he has been its president. With his large and increasing wealth he is public spirited, liberally aiding churches and Sunday-schools. He was the founder of the Bethany Presbyterian church, and is the superintendent of its Sunday school, the largest in the city. He has built in its vicinity about 400 houses in order to elevate the moral status of the people in its neighborhood.

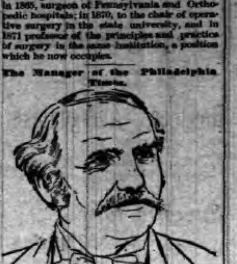
A Leading Philadelphia Surgeon.



DR. D. HAYES AGNEW.

Dr. Agnew's name was brought prominently before the people after the shooting of President Garfield in 1881. He was the first of the consulting surgeons called to the White House, and his opinion of the case was watched for eagerly each day. His long study of the profession as professor of the principles and practice of surgery, besides an extensive private practice, had gained for him an experience which the public had hoped would enable him to save the President's life. Dr. Agnew was himself the son of a physician, of Lancaster county, Pa., where he was born in 1818. Receiving in early life his father's footsteps, he adopted the best of educational advantages, graduated as a physician (M. D.) at Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, in 1839, and received the degree of A. M. from the University of Pennsylvania. Adopting the profession of surgery he for a country town but removed to Philadelphia, and was chosen lecturer in the Philadelphia school of anatomy. At the same time he established a private school of operative surgery. In 1854 he was elected professor of the Philadelphia hospital and founded the Pathological museum. He had since been honored by being in 1863 appointed demonstrator of anatomy and lecturer on clinical surgery in the University of Pennsylvania; also surgeon of Will's Ophthalmic hospital; in 1865, surgeon of Pennsylvania and Orthopedic hospitals; in 1870, to the chair of operative surgery in the state university, and in 1871 professor of the principles and practice of surgery in the same institution, a position which he now occupies.

The Manager of the Philadelphia Times.



ALEXANDER KELLEY MCCLURE.

Col. McClure is of Scotch-Irish stock, born in Perry county, among the mountains of Pennsylvania, he came into existence in 1828 and was apprenticed to a tanner at the age of 15. On account of his good address and the interest he even then took in politics, he was appointed an commissioner of the census of 1850. Before he was 19 years old he had tried his hand at the printing business, and began the publication of The Juniata Sentinel. In 1852 he purchased The Franklin Repository, printed at Chambersburg, Pa., the town from which John Brown launched his little band against Virginia. Mr. McClure saw the battle of Antietam fought in the vicinity, watching it from a mountain with pencil in hand. In 1857 he was elected a member of the legislature, and a year later appointed superintendent of public printing, besides being admitted to the bar. In 1860 he was elected to the state senate. In 1861 he was appointed assistant adjutant-general of the United States army. In 1864 he was re-elected to the assembly, and in 1873 to the state senate. In 1875, at the head of a company, he purchased the Age, a declining newspaper property for $30,000, in order to secure its news franchise, and commenced the publication of The Daily Times. Its success may be measured by the fact that besides the purchase of The Age $12,000 was spent to start The Times and nothing since—it has paid its way and now represents a property worth $300,000. The building of The Times on Chesnut street is one of the most handsome structures in that street, the editorial rooms being models of comfort and elegance, and perhaps the only ones in the country having hot and bath rooms attached where the editorial force on election nights and during exciting times can sleep and be refreshed. Col. McClure is one of the handsomest men of the profession in the country. He is tall, and his figure is as erect as an Indian's and well proportioned. He was aggressive in politics, and believes in aggression in a newspaper. He believes the time has gone by when people want to know what has passed, they are decidedly more interested in what is going to be. "No man," he says, "was ever the failure who without being aggressive. If he would mould the future he must lead off."

A Leading Protectionist.

HON. WILLIAM DARRAGH KELLEY.

With the single exception of the Hon. Samuel J. Randall, the only congressman from Pennsylvania with a reputation that reaches beyond the state is the Hon. William D. Kelley. Few people in Pennsylvania, and fewer still outside of it, know him by that name. Here, where he is best known and appreciated, he is affectionately called "Bill" Kelley, and elsewhere he is honored with the obriquet of "Pig-Iron" Kelley, a designation of which he is justly proud.

Mr. Kelley was born in Philadelphia, April 1, 1814. His father died when he was young, so that he was compelled to leave school when eleven years old and strive to help support his mother and three other children besides himself that she had to care for. He commenced work as an errand boy and afterward apprenticed himself in a jewelry house, mastering the trade at 20. In 1835 he worked as a journeyman in Boston. Later he returned to Philadelphia, studied law, was admitted to the bar in 1841, and finally rose to the office of prosecutor in the court of common pleas in Philadelphia. In 1846 Governor Shark appointed him a judge, which office he held two years. In 1860 he was elected to congress and has since been continuously re-elected, ranking as the ablest advocate of protection in the nation's councils.

"Old Pig Iron" has for more than a year been preparing a great speech on the subject of the tariff; its effect upon American workmen as compared with labor in Europe, and it was the intention of Judge Kelley to have made the greatest effort of his life by delivering the speech on the day the Morrison bill was defeated; but his broken down health prevented his making that effort, and in consequence his friends have become alarmed, and out of kind considerations for the human protectionists they are planning to send him as minister to Mexico or Spain, or some other country where the climate is congenial.

EDSALL'S EXTRA!

We take pleasure in making the announcement to the citizens of Plainfield and vicinity, that we have just received a full line of one of the BEST and MOST reliable brands of

BLACK SILKS

Imported. It is of the well-known manufacture that was formerly imported by A. T. Stewart & Co., and sold in their retail department for many years, and has stood the most trying test and proved its unquestionable excellence to thousands who have worn it and can testify of its real worth and beauty.

It is still retailed by the successors of the old Stewart house, and by a special arrangement with the Importing Department we are enabled to offer it at precisely the same figures as their retail department, viz:

Black Silk
No. 2006 at $1.50
No. 2007 at 1.75
No. 2008 at 2.00
No. 2009 at 2.25

Edsall's.

They are by far the handsomest goods we have ever handled, and possess the most intrinsic value, and the fact that we can sell goods which have had such an experience as these at exactly the same prices as one of the largest and most popular houses in New York ought to be a sufficient inducement for Ladies to give Home trade the preference.

Black
GROS GRAIN
Silk
AT EDSALL'S

Besides the above mentioned silks we have lower prices as follows:

Blk. Silk at $1.00.
Blk. Silk at $1.25.
Blk. Silk at $1.40.

The price is guaranteed to be as LOW as any New York House, and the texture and finish of the goods cannot be excelled. All of our departments are full of seasonable goods and the prices were never LOWER.

NOTICE.

Remember to the extent of the goods we keep, you can do just as well in price and quality to purchase here and thereby encourage —Dixon's banana ice cream is in great demand.

—A new broom sweeps clean." Is it to be the same with the new Chief of Police? It looks so.

—There will be eight speakers at the High School commencement to-morrow evening, and thirteen graduates.

—Butler, the druggist, informs us that since his column advertisement in THE NEWS his business has more than doubled.

—Ex-Mayor Job Male is having a large building erected in Jersey City, to cost about as much as the Job Male Library and Art Museum in this city.

—Night before last boys entered the model garden of Mr. R. Freeman, greatly damaging several highly prized plants. Efforts are being made to ascertain the perpetrators and secure their arrest for malicious mischief.

—Complaints are made that on Grove Street near the westerly side of the bridge, there is an abrupt break of about six feet, which on a dark night, is likely to prove a dangerous trap. It requires a fence. Several citizens have barely escaped falling into it.

—Raw onions are used by a young man in this city to cure himself of dyspepsia, with good results. He says his mother suffered terribly for years from dyspepsia and cured herself within a week by the daily use of raw onions at each meal. This will not be a popular remedy with young ladies on beau nights. Some enterprising druggist may immortalize himself and profit by availing himself of this hint. A rose by any other name will smell as sweet," but an onion —phew!

Enterprise.

THE NEWS claimed, some two weeks ago, to be supplying its readers each day twenty per cent. more matter than either of its weekly neighbors. As this could not be denied, they remained silent. Since then, however, the Constitutionalist has taken to issuing cheap supplements, sheets printed in New York at about one dollar per thousand. Copies of the Constitutionalist, which have been sent in exchange to this office, have not contained these supplements, whether this has been intentional or otherwise we know not, but it seems at least singular. This faint spark of enterprise, however, we cannot permit to pass unnoticed, but think it would be more the thing if our neighbor would give us news, instead of taking its readers for a pack of idiots by palming off such stuff for news, or would put more life into its columns, instead of rehashing what had originally appeared in THE NEWS sometimes nearly a week previous, and then despatching one hundred and fifty per cent. of the rehash more than THE NEWS asked for the same news fresh and original.

If we had taken the people of Plainfield for such idiots the NEWS would have been a failure. Instead, we conclude from mere observation, that it is the most advanced city of its size in the State. We started what our contemporaries say is the best local daily newspaper in the State, and the result is an unparalelled success. Enterprise costs, but it pays. Our weekly neighbors will require more salt in the gizzard, if they cannot digest the waste of this community any better.

In our personals from day to day may be found most interesting matters which our weekly neighbors might continue to copy to advantage, instead of stale and silly stories in New York patent sheets, by penny-a-liners.

Last Night's Fire.

As the Fire Board had about finished their arduous labors in the Council Chamber last evening, the time being 10.15, the fire alarm called the firemen from the lobby to their duty at the scene of the fire. The fire proved to be a small barn or shed on Raymond avenue in the extreme northern part of the fire limits. Engines 1 and 2 went to the fire and were met there by the chemical engine and Hook and Ladder Company of South Plains. Plainfield's Hook and Ladder went as far as Somerset's place on Front street, and concluded to rest, which was wise considering that they had no horses. The damage by the fire amounted to about fifteen dollars, while the cost to put the fire out amounted to four or five times that sum.

The Cadmus Fire.

To the Editor of THE NEWS.

It has been intimated that the employes of Cadmus' livery stable feel a little sore from the neglect on the part of the proprietor to properly compensate them for services rendered on the morning of the fire. It was a dangerous task to liberate the few horses which were owned, and the proprietor should show his appreciation in the right way.

ONE OF THEM.

We understand that the above communication is incorrect. The parties referred to were not employes it is said but voluntarily assisted in saving property belonging to Mr. Cadmus as far as possible. No doubt Mr. Cadmus would gladly satisfy them, if they should make themselves known to him.

Developments from a Disorderly House Case.

In the ninth easterly portion of Plainfield last Saturday evening a married woman, suspecting everything was not right in the house of a neighbor, late at night peeped through a window and saw enough to confirm her worst suspicions. Another woman and her husband was called upon to take a peep, and confirm the allegations of the first woman, who with them proposed to take steps to drive the disreputable characters out of the neighborhood. One of the persons alleged to have been discovered, in flagrante delicto, in the house referred to, was a recently appointed policeman, a married man.

The matter was reported to Chief of Police Dodd, who immediately conferred with the City Attorney, upon whose advice the chief filed a complaint before City Judge Good on Monday against one Margaret Bunworth for keeping a disorderly house. The place in question is on East Third street, near what is known as the "Cow Ferry." The complaint alleges that the policeman was at the house as before stated. By order of the court Special Officer Flanigan went to the place, and attempted to arrest the woman. Peter Schneiderwind and Anna Fox endeavored to prevent the arresting people, and offered resistance to the officer. The woman was, however, brought to jail, and made a clean confession of the whole business. Sentence was suspended until Friday morning at ten o'clock.

Special Officer Flanigan yesterday morning filed complaints against Peter Schneiderwind and Anna Fox for violating a city ordinance in resisting an officer. Schneiderwind could not be found, but Anna Fox was arrested. The court fined her $5, which amount was paid by the policeman referred to in the complaint against Margaret Bunworth.

The officer should be expelled from the force at once, if the allegations in the complaint referred to are true.

The policeman emphatically denies the charge so far as connecting him with the case complained of is concerned; he says that he was in the house of ill repute all night. He explains it by saying that a poor girl met him on the street and asked him if he could tell her where she could find shelter, and that he took her to the house referred to, and kept guard that it was of ill repute. Of course this is such a plausible story that we take it all in. We presume the policeman's further explanation is that he became so weary after his humane task that he lingered at the house all night, of course not knowing that it was of ill repute. What innocent people these Plainfield policemen must be, if this is a specimen, and what a specimen of a policeman this one is by his own statement—a supposed protector of virtue from vice consenting to her ruin a poor girl afraid of shelter.

Chief of Police Dodd is investigating the matter. We understand that the policeman makes threats of countercharges against the chief by way of intimidation. But every respectable citizen in this community knows Chief Dodd and encourages him to do his duty and, if the facts are as alleged, make such an example of the policeman referred to as will make him wish he had never been born. He should be made to suffer the severest penalties of the law.

After the above report was written a policeman in company with an individual of ice proportions, whom we were afterward informed was the Schneiderwind, whom the police could not find to answer to the warrant above referred to, called upon the editor of THE NEWS. The policeman, with his club under his arm, strutted into our office with the air of a town bully, demanding to know what we were about to publish about him. In answer to our inquiry as to who he was, he informed us that his name was Kelly, and in some way connected himself with the foregoing case, at the same time making some indefinite threats by way of intimidation. We coolly informed him that we proposed to publish what was right, that he and a half dozen more like him could not intimidate us from doing so; still further more that it was none of his business. We presume from the policeman's bulldozing manner that he came prepared to do terrible things, but he left in a hurry, his face red with wrath or something else, and as he descended the stairs said in a way to "bust this paper." That settles it. The policeman with a red face a slim moustache and a big club says he is going to do the business, provided we do our duty by the public. "With malice toward none and charity to all" we propose to do our duty all the same, and give the news without fear or favor.

Since the foregoing was written Christian people believing that the girl Anna is not a naturally bad girl and can be saved from further disgracing herself, and perhaps be rescued entirely from the error of her ways, have appealed to us to omit an account of this antecedents which, if true, are referred hereto, as an instructive lesson. We omit it in the belief of her Christian friends that it will do some good. If her name had not got into public records, we would have omitted it altogether, if, any good could be attained thereby, as we don't take any stock in that style of morality that condemns the woman and permits the man, the libertine who causes her downfall, to go Scot free.

FIRE BOARD MEETING.

A Number of Bills Paid.—Preparations Made for the Fourth.

The Fire Board met in adjourned meeting last evening in the Council Chamber. All the members were present.

The opinion of the Board's counsel, Wm. R. Mazon, on the points submitted to him at the last meeting were:

1. That the Board had no authority to pay any officer of the Board for services done, unless such pay had been authorized by a vote of the people.

2. That firemen were exempt from taxes to the amount of $3, provided that their membership dated back to the time of the assessment of the taxes.

3. That the Board had a right to offer rewards for the apprehension and conviction of incendiaries.

Mr. Morris differed from the third decision.

The bill of T. J. Gillies, $10, for services as Secretary of the Board on three years, was ordered returned with the statement that the Board had no authority to pay the same.

A communication from the Chief asking for certain supplies and repairs, and suggesting arrangements for the Fourth of July was received. The supply and repair part of the communication was referred to the committee. The president, treasurer and the chairman of the Supply Committee were appointed a committee to confer with the chief in regard to the proper arrangements for the Fourth of July.

Mr. Morris gave notice of an amendment to the by-laws which he intended offering at the next meeting.

The committee on the examination of the treasurer's books reported the books to be correct.

A resolution was passed authorizing the issuing of bonds to renew certain bonds falling due.

The meeting then adjourned.

In the Courts.

The case of Mahaffy vs. Guttman, an action for debt, came to trial yesterday afternoon before Justice Nash and a jury composed of J. J. Marshall, William Roxbury, George W. Cole, George F. Smith, Joel Heden, John M. Jackson. The case was based on a contract made by Guttman with Mahaffy for removing certain goods from New York to this city. The defense was that the Guttman mentioned in the complaint did not make the contract. The plaintiff had seven witnesses, and the defendant two. The jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff for $48 and costs. Jackson and Coddington for the plaintiff; George P. Suydam for the defendant.

Yesterday before Justice Nash, the cases of S. J. Jones vs. I. Brouwer and J. Pike, an action for debt, and D. M. Stiger, H. W. Williams, and O. M. Stiger vs. I. Brouwer and J. Pike, a similar action, were dismissed.

To Our Friends.

The Reform Club of Plainfield having realized generous cash contributions sufficient to pay for and improve title to the proper ty formerly known as the Second Baptist Church, corner of Second street and Central avenue, this city, and funds being likewise available, chiefly through the noble exertions of the Christian Temperance Union, to furnish and equip the purchased building when properly altered and repaired for the practical use of the Club, respectfully intends to urgently appeal to the liberality and kindly feelings of the citizens of Plainfield and vicinity for additional means to fully complete such needful alterations and repairs.

The good work already accomplished by the Reform Club, under the approving smile of Divine Providence and the still greater work awaiting future efforts, reasonably commend it to the favorable consideration and support of every friend of humanity.

The pecuniary demands made upon the public for various laudable objects, causes the writer to feel a part of the Club to solicit further aid, but valuing as its members do the all important Temperance question above all others, they unreservedly establish, emboldens them to thus ask and induces them to believe, that early and substantial encouragement will follow the asking.

Donations to the aforesaid purpose to the benefit individual ability and inclination, will be thankfully received and acknowledged by the officers of the Club, or other members of its Executive or Collection Committees, the names of whom are hereunto subscribed.

PLAINFIELD'S LITERARY PEOPLE.

To the long continued pleasure and entertainment of noted musical talents, so well known in our community, are to be added this season the literary element in the gathering together, as it were, of a large number of the best writers of our day—right in our very midst. What a thrill of pleasure will arise in the hearts of the young folks, when informed that the editress of the "St. Nicholas" will actually be in Plainfield this Summer, and can be gazed at with all the love and reverence of which their tender minds are capable; yes, indeed! she is really coming to take note of all our surroundings, obtain the rest and quiet which she so much needs, and with her quick penetrating vision, sharpen and round the points of observation among ets, culling many bright leaflets and beautiful golden rods of truth and fancy to weave into chains of sweet rhyme and story to be enjoyed during the Winter by the little ones throughout the land; it is a great honor to have such a noble, cultured lady as Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge among us; no woman in the literary world stands higher; none other labors more for the true entertainment and instruction of children; and none other can attain to more perfect politeness and charm of manner and conversation. We of the smaller type of writers, must forever sit reverently and worshipful at her feet, striving to imitate her goodness, zeal and industry, and, raise our feeble voices in praise to her wonderful achievements. The "St. Nicholas," with its fascinating illustrations and strikingly original stories, never fail to delight and interest all the young people, even parents are diverted from their cares while reading the new and sparkling bits of experience gathered from the lives of little ones all over the world. I remember, that when a child, there were no such beautiful picture books for the children. Alas, no! The shorter catechism, was our "story book," illustrated by the rod when the stories became wearisome and distasteful, and now, when youth, with its doleful lessons are well nigh forgotten, a single number of the "St. Nicholas" will awaken a real feeling of childish pleasure, (for we are all children of a larger growth,) calling forth the ready laughter, or the tears of sympathy from every page, which, with its beautiful illustrations, impart a deeper tenderness for the little ones.

There are other great literary lights to sojourn with us this Summer—Alice Harte, Miss Celia Gardner, Oscar Fay Adams, Dr. Abram Coles, Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis—the might and the mirth of literature, finds its completeness in this galaxy of writers, and Plainfield's society ought to glow and brighten under the magic influence of such varied mental "feasts of reason and flow of soul"—like the green lawns in the twilight become all aglow with the beautiful scintillations of the fireflies.

In referring to the musical abilities in our city, little need be written, for the whole community are well acquainted with the fame of Clark W. Evans, Dorsey Higg, Robert W. Anderson, Mr. Harry Lindsley, Mrs. J. K. Myers and others, fully as well-known and admired, and added to all this attractive company are the noted artists in our midst—Mr. Julian Scott, Mr. Wm. Clem, Miss Newhall, Miss Ellen Thorn and Miss G. Utter. These names already adorn the temple of fame, and their works will ere long decorate the walls of the fine art gallery now being erected in this city, where all who love art, in all its beautiful varieties, may find free opportunity for its gratification. By the bye, I see by the journals of neighboring towns, contiguous to our own, great excitement and envy rages in regard to that Art Gallery which Mr. Job Male is building for us; and they are looking hungerly at each rich man in their different towns, and speak in fervent terms of praise of Plainfield's "Peter Cooper," giving unmistakable hints, to "go thou and do likewise" for their edification and fame. However, they are all far behind this locality in the march of progress and expansion.

CRESCENT AVENUE.

SELECTING DELEGATES

Democratic Conventions in Missouri, North Carolina and Ohio.

Preparing for Chicago—The Kelly-Butler Combination — Mexican Opposition to Blaine — The Bay State Republicans.

COLUMBUS, O., June 25.—The Democratic convention, which meets here to-day promises to be one of the most important held since the war, and the heavy duties with which it is charged are gladly welcomed by sections of the leaders. The most momentous matter to be disposed of is the selection of four delegates-at-large to Chicago who will reflect the sentiment of the state as voted by the Democracy in convention assembled. The city is full of politicians and delegates arranging for the week of the day. Neither Thurman nor Pendleton are likely to any part in the convention work. The friends of Payne and Hoadly have captured the convention, and the delegates to Chicago representing the various districts will be instructed with a view to the presentation of a solid front for either one or the other.

A number of combinations and tickets have been canvassed by the delegates. The names most prominently mentioned are those of John R. McLean, Gen. George W. Morgan, Judge Pugh, of Cincinnati; Warwick, all of whom are warm friends of Senator Payne. Adjt.-Gen. Finley, Dan McConville, jr., and T. E. Powell are named as candidates for Governor. Hoadly will be there over in attendance on a convention in this city. The contest for the governorship is between Payne and Hoadly. Payne, a present member of congress from this Grandson district, and Capt. Octavius Coke, of this city. The indications point strongly to the nomination of Payne. The platform will be man, of New Hanover, will be nominated for lieutenant-governor, and W. L. Saunders will be recommended for secretary of state. The other nominations will be hotly contested. The general sentiment is for Cleveland for president. All the district delegates and the state at large will be instructed for him. No instructions will be passed, and unless the situation is changed at Chicago the vote of this state will be solid for Cleveland.

Missouri for Cleveland.

ST. LOUIS, June 25.—The Democratic convention which met at the Standard theater, to nominate four delegates-at-large to the national convention, adjourned at 4:30, after two days' session. Col. D. P. Day, chairman of the state committee, and Dr. Morrison Munford, editor of the Kansas City Times, had been chosen as the nominees. These two are certain of election, and it is practically conceded Cleveland will be the third. The three named are for Cleveland as their first choice in case he is not accepted over the head of the nation, and with twenty-five other district delegates known to be for that candidate this will secure Cleveland twenty-eight out of the delegation of fifteen. The convention will reconvene to finish its work at 9 o'clock to-day.

The Opposition to Cleveland.

PHILADELPHIA, June 25.—A dispatch from Washington to The Telegraph says that the opposition to Cleveland has developed within a day or two in New York has given him a setback there. All he is wanted for or thought of as a candidate is the ability to carry New York. That, it now appears, is coming to local experts, this is very doubtful, he becomes thereby ineligible. Reports come here to the effect that he will be antagonized by labor organizations as well as by Tammany, and that any gain he may secure through Republican support will be more than counterbalanced by Democratic defection. This decline in Cleveland's star throws the Democrats into a sort of panic. They had rather taken it for granted that Cleveland was the appointed one and are now quite upset. Some are beginning to think that Tilden must be run after all, and that he will accept the nomination if it is forced upon him. There is no question in entertaining such a theory, and some explain his refusal to run for the governorship on that ground.

Urging Randall's Nomination.

PHILADELPHIA, June 25.—The Evening Bulletin says: Hon. S. J. Milton Brown, of Huntingdon, who presided over the state convention at Allentown, in April, who is pronounced in his preference of Randall, was called upon by several prominent Democrats, in speaking of Mr. Randall, he said:

"If Randall is nominated Pennsylvania will be swept by a tidal wave of support by the public with a greater sense of devotion than Randall. He would be unexceptionally strong in those states where the Democrats are mostly need strengthening, New York, Connecticut and New Jersey. He has been in Congress twenty-five years, and in that time has never been charged with corruption of a dollar, except what came to him honestly as his salary.

"The interests of the country, both industrial and manufacturing, could not be more substantially gratified in the nomination of a man like Randall, whether he was elevated by either one party or the other. I have often heard it said in congress that Randall held more power as a leader in his little finger than any other congressman from Pennsylvania in the full political opposite of Blaine, his nomination would emphasize the antagonism against that Republicanism which Blaine typifies as an intensely selfish one, and with two brilliant men—they both went into congress together, and the only difference in them to-day is that one is poor and the other a millionaire, both equally distinguished for their livelihood the legal profession."

Mr. Brown repudiates the idea of Tilden going before the Chicago convention.

Preparing For Chicago.

NEW YORK, June 25.—The preparations for the departure of the Democratic delegations from this city to Chicago are large. The Irving hall committee on transportation met at 12 o'clock, and directed Secretary Bowers to call a meeting of the executive committee on Friday evening to hear reports from the several districts and make final preparations for the journey to Chicago. A special train of sleeping coaches and one baggage car has been chartered on the Erie railroad. The number of delegates and others will be 240. The train will start from Jersey City at 5:30 o'clock on Saturday morning, July 5, and is expected to reach Chicago between 4 and 5 o'clock on Sunday afternoon. All Irving hall delegates will be joined by Lieut.-Gov. Hill and his delegation, who will be the guests of Irving hall at Chicago. Rooms have been engaged for the entire party at the Leland house.

The County committee on transportation held a brief conference and will meet again to complete the arrangements. Their special train will leave at 10 o'clock on Saturday morning, July 5, on the West Shore road, and will convey about five hundred members.

The Tammany transportation committee met last evening in the Wigwam. Their special train will leave the New York Central depot on the same morning as those of the other delegations.

The Kelly-Butler Combination.

PHILADELPHIA, June 25.—The Evening Telegraph says: "A gentleman who has conversed with Gen. Butler, now in Washington, reports that he is of the opinion that Cleveland cannot be nominated at Chicago, because John Kelly will successfully oppose his nomination. Gen. Butler, according to this gentleman, has stated recently in private that Mr. Kelly in some arrangements in reference to the New York state convention, and professes to know that Mr. Kelly's demand for recognition will be made the conditions which Mr. Kelly supposed would be rejected. According to Gen. Butler, Mr. Kelly was both surprised and disappointed at the acquiescence which followed, in spite of the fact that all requests were granted he will still do his best to defeat Mr. Cleveland in convention, and that his opposition if he can muster a majority in convention. It would seem if all this is true, that Mr. Kelly and Gen. Butler are in a combined opposition to Mr. Cleveland, which may hurt the governor's prospects as much as those gentlemen possibly imagine."

Mexican Opposition to Blaine.

GALVESTON, TEX., June 24.—Numerous dispatches from Mexico during the past two weeks have indicated in a degree the disastrous effect upon Mexico of the possible nomination of Mr. Blaine. The Voce del Espagne, one of the most influential local journals in the republic, issued from the City of Mexico, editorially upon the subject. In the event of the election of Mr. Blaine involves a threat to the Latin race in America; and particularly to Mexico. Mr. Blaine is the author of the chisholic and an ultra Monroeist; that it is not long since he, in union with Don Rufino Barrios, conspired against our country. His election would be a menace to the peace of our country from an international conflict, and to-day the railroad which connects us with the great republic is more than ever a danger signal to the commercial world. It will fall to the lot of Mexico to be the theatre of painful events, and very soon we will repent the railway concession given to citizens of the United States, which will be made use of to serve as chains with which the slavery of our people will be consummated. Every Mexican should be a soldier and ready to defend his nationality. We should not lose a moment in preparing to defend our dearest and most legitimate interest."

What Gov. Cleveland's Partner Says.

NEW YORK, June 25.—Mr. George J. Sicard, the law partner of Gov. Cleveland in this city, was asked this morning by a reporter unbounded confidence in Gov. Cleveland. Mr. Sicard says that Cleveland is a man of marked ability and integrity of character. "With Gov. Cleveland," said Mr. Sicard, "each day has its duty. He devotes himself without reserve to business, and he never puts off the disagreeable duty for him which prevails in Western New York is unbounded. If nominated he will carry this state by a large majority. Yet Gov. Cleveland does not desire any such honor as the nomination. He does not appear to have any aspirations for the honor of being elected president."

A Boston Editor for Butler.

NEW YORK, June 25.—The star reporter of Mr. Boyle O'Reilly, the famous editor of The Boston Pilot, briefly expressed his opinion as to presidential candidates. His first choice for president is Gen. Butler. The latter, Mr. O'Reilly thinks, would carry Massachusetts and Connecticut. As to Cleveland, the post-editor very frankly declared that he was not in favor of his nomination, and that his nomination would prove to be beneficial to the party. "In fact, I believe that with him as our standard bearer," said Mr. O'Reilly, "we would meet with disaster."

Death of Gen. Ward B. Burnett, in Washington.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Gen. Ward B. Burnett, of New York, after a lingering illness, died this morning in this city. Y., and graduated at West in that war, the gold box presented by the city of New York to Gen. Jackson for distinguished military services, and bequeathed by him to the next patriotic New York city boy who should be adjudged by his countrymen to have been the most distinguished in defense of his country and our country's rights.

In 1843 he made plans and estimates for the croton water works in New York city, and in 1845 he had the plans of the Brooklyn water works. Early in life he was baptized and confirmed in the Protestant Episcopal church, and only a short time before he died he said to those about him: "My father will come for me." The remains will be taken to West Point for interment.

CRUSHED IN A STEEPLE

Fearful Scenes in the New Tower at Grace Church.

Sad Hopes Give Way, Crushing Workmen and Leading to Shower of Missiles Blocks into the Beautiful Edifice.

NEW YORK, June 25.—Residents in the vicinity of Broadway and Tenth street were alarmed at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon by a dull rumbling sound, followed by a deafening crash. It was an avalanche of stone, broken beams, large pieces of marble and other debris raining with terrific force upon the roof of the old Grace church, the scaffolding which surrounds the tower up above the mammoth buildings on the north and the late A. T. Stewart's colossal structure on the south.

Passers-by gazed up the tall spire in astonishment after the shower of falling material had ceased, and witnessed a thrilling scene which almost froze the blood to stop beating. Hanging by a projecting beam from a scaffolding around the steeple was the form of a man swaying between heaven and earth 180 feet above the surface of the street. Wedged in between the spire and a mass of beams was another form, and with every crashing of broken timbers those startled crowds shuddered and closed their eyes, as they expected the frail support to give way and see the unfortunate men hurled to a terrible death.

"Hold on. Don't let go!" they cried, and the man hanging to the beam heard their encouraging shouts and waved one hand feebly in return, while with the other he clung to his perilous support. Then slowly he crawled towards a small window a few feet under the beam and high up in the steeple. Warily he balanced himself on the foot touched the 5th, where willing hands were held out and helped him in. He was carried down a long ladder which ran inside of the spire to the street amid the cheers of the crowd. He is Joshua McKay, a derrick-rigger, aged 28, and residing at No. 240 West Thirty-fifth street.

Broadway was black with thousands of awestricken people for several blocks, gazing upwards at the man hemmed in against the side by masonry, steel guy ropes that were twisted around the unconscious form, and a mass of shattered timber. He lay groaning while his fellow-workmen, with axes and hammers, pushed and cut his belongings away. Suddenly, as best they worked hard and vigorously, and at the end of that time the load was lifted off his breast.

The unconscious man, whose breast was badly crushed and whose eyes were starting from their sockets as if the terrible danger he had passed through had rendered him mad, was Robert Simpson, a stone-mason, residing at No. 233 East Seventy-fourth street.

Meanwhile ambulances had been sent for, and there was an exciting race between those of the New York and St. Vincent Hospitals. The St. Vincents arrived first on the scene and Surgeon Kelly ascended part of the way up the long ladders to where the suffering man lay. He had just reached the roof of the church when an immense boulder, weighing over 500 pounds, came through the roof within two feet of him. Surgeon Kelly, not knowing what moment more might fall, retreated down the ladder, and Dr. Noonan, of New York hospital, had the opportunity to hasten up the spire and bandage the wounds of the injured man.

The workmen in the tower, having engaged in keeping the crowd away from the vicinity of the building, where an occasional stone continued to drop in close proximity to the Broadway pavement, were debating how to get Simpson down was a puzzling one. The life-saving corps, however, were equal to the occasion. They climbed like flies to the top of the spire and by means of their life-saving appliances. Then Simpson was carefully lowered by ropes to the roof and from there conveyed to the New York hospital, the hence he was also removed.

After the excitement had somewhat subsided a survey of the church was made, and it was found that the damage had been considerably damaged. The falling timber and heavy marble blocks, some weighing 500 pounds, had crashed through the roof and the vaulted ceiling into the pews below, breaking some of them to splinters. One huge boulder had continued its flight clear through the floor, and was found lodged in the basement after demolishing the pew of Ex-Gov. Hoffman.

Robert Simpson died at 8:30 o'clock last evening.

Bishop Simpson's Funeral.

PHILADELPHIA, June 25.—The funeral of Bishop Matthew Simpson took place yesterday afternoon at the Arch Street Methodist church. Previous to the services at the church the remains lay in state at the late house, No. 1354 Arch street, at which prayer was offered by Rev. W. C. Robinson. At the conclusion of the special services the remains were taken to the church, where the procession entered the church Rev. Andrew Longacre, D. D., read the opening service. A chant by the choir followed, and Bishop Harris read the lesson. Bishops Andrews offered and Bishops Foster and Fowler delivered addresses. The remains will lie in state at the church. The interment will then take place in Laurel Hill cemetery.

What It Costs.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—A bill to authorize the location of a branch home for volunteer disabled soldiers in either of the states of Arkansas, Colorado, Kansas, Iowa, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska and for other purposes and appropriating $250,000 for the purpose, gave rise to a long debate in the house, during which it was stated that the cost per capita for the support of disabled soldiers was $480 per annum, which Mr. J. T. Taylor, of Ohio, said was more than it would cost to support them at a first class hotel. The bill was passed by a vote of 154 to 87. The result was: Yeas, 87; nays, 15. No quorum voting the bill was by unanimous consent laid over as unfinished business.

To Adjourn in Ten Days.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—The result of today's meeting of the Capitol strengthens the opinion that congress will be ready for a final adjournment by July 5. There are but two or three senators, who will insist upon prolonged debate, and by the senate of the bills declaring forfeiture of the Oregon railroad land grants. The prospects of a speedy adjournment are quite satisfactory to both branches and it is highly probable that some good work will be accomplished before the date above mentioned.

The Electoral Count.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—The house took up the bill of Mr. Bacon, of Connecticut, relative to the counting of the electoral vote, Mr. Herbert, of Alabama, urged action, believing that the people would not stand any more delay. Mr. Bacon said a real vote a bad law was better than no law at all. He favored the senate bill in preference to Mr. Eaton's substitute. Mr. Eaton closed the debate in support of the substitute for the senate bill, which was passed, yeas 127, nays 82, and the bill was passed.

GEN. LOGAN ACCEPTS.

He Will Run with Blaine on the Great Republican Ticket.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—The committee to notify Gen. Logan of his election received yesterday afternoon by presenting Gen. Henderson chairman and J. W. Muldrum, of Wyoming, secretary. The committee then proceeded to Logan's residence and after formal presentation Gen. Henderson delivered an address notifying him of his nomination without opposition, urging his acceptance, and saying to him as a man whose record was an embodiment and exemplification of the principles of the party and the platform.

Gen. Logan's response was as follows:

"Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee: I receive your visit with pleasure and accept with gratification the honorable position you have so generally expressed in the declarations of the party with which you have been intrusted by the national Republican convention.

"Intending to address you a formal communication shortly, in accordance with the recognized usage, it would be out of place to detain you at this time with remarks which properly belong to the official utterances of a letter of acceptance.

"I may be permitted to say, however, that should I seek the nomination of vice president, I accept as a trust reposed in the Republican party to the advancement of the whole country, and not as a matter connected with the progress of our government people. I have dedicated my best energies, and with this acceptance, I may properly signify my approval of the platform of the principles adopted by the convention.

"I am deeply sensible of the honor conferred upon me by my friends in so unanimously presenting my name to them, and I sincerely thank them for this tribute.

"I am not unmindful of the great responsibilities attaching to the office, and if elected shall endeavor to discharge the duties of it in accordance with the firm conviction that he who has such an unanimous support of his party friends, as this circumstance connected with the nomination and your own words, Mr. Chairman, indicate, and consequently such a wealth of counsel to draw upon, cannot fail in the proper discharge of the duties committed to him.

"I tender you my thanks, Mr. Chairman, for the kind expressions you have made, and if other gentlemen of the fellow-committeemen my most cordial greeting."

OLIVER CANFIELD LYNCHED.

The Assassin of Mrs. Gherkin Executed by an Indiana Mob.

VINCENNES, Ind., June 25.—Oliver Canfield, the fiendish murderer of Mollie Gherkin, was taken from jail by a mob of masked men and hanged. The mob met no opposition from the sheriff or his deputies, except that the sheriff refused to deliver the keys of the jail. In consequence the mob had to break the jail doors. This occupied at least 15 minutes. Canfield was found cowering in his cell.

He was hastened out to the street, where several hundred of the best citizens of the place were waiting. The work was soon done. It was proposed that he be hanged near the jail, but the brute requested that he hanged in sight of the house where he killed the girl. He was taken there and was met with deafening yells from the crowd, and he was hurried up to a convenient telegraph pole within a minute throw of the scene of the murder. Before the rope was drawn Canfield was asked if he had anything to say. He was weak and fainting and could scarcely speak. He replied he could say was that he was guilty; that he was sorry he killed the girl; that if it was to do over again he would not do what he had done; that he believed in God, and that he had tried to be reconciled to heaven, but that he did not believe he would ever go there.

He was given a minute to say prayers, but by this time he had sunk so low he could scarcely be aroused. The rope was soon adjusted around his neck and with the applause of the crowd he was drawn to a height of ten feet and then left to hang. There was scarcely a struggle visible, but the vitality was strong, and he lived minutes. A card was pinned to his coat requesting the coroner to leave the body hanging until noon. The mob did not disperse until daylight.

The Mexican Pension Bill Passed.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—The Mexican pension bill was resumed by the senate after the transaction of some minor customary morning work. The bill was amended to allow widows who married Mexican soldiers after the war pensions. A number of other amendments were voted down and the bill was left substantially as it came from the house.

Mr. Morgan moved to postpone further consideration of the bill until December next. Lost—20 yeas, 34 nays. The bill was then passed by 37 yeas to 20 nays. Messrs. Bruce, George Lamar and Ransom voted with the Republicans for the bill, and Messrs. Edmunds and Hawley with the Democrats against it.

As passed, the bill pensions Mexican soldiers who actually served fourteen days in the service of the United States. It does not include any person not within the rule of age (62) or disability, or who incurred such disability while in rebellion against the United States. Its provisions are extended to soldiers suffering from disability who served three months in the Union army during the late war. The usual restrictive conditions have been added in the way of perfecting the pension laws.

LEAPING TO HER DEATH

Unaccountable Suicide of a Young and Happy Wife.

Dressed as She Was, Collar and Wrap, She Plunged Headlong from the Steamboat to a Sound Steamer.

NEW YORK, June 25.—Monday afternoon Mrs. Annie Heaney, of New Haven, Conn., leaped overboard from the steamer C. H. Northam, and was drowned before any attempt could be made for her rescue. The young woman, who had only been married about a year, arrived in this city on a visit to her mother, Mrs. Corcoran, at No. 76 Mulberry street, on Sunday morning last. She appeared to enjoy the meeting with her relatives and friends immensely, and was in the best of spirits during her short stay. She had arranged to return home by the Northam, and shortly before the hour for its departure yesterday she bade her mother good-bye, and left the house, accompanied by her friend, Miss Kate Shannon, who resides with Mrs. Corcoran.

Upon getting aboard the boat the friends went into the cabin and here the women engaged in chatting over old times that the steamer's lines were cast off and the boat left the wharf with Miss Shannon on board.

A few minutes before passing Fort Schuyler, Mrs. Heaney emerged from the cabin after having divested herself of her hat, collar and wrap, without a word having been uttered even of the guards into the water. The piercing screams of Mrs. Shannon as she saw her friend disappear called the other passengers to the spot. In the wake of other passengers came the latter, behind the head and shoulders of the drowning girl, who was partially buoyed up by her clothing, appeared to struggle violently, then sank from sight. The steamboat had been stopped and every effort was made at rescue but without avail. When that was found impossible, an attempt was made to recover her body, but in vain.

When last seen upon the surface she seemed to make no effort to save herself, while a single servant handkerchief was in her hand.

Mrs. Heaney was twenty-three years of age, quite stout and very good looking. The cause of her suicide is a mystery, as she was to all appearances happy in her new home. She was full of plans for the future, and even the last one whom her friends would have dreamed of was taking her own life. Temporary insanity is the theory, as she was seized by an insane impulse which she found it impossible to resist.

THREE KILLED OUTRIGHT.

Fatal Collision Between Trains on the Shamokin Railroad.

PHILADELPHIA, June 25.—A special to The Press from Shamokin, Pa., says a serious railroad accident occurred near that place yesterday morning by which three men were instantly killed. The Shamokin railroad was the scene of an accident near Dornsife station, in which the entire running of trains is disarranged. Yesterday morning, shortly before 10 o'clock, the local passenger train from Sunbury, while traversing a deep cut, encountered a freight train engine returning from the wreck and a collision occurred.

William Malick, the train dispatcher, who was riding on the engine, Shultz, the fireman of the passenger engine, and a tramp riding between the engine and the baggage car were killed outright. Engineer Hoffman was badly scalded. Both engines were wrecked, but no passengers are reported hurt. The accident is believed to have been due to the carelessness of the freight engineer in returning on the time of the passenger train. An official inquiry into the causes which led to the collision will be ordered.

German's Colonial Policy.

BERLIN, June 25.—Prince Bismarck made a statement of the government's colonial policy before the reichstag committee on foreign affairs. The importance of the question may be inferred from the fact that it is the first time for thirteen years that the chancellor has attended a session of the committee. It does not include any person not within the rule of age (62) or disability, or who incurred such disability while in rebellion against the United States. Its provisions are extended to soldiers suffering from disability who served three months in the Union army during the late war. The usual restrictive conditions have been added in the way of perfecting the pension laws.

THE CHOLERA OUTBREAK.

Cities Adjacent to Toulon Believed to Be in Imminent Danger.

LONDON, June 24.—Dispatches from Paris state that great alarm exists in every section of France over the outbreak of Cholera at Toulon. The cities adjacent to Toulon are believed to be in imminent danger, and their inhabitants are fully aware of panic stricken. Since Saturday last 24 is authorized that about ninety persons have fallen victims to the plague. All who can leave the ill-fated city are doing so, and while there is a marked abatement of the malady the city promises to be deserted within a fortnight.

It is now stated that the Toulon municipality explained the situation to the journalists of Toulon on Saturday, but they decided to keep the matter secret until Monday. A notice, however, was published announcing the educational course at the Toulon Lycee and the pupils were sent to their homes. Measures of precaution were taken by the naval authorities and the sailors transport Entrepreante was arranged to receive sailors and marines. The crews of the fleet will be sent to encamp at Isle of Mandrier. In the town measures of precaution have also been organized by the mayor and municipal committee, and notices have been posted prescribing sanitary measures to be taken. The bodies are to be buried at once in deep graves and disinfectants used in filling in the graves. No bodies are to be allowed to be deposited in churches.

Toulon has been in a bad sanitary condition for a long time. The authorities, however, have been negligent and have contented themselves with the local shiftings of troops. Little has been done to remove the causes of the evil. Proper sewers do not exist, and the houses, both public and private, many houses are built without drainage arrangements. The sewage is emptied into streams, and not swept away by the Mediterranean, which is at its highest tide at the present season of the year, and in calm weather at all times the emanations are insupportable.

The foreign consuls at Toulon unites in pronouncing the prevailing disease to be Asiatic cholera.

GONE FOR GOOD.

The President of a Delaware Brick Company Away with $5,000.

WILMINGTON, June 25.—Newark, Del., is in a great state of excitement over the mysterious and unexpected departure of Joseph Johnson, of that town, with about $5,000 in his possession. Mr. Johnson has for some years been president and active partner in the Newark Brick company, an apparently wealthy and prosperous organization, composed of several Newark capitalists. The Newark Brick company has made an assignment to the National bank of Newark, comprising a kiln of new bricks, real estate, and all the accessories of a finely appointed yard. The failure of the brick company brought with it complete surprise, as no one ever thought its financial embarrassment possible.

It is generally conceded that the assets will cover the liabilities of the company. The company recently took the contract for grading three of the new B. and P. railroad sections, lately deserted by John Gray, a former contractor. It is supposed that Johnson had foreseen the utter impossibility of completing these sections with any profit to himself, and consequently absconded.

The Newark bank cashed him a check for $4,700 yesterday morning, and he immediately decamped. A friend of Mr. Johnson stated last evening that he had received a dispatch from Johnson to the effect that he would not return. The laborers employed under him have been left unpaid, and they threaten immediate lynching should he return.

Attempted Insurance Swindle.

PORTLAND, Ore., June 24.—Last Friday night the dwelling of M. Kackley, a farmer living near Cornelius, sixteen miles south of this city, was burned, and next morning the remains of a man supposed to be Kackley were found in the ruins. Investigation by a coroner's jury yesterday showed that the bones must have been those of an old skeleton. Kackley had recently insured his life in a New York company for $6,000. On the night of the fire his wife and babe were at her father's house, half a mile away, and she had the policy in her pocket. Nothing is known of Kackley's history except that he, with a number of relatives, arrived in Oregon a few months ago and bought a farm near Cornelius. He was arrested at Ashland, Douglas county, 275 miles south of here. On Friday night he walked to Portland, and took a train Saturday morning for Ashland. He is held for arson.

CAST-OFF FINERY.

An Establishment Where Ladies' Second-Hand Wear Is Sold.

How One Woman's Necessity May Become Another Woman's Opportunity—Stylish Dresses for Emergencies.

[Detroit Free Press.]

On Monroe avenue there is a neat clothing and millinery establishment where ladies' "wear" is advertised. The casual observer sees nothing but an ordinary stock of cheap new goods, very prettily arranged, and a pretty lady-in-waiter with a dissatisfied air trying to sell them. A pleasant-faced, gray-haired matron keeps watch within, and a gay, stylishly dressed brother keeps watch without, while the little convent-bred girl learns the value of dollars and cents from the general public. Back of the stock of new goods are a number of large trunks, wooden chests and drawers let into the wall. These can a tale unfold. A word to the wise mother, and she leads you into the rear of the store, and opens one of the chest like.

This very respectable appearing dry goods emporium is in reality an old-clothes shop, but of the most approved type. The great wooden chests are filled with the cast-off finery of the very best society. "When a fashionable lady goes into mourning," said the owner of the second-hand chests, "she sends for me. How does she know me? Why, everybody knows me. I travel all over the country. I spend seasons at Washington, Saratoga, Long Branch and New York. I go to California for my health, and I call on all the nice ladies. I sell them fine point lace and camel's hair shawls, and I take back the old ones in part pay. Then, when a lady's husband dies, she sells all her colored dresses to me. Sometimes the widow will come to $1,000, and I give her my check for the money. Here I have letters from Canada, from doctors' wives and hotel keepers, wanting to know if I have anything to send them. I am a big business in Canada. There is no duty on old clothes. See how clean and nice my goods are, my dear; I will not buy from street gypsies and low folks; I buy only from ladies."

"And do you sell only to ladies?"

"Ah, that is different. I sell cheap for cash and only to ladies. The people who buy of me are very good people. They are many of them play-actors in the theatre. They purchase second-hand dresses for costumes. I had a dress here that was a beauty. It was a peacock blue satin, made up with velvet brocade. It was trimmed with lace and fringe—was a party rig for a Detroit bride. They got tired of it and brought it to me. I had a letter in my pocket from a star actress who was playing in Toledo, and it called for a peacock blue satin. I took a little bit out of the inside of the waist and sent it to her, and she sent me $50 for the dress. I gave $40 for it, but the lady could not have got less than over $100. Next week the actress was here and sent me tickets to the theatre. I went with my son. The actress wore that dress in one scene, and she looked just grand in it. I sat in the box and looked at it with an opera glass. It looked splendid, too."

Dress after dress had been taken out and unfolded during the conversation. Some were individualized by the wearer. One would be slender, tall and shapely, as if it had clad some magnificent actress goddess; other fat, and Scott Siddons-like, with an appearance of having strained after effect.

"Do you have saddes calls for things ready-worn dresses?"

"Well, brides from the country, and run-away matches come in to get fitted in a hurry. There are all sizes, so they can always get suited. But nothing goes better than black silk. One black silk dress looks just like another, and if a customer wears such a dress she is not likely to have its first appearance at a ball. Now, dear, don't you often see a lady on the street and think to yourself, 'There is Mrs. So and So,' and when you get up to her it is not her at all? It is just like seeing a ghost. Why! Because the clothes were Mrs. So and So's, and looked just like her. Women who could never have a nice dress can buy a silk of me for $20, that cost $75 when it was new, and if they don't tell themselves, nobody will ever know. Sometimes I have really new dresses—models that have never been worn. These command a higher price. It is not a good business now. I have been in it right here in Detroit for forty years, but it is not what it used to be. We made money in the war, but there is no money in old clothes now, and the novelty lasts have almost spoiled the sale of the real polish article. I am going to Washington to call on the senator's wives. They will have some rich clothes to sell now, and they will want home. Is there nothing you want to-day? Call in again as you pass by."

A Few Answers.

[Wall Street News.]

"What is a corner?"

"A sage, my son, is a wise man who knows exactly when to buy or sell stocks. We bury about a dozen in this country, but the supply still equals the demand."

"What is a successful financier?"

"Why, a man who scoops $3,000,000 out of the Treasury run, and drops the sugar in Wall street."

"What is a philosopher?"

"He is a chap who loses his wife's money in buying stocks, but increases his own by taking a deal in pork."

"What is a financial prophet?"

"He is a gentleman who states to an interviewer on Wednesday that Monday was prosperous and business solid, and on Thursday falls for $7,000,000 or $8,000,000.

Doctoring His Cigar.

[New York Cor. Chicago Journal.]

What struck me at the Chatham street stand, was a purchaser, who, after buying a cigar, took it out from his pocket, and dropped on some liquid. I got the explanation:

"I am a cigar-maker," said he, "and in my work I see what are called 'packers' and favors, with which we turn the commonest domestic cigars into Havanas of any desired brand. I happened to want a smoke just now and I don't like the dealer's stock, but I had some La Vuelta Abajo flavor, and so I turned a Chinese out-er into a genuine Cuban product. Try one, sir."

I did. Never again shall I smoke an Havana with confidence.

A Literal Interpretation.

[Texas Siftings.]

"What is that invisible power," asked an Austin Sunday school teacher, "that prevents the wicked from doing as they would like to?"

Who the deuce pays store and buy some insect powder. Ma sent me for a dime's worth last Wednesday, and we haven't felt—"

Johnny Spitkins would have gone into parentheses, if his father, who is a little cool, and has ten times as much sense, hadn't pulled him down.

IN THE SADDLE-PATH.

[Stewart Olyphant in Harper's Weekly.]

They rode (they rode) with saddle-bags,
And pistols primed for foe or stag;
And far to selling her over again
The cities that's as old as the hunting blue,
And as old as the roaming that was of two Married what it could be.

It never has happened that one of two,
Bitthe boy, good girl, together—
Who have felt that all love was enough to do
In the sweet and the wintry weather—
But have found right words for the song of birds
In the greenery overhead;
For to build the nest in the spring is best,
And 'tis best in the spring to wed.

Oh, he rides at her bridle-rein,
And he bends his head to her cheek—
With the musical tones of the old refrain
That he bended to her knee.
And his words were pleasant as rain that nature
Low on the laughing leaves,
And kind as the sheen on that flatters
The gold of harvest sheaves.

And his hand it is on her bridle-rein,
And his look it is for her cheek—
He need not to tell her that love is again
Of the question that he would seek.
But oh, as he talks and she talks like a sobbling
Of the miguonette and the rose
For no matter how long you sing love's song,
You can never come to its close!

THE YOUNGER GRANTS.

Personal Attractions and Accomplishments of Their Wives.

[New York Cor. Boston Times.]

Col. Fred Grant's wife is a charming lady, beautiful and cultured, and was the daughter of Mr. Honore, of Chicago, and they have a fine residence at Morristown, N. J.

U. S. Grant, Jr., resides in West Fifty-eighth street, New York. He married some three years to the only daughter of ex-Senator Jerome B. Chaffee. Her mother died when she was a mere child, and her early years were passed in the charge of her mother's sister, most of her education being obtained at the Packer institute, in Brooklyn, where she was a universal favorite and was somewhat famous for her generous impulses. Whenever her father visited her—which was at frequent intervals—he would leave $50 or $100, which she was at liberty to use at her own pleasure, and the result was that the girls shared in her good fortune, from caramels to luxuries of millinery.

After finishing at the institute, Miss Chaffee spent some time in Heidelberg, Germany, where she acquired the German language, which she speaks very fluently. She is a musician of no mean order, and during the three seasons at the capital was a great favorite in the best circles, though not a reigning belle. Mr. and Mrs. Grant have two sweet little children, and there is in every sense a most happy home. Mrs. Grant is now about 24 years of age, of medium height and fair complexion. Her deep blue eyes are shaded by long lashes, and her golden hair is worn in coils of golden in certain lights. She is not exactly beautiful, but her smile is very winning and her manner is altogether charming. She is lively and vivacious, has a strong character in her tastes; and she brought her husband a dowry of $800,000, all of which has gone through the wave that has swept over this famous family.

Gen. Grant's youngest son, Jesse, married Miss Alice Chapman, daughter of a Call-fornia banking king, a few years ago. Miss Chapman is young and beautiful, and in her youth was surrounded by every luxury, her wedding outfit being said to be the most costly ever made in this country. Their honeymoon, with Gen. and Mrs. Grant.

How Managers Against Work the Press.

[New Orleans Times-Democrat.]

The two professions of the drama and of journalism are strangely far apart, considerers are brought in contact every day, and bring the two together. This is illustrated by the employment by the latter of agents to go between them and the newspapers. I am saying nothing against legitimate business managers or their avowed agents. But there are a lot of fellows in New York employed to "boom" people in these two lines, and they make fair incomes out of the credulity of the stars who pay them. One of them is under salary to Barrett, Minnie Palmer, Bertha Welby, Mitford and several combinations, drawing an aggregate of $50 a week.

"And I suppose you earn the wages twice over," I remarked to him.

"Sometimes," he said; "they think I do, but I don't. I exaggerate the difficulties, you understand. The star believes I spend about two hours a day trudging up and down the stairways of newspaper offices, button-holing and importuning editors, standing all sorts of insults and rebuffs, and spending money I want home. In these nothing you want to-day? Call in again as you pass by."

[Wall Street News.]

"What is a corner?"

"A sage, my son, is a wise man who knows exactly when to buy or sell stocks. We bury about a dozen in this country, but the supply still equals the demand."

"What is a successful financier?"

"Why, a man who scoops $3,000,000 out of the Treasury run, and drops the sugar in Wall street."

"What is a philosopher?"

"He is a chap who loses his wife's money in buying stocks, but increases his own by taking a deal in pork."

"What is a financial prophet?"

"He is a gentleman who states to an interviewer on Wednesday that Monday was prosperous and business solid, and on Thursday fails for $7,000,000 or $8,000,000.

Doctoring His Cigar.

What struck me at the Chatham street stand, was a purchaser, who, after buying a cigar, took it out from his pocket, and dropped on some liquid. I got the explanation:

"I am a cigar-maker," said he, "and in my work I see what are called 'packers' and favors, with which we turn the commonest domestic cigars into Havanas of any desired brand. I happened to want a smoke just now and I don't like the dealer's stock, but I had some La Vuelta Abajo flavor, and so I turned a Chinese out-er into a genuine Cuban product. Try one, sir."

I did. Never again shall I smoke an Havana with confidence.

A Literal Interpretation.

[Texas Siftings.]

"What is that invisible power," asked an Austin Sunday school teacher, "that prevents the wicked from doing as they would like to?"

Who the deuce pays store and buy some insect powder. Ma sent me for a dime's worth last Wednesday, and we haven't felt—"

Johnny Spitkins would have gone into parentheses, if his father, who is a little cool, and has ten times as much sense, hadn't pulled him down.

Locals.

—June has five Sundays.

—The Board of Freeholders will meet on July 2.

—The North Plainfield school closes tomorrow.

—The recent charity concert netted $173 for the Relief Association.

—The late Bishop Simpson's portrait is republished on our fourth page to-day.

—Plainfield is becoming notorious throughout the State for the number of its fires.

—Yesterday was St. John's day, and the masonic fraternity paid due respect to their patron in various places.

—The Lincoln Club are called upon to meet and organize for the campaign, on Saturday evening at Association Hall.

—A mad dog was shot and killed in Elizabeth yesterday. A colored man in this city was inspecting for a few for the pound.

—The Singer companies works at Elizabeth are to be shut down next Monday for one week, probably two weeks, for annual repairs to machinery.

—A musicale was given yesterday afternoon to a select party at the residence of Miss O. J. Marsh, at the corner of Madison avenue and Ninth street.

—The old scales under the sidewalk in front of French's flour and feed mill, in Somerset street, gave out yesterday, and is being replaced by a new one.

—The commencement exercises of the High School take place this evening in the Methodist Episcopal Church. The reception to the graduates in the chapel of the High School follows.

—A delegation of Republicans met in Somerset Hall this evening and proceed to Somerville, where a Republican demonstration is to take place. It is also proposed to effect an organization.

—Our society correspondent, "Crescent Ave," writes a very humorous letter to this journal have excited so much favorable comment, wields a graceful and accomplished pen. Our readers may expect contributions from this gifted writer about once a week.

—Efforts are being made to have a special meeting of the Police Board to take action in the case of Policeman Kelly. This meeting cannot be held too soon to rid the force of such a disgraceful scamp. We also understand that several citizens are preparing to secure him a discharge at Trenton. The sooner the better for the public good.

—Families desiring ice cream for the Fourth should get their orders in at once, to be sure of supply. Compton, Dixon, or Ramonetti are our advertisers in that line and everybody knows that anything they supply in that line is first class. That is a weakness with all our advertisers we believe, and thus our host of readers and ourselves therein are of one accord.

—A public exhibition will probably be given on the Fourth of July of the operation of the new devices of Plainfield Engine Company, No. 2. It will prove quite interesting, but it is to be hoped that there will be no occasion on that day for a practical demonstration of its efficiency. A telephone call is to be given without previous notice, the fireman summoned and the time is to be taken that is occupied to reach and get a stream on an imaginary fire. Extra precautions are to be taken by the Fire Board to guard against fires on that day.

—Our sanctimonious neighbor, the weekly Times, believes it would contaminate its Pharisee garments by any reference to the police force scandal. This is the way it puts it. "Some matters were before the city court on Tuesday that show up a form of depravity which ought to have no publicity in the newspapers." The Times proposes to cloak such a villain as Policeman Kelly confesses himself to be, excites natural curiosity in the minds of its few readers to know what it refers to, although requiring them to pay five cents per copy to supply them with such wishy-washy stuff for news, and pushing them to the additional expense of two cents for a copy of THE NEWS to get what they had paid one hundred and fifty per cent. more for and failed to get from The Times. "Sur sed."

Endorsing The News.

Plainfield, June 25.

To the Editor of THE EVENING NEWS:

Your bold, cleanly, and uncontaminating journal is welcome to my table, and I predict for it a future and place in this community as a shining light in the paths of virtue and wisdom. Your decisive action and firm purpose as indicated in the "disorderly house case" is a reward to the patience of the moral loving community, who have too long been forced to lend confidence to journalistic enterprise that held party interests above public good, and the social and political status of offenders have had too much weight in the presentation of facts by the press. Hereafter your paper will be a terror to evil doers and an economical force in assisting to establish good morals in this city.

Respectfully,
REFORM.

Another Catastrophe.

Attention is called to the new column advertisement of Miller & Wiberley, of 10 East Front Street (under VanDeventer Hall) today. At this store was originated a system of reduced prices in drugs, patent medicines and prescriptions, and the large and increasing growth of the business of this popular firm fully proves that their efforts have met with public approval too.

A Charitable Object.

Last August, as one of a syndicate of foreign capitalists who visited this country at the opening of the Union Pacific, at the invitation of President Villard, there was a cultivated English capitalist and wife, from the suburbs of London, who by some mistake arrived a steamer ahead of the others. Upon arrival the couple found they were alone and remained so until after the others had departed. In the turn of the wheel of fortune the family have already been reduced from affluence to abject poverty, to which have been added misfortunes of the most serious nature.

The wife a short time ago fell and fractured the bones of her right foot and sustained a severe contusion and sprain. The husband as soon as his health permitted, had endeavored to find employment, being an expert accountant, but failed, and in his extreme misfortune, his case came under the notice of Mrs. Bowers of this city, whose sympathy was aroused. She determined with the spirit characteristic of Plainfield women, to endeavor to afford the family at least temporary relief. Others have become interested, from the same feeling of sympathy.

It is proposed to give an entertainment at VanDeventer Hall, July 24, in which a number of ladies and gentlemen of Plainfield will take part, including Mrs. J. Kirk Myers, Miss Ralph Barnes, Messrs. Clark and Louis Evans, and an amateur minstrel company of boys, the proceeds to be given to the unfortunate couple referred to. Tickets are to be on sale at Shaw's Pharmacy, and also at R ymond's.

A Sad Calamity.

In this world of joys and of sorrows, of victories and defeats, it is a noticeable fact that little men, who metaphorically strain at a gnat and still think themselves able to go the camel, sometimes overdo the matter. This is about the position occupied by our esteemed contemporary, The Constitutionalist. We are awfully sorry to give them away, but we have been thinking for a few days what a dire calamity it would be to them if the High School Commencement should, by some inscrutable act of Providence, never take place. We, of course, sincerely trust that this will not be the case, but should it be so our whole force would cheerfully be placed at the disposal of our esteemed friends of North avenue, to assist them to fill up the lamentary report of the High School Commencement, which although it is not to take place until this evening has already been fully reported and set up by The Constitutionalist. In order that the graduating class may fully appreciate the interest taken in them by this enterprising journal, we may say that the report in question was in fact prepared as late ago as Tuesday. Think, friends of the graduates, of this staid and anticipated journal going to press before the time of the commencement exercises occur, with a full account of those exercises, of their holding back the paper until after the exercises do occur, and then of the exercises never occurring. In what a hole would that esteemed contemporary find itself! Again we say, what a dire calamity it would be.

Death of a Former Plainfielder.

Mr. David O. Wotherspoon, a former resident of East Front street and well-known to many in this city, died Monday at his residence, No. 46 West Ninth street, New York city, in the fifty-second year of his age. Mr. Wotherspoon was born in New York and commenced his business career in the firm of Wotherspoon, Kingsford & Co., who did one of the most extensive trades in New York in grain, cotton, gold, and foreign exchange. When the firm was dissolved, about eight years ago, Mr. Wotherspoon started a foreign exchange business himself at No. 43 Pine street, which he has conducted since that time. He was a prominent member of the Gold Board before it dissolved. He was also formerly a member of the Produce Exchange and belonged to the Down-town Club. The funeral will take place to-morrow from St. Mark's Church.

The Plainfield Directory.

The forthcoming directory of Plainfield is promised to surpass all previous issues, from the fact, that it will not be mixed up with other cities along the line of the road, but will be an out and out Plainfield directory with its immediate suburbs, and in addition to the names and usual information will contain a historical sketch of Plainfield and its local institutions from the pen of O. B. Leonard, Esq. It will be well printed and well bound. Dix & Co., first established the enterprise of the City Directory, in 1869, and as they have already published seven editions and have become personally familiar with our citizens, they come to us on the merits of their past works.

Personal.

Dr. South will spend the next few weeks on the coast of Maine.

Mrs. J. E. Tracy, of this city, is sojourning at the Cahill, Asbury Park.

Mr. Augustus VanDeventer and family will spend the season in the White Mountains.

The Rev. Judson Pierson, a former resident, is visiting his parents in North Plainfield.

Dr. J. B. Probasco and family will pass the Summer at Nantucket Beach. They left the city for that place on Tuesday.

Mr. Scott will pass the Summer in Plainfield as usual, having leased the residence of Mr. William Burrows on Prospect Place.

Hardly Fair.

A North Plainfield constable on Tuesday evening in order to rid the township of a drunken woman, who had just landed her baby over the brook into this city, where the officers were under the necessity of arresting her. She was brought before City Judge Good yesterday and was discharged. While the city's police officers are perfectly willing to handle all law breakers on this side of the stream, they object in decided terms to unloading that task of another town.

Reform Club Excursion.

The excursion of the Reform Club yesterday, from this city to Asbury Park and Ocean Grove, was attended by about 500 persons, including the Plainfield Reform Christer Club, and the Plainfield Cornet Band, which furnished the music. The Club had invited the matron and children of the Children's Home, which was also well represented.

The excursionists including the families and friends of the members of the Club, occupied eight cars, leaving this city at 7:30 a. m. and arriving at the Park about 9:30.

Rose' Bathing Pavillion was the first place visited, and many availed themselves of a plunge in the surf. Mr. Rose absolutely refused payment from the band for the bathing suits furnished, and through his influence a dinner at the Le Pierre Hotel for about seventy members of the club was obtained at about half the usual price. This was the first excursion of the season.

There was an impromptu meeting held at Rose' Pavilion by request, and vocal and instrumental music was furnished, and addresses were made by President French, Mayor Mixson and Mr. Thos. Price. About three o'clock, the meeting began and lasted about one hour.

A heavy rainstorm commenced about one o'clock, which somewhat retarded the pleasure of the day.

The excursionists reached this city about eight o'clock last evening, and the club, led by the band, furnishing music, paraded the streets to their headquarters. The net proceeds approximate $75.

For Mercy's Sake.

A rather attractive-looking young woman called upon a family yesterday by whom she had been formerly employed and befriended until she had become extra aged by evil companions, and appealed to them, weeping and sobbing, to employ her that she might keep away from temptation. "Oh please take me back and I will do anything I can for you," said the girl in an at bemoaning tones to the Christian woman, to whom her appeal was not in vain.

This is the poor girl who, an outcast, on the streets of Plainfield, appealed last week to Policeman Kelly to show her where she might find employment until she could obtain employment; and whom this niger on society, this depraved and disreputable scamp, taking advantage of her circumstances, took her to a house of ill repute, and, when his infamy is discovered, comes with consummate cheek to this office for a vindication.

We are glad we heard the appeal of the girl's true friends, and sincerely hope that their efforts in her behalf will not prove to have been in vain. Sensible and charitable people—that is, manly men and womenly women—will not allow this idle curiosity to know of her whereabouts. She seems penitent enough. Let the veil not be drawn aside, and all join the hope that she, for virtue's sake, will keep her present good resolve.

A. G. A. R. Reception.

Commander Nevius with his staff attended the meeting of the Winfield Scotts Post, G. A. R. of this city, last evening, after which they all met at the rendevous at Cutter's Hall, where refreshments and a jolly good time were provided by the Loyal Ladies' League Auxiliary to the G. A. R. A number of speeches were made, some of the war songs sung in memory of the good old time. The visitors were highly gratified at the work the League is doing, and eulogized the ladies who are working so zealously in the cause. A thorough good time and drenching shower closed the entertainment.

Closing Exercises.

The closing exercises of the public schools took place this morning. At the High School the Principal, Miss Julia E. Bulkley, made a very instructive address to the scholars. The school sang a number of songs, and two prizes were awarded by the Principal for excellent collections of leaves; the first prize was secured by a Grammar School scholar, Edward Perrine, and the second by Miss Florence Hawkins, of the High School. A number of graduates were present. The commencement exercises take place this evening in the Methodist Episcopal Church at 7:45.

State Matters.

Austin Moore, of Somerville, lost a fine hog Tuesday from sunstroke.

Boys under 18 years of age must be careful where they play pool or billiards after the 4th of next month.

The Mayors of nearly all the cities and large towns in the State, have issued edicts against Fourth of July explosives.

Mrs. Catherine Clarkson, mother of Mrs. Charles D. Campbell, of Woodbridge, was 90 years old on Wednesday of last week. She is probably the oldest person in Woodbridge township.

Policeman Fleming, of Gloucester City, on Sunday night arrested Jack Howarth for disorderly conduct. He resisted, and the officer used his club freely upon him, necessitating the services of City Physician Tomlinson.

Early Monday morning the Atlantic City police surprised seventeen tramps, who had made their habitation in some fresh-houses below the Excursion House. They were sent out of the city in a body about eight o'clock.

BLACK SILKS

Imported. It is of the well-known manufacture that was formerly imported by A. T. Stewart & Co., and sold in their retail department for many years, and has stood the most trying test and proved its unquestionable excellence to thousands who have worn it and can testify of its real worth and beauty.

It is still retailed by the successors of the old Stewart house, and by a special arrangement with the Importing Department we are enabled to offer it at precisely the same figures as their retail department, viz:

No. 2007 at 1.75

No. 2008 at 2.00

No. 2009 at 2.25

Edsall's.

They are by far the handsomest goods we have ever handled, and possess the most intrinsic value, and the fact that we can sell goods which have had such an experience as these at exactly the same prices as one of the largest and most popular houses in New York ought to be a sufficient inducement for Ladies to give Home trade the preference.

We offer The Constitutionalist our report of the Commencement Exercises of the High School one week in issue a week before, in case events do not all occur as it has anticipated in its imaginary report in the present week's issue, to appear to-morrow, but which we understand was in type yesterday, although the event does not take place until this evening. We will have a full report in our columns to-morrow, by our reporter present on the occasion, who will, therefor, not have to draw on his imagination for facts, and so save our contemporary that the report will be reliable. There will be no gush, nor any padding, no characters of imaginative reports. We don't take this community for such idiots as to accept imaginary reports for facts. That is not our style of journalism.

THE Pope, in an interview had with him by Bishop Farrell of the diocese of Trenton, in this State, is said to favor the policy of the Irish Nationalists, and assures them of his best wishes for their success for the improvement of the general condition of Ireland. The Head of the Catholic Church thus encourages the Irish patriots in their struggle for reform and liberty.

IN 1876 New Jersey gave Tilden 7,555 majority over Hayes. In 1880 Hancock received, on a tariff-for-revenue-only platform, but little over 2,000 majority over Garfield. Democrats claim a solid tariff plank if the Democratic platform will give so much majority for the Democratic candidate nominated at Chicago next month.

NEW JERSEY, is a small State, but puts together on both sides always include it among the pivotal States, and put forth their greatest endeavors to carry it for their respective candidates.

THE party, be it Republican or Democratic, that honestly believes in protection to American industries, is the winner in the Presidential race.

THE State Democratic Executive Committee will hold a meeting at Taylor's Hotel, Jersey City; to-morrow.

ACTS OF THE COUNCIL AND GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

of the State of New Jersey, from the establishment of the present Government, and Declaration of Independence, to the end of the first sitting of the eighth session, on the eighth day of December, 1783, with the Constitution prefixed. An Appendix, containing the Articles of Confederation of the United States, etc., with two alphabetical tables and an index. Compiled under the appointment of the Legislature, by Peter Wilson, A. M. Printed by Isaac Collins, Trenton, Printer to the State of New Jersey in 1784.

CHAPTER III.

See a supplement to this act, Chapter CLVIII.

An act to render certain bills of credit a legal tender within this State, and to prevent the counterfeiting of the same, and other bills of credit.

Passed September 20, 1776.

The first section of this act declaring the bills emitted and made current by the Continental Congress, those emitted by the Congress or Convention of this State, and the bills issued on loan or virtue of an act of the Colony, passed in the year 1773, to be a legal tender, and lawful money for the several of them, in payment of debts, is repealed by Chapter CCXXXVIII, so far as it relates to the Continental currency, and so far as it respects the other bills by Chapter CXXXVII.

The second section, so far as it relates to counterfeiting and altering the Continental bills of credit being in force, follows at large. There are however some obvious reasons for inserting the whole of this act, although repealed. Lawsuits may arise, in a neighboring State they have arisen, for the recovery of money paid or tendered agreeably to this act, and the supplement thereto, but it was judged best to transfer it to the appendix No. 2.

CONVENTIONS SPREAD.

Ohio, Indiana and Missouri Know State Presidential Candidates.

Active Campaign Work—Abram S. Hewitt For Cleveland — John Kelly's Attitude — Tilden and the Convention.

COLUMBUS, O., June 26.—The Democratic state convention met at 2:30 A. M. to-day in opera house. Hon. E. S. Fisher presided, permanent chairman. He spoke as taught on the importance of the Democrats carrying Ohio in October, and predicted that they would do so. When the name of Tilden was mentioned the yells were deafening. The platform was then read and adopted. The tariff plank says:

We favor all legislation to the necessities of the government economically administered, and to encourage productive industry at home, and offer a just compensation for labor, but not to create or foster monopolies.

A radical free trade amendment to the platform was offered by Mr. Gilbert, of Portage, and was voted down by an overwhelming majority.

Congressman Converse offered the following, which was received with great enthusiasm, and without a dissenting voice:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this convention that Samuel J. Tilden has been once justly and fairly elected president of the United states, and is therefore entitled to and should receive the unanimous nomination at the hands of the Democratic convention which meets in Chicago July 8 next.

A resolution requesting the delegates to carry the vote of Ohio as a unit was tabled, 385 to 255.

After the announcements of the district delegates Gen. Durbin Ward, John E. McLean, Allen G. Thurman and Jacob Rarey were elected delegates-at-large to Chicago.

The state ticket was named as follows: Secretary of state, James W. Newman, of Portage; supreme judge, full term, Alfred L. Ely; C. D. Martin, of Lancaster; member board of public works, John H. Beuter, of Tuscarawas.

The Tilden resolution was carried amid a storm of applause. It is thought that the delegation will vote solidly for Payne, Hewitt or Tilden, and that the Ohio man who develops the most strength.

All factions are represented as delegates-at-large. Knowing ones claim, however, that out of the 44 votes in the state only thirty-eight are for Gov. Hoadly for president. Nine of the country delegates here have been interviewed, and they are overwhelmingly in favor of Flower, of New York. Tilden would suit them, but no other New York man. They say that the party there is defeated without him. Some Democrats think they could be induced to another one being nominated. They favor a western man—Hendy, Thurman, Payne, McDonald or Pendleton. Pendleton is the only man they want Ohio men, and these delegates now want the Democracy to nominate one.

The Indiana Democrats.

INDIANAPOLIS, June 26.—The Democratic state convention was called to order at 10:30 o'clock by Hon. Joseph E. McDonald, chairman of the state central committee. Mr. McDonald was received with much applause.

The call of counties showed all represented. Prayer by Rev. Mr. Hamilton. Mr. McDonald is leading upon the grand old Democratic party, which was greeted with cheers. Daniel W. Voorhees was elected permanent president. He made a long speech. The platform was read by Hon. W. English.

It takes ground for a tariff for revenue, so arranged as to draw most of the public revenue from articles of luxury and wealth.

It condemns the Republican demand for a state constitutional convention.

The platform endorses Mr. Voorhees, and recommends the delegation to support McDonald as a unit for the nomination for president.

McDonald's name was received with great applause.

After the adoption of the platform Isaac P. Gray, M. D. Manson and David Turpie were placed in nomination for governor, and the first ballot Gray was nominated, receiving 699 votes, Turpie 223, and Manson 181.

Several counties then made calls for lieutenant-governor, but all withdrew in favor of Mr. Manson, who was nominated by acclamation, and accepted the place. W. R. Meyers was nominated for secretary of state, James H. Rice for auditor-general, and John C. Cooper, for treasurer, was renominated by acclamation.

The convention was completed by the nomination of James Mitchell, of Elkhart, for supreme judge, and John W. Kern, of Kokomo, for reporter of the supreme court.

The following are the delegates-at-large to Chicago: Thomas A. Hendricks, of Marion; Daniel W. Voorhees, of Vigo; Robert C. Bell, of Allen, and Charles Dunby, of Vanderburg.

Arkansas Democratic Convention.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., June 26.—The Arkansas state Democratic convention convened in the Opera House at noon to-day, and was the ablest body of representatives that ever assembled in the state. John G. Fletcher, Simon P. Hughes and Jacob Frolich were elected temporary secretarial candidates, and each had a numerous following among the delegates. Col. S. L. Griffin, chairman of the state central committee, called the convention to order, and Gen. A. H. McRae was nominated temporary chairman by Hughes' friends, and defeated Hon. R. R. Davidson, Fletcher's candidate, by a vote of 129 to 86. After the appointment of the regular committees recess was taken. On re-assembling the temporary organization was made permanent, and then as the committee had reported nominations for governor were declared in order. The first ballot resulted:

Hughes, 3; Fletcher, 110; Frolich, 39; J. T. W. Tiller, 10. This order was kept up with but slight variations until the fourteenth ballot, which resulted:

Hughes, 171; Fletcher, 3; Frolich, 19; Tiller, 7; Berry, 2, when a motion to adjourn prevailed.

Appearances indicate a warm session to-day, if the struggle does not extend into other days. All the factions were canvassing last night, and the convention will be thoroughly harmonious by noonday. There will be but little contest over the delegates to Chicago, who will be nearly all Tilden men, favorable to Cleveland.

Missouri Democratic Convention.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., June 26.—The state Democratic convention concluded its labors today by electing delegates-at-large to the National Democratic convention to be held at Chicago. Chief interest centred in the candidacy of Gov. Crittenden. His aggressive record has been strongly criticised by the press of the state, and his candidacy was looked upon as presumptive until Monday, when the Democratic state committee met and declared against him.

Every effort possible was put forth by his adherents, and but little doubt existed that he would be elected. Other candidates were John O'Day, of St. Louis; Bartle Mumford, editor of The Kansas City Times; John D. Priest, of St. Louis; D. R. Francis, president of the Merchants' Exchange, St. Louis; Ex-Gov. Richard C. Vaughan, of Missouri; Ex-Gov. Stephens, of Missouri; Ex-Gov. Phelps, of Missouri; Ex-Gov. Hardin, of Missouri; Ex-Gov. Marmaduke, of Missouri; Ex-Gov. Gardenhire, of Missouri; Ex-Gov. Woodson, of Missouri; Ex-Gov. Morton, of Missouri; Ex-Gov. Hardin, of Missouri; Ex-Gov. Marmaduke, of Missouri; Ex-Gov. Gardenhire, of Missouri; Ex-Gov. Woodson, of Missouri; Ex-Gov. Morton, of Missouri.

When almost within sight of his home, he was struck dead by lightning. The horses became frightened and ran away, and a second load of lumber was overturned, killing Wadhams. The horses recovered, struck and the team took the wagon to the house of Wadhams father, and when it arrived the driver lay beside of the wagon, still grasped the lines. The field appears to have run around his body and then jumped to the ground, which it tore up for several feet.

Schaffer, aged 30, carpenter, residing in Newport. The home of Charles Kramer, a policeman, in Corryville, was also struck, knocking about two feet of the chimney off and temporarily stunning Mrs. Kramer. Lightning flashed around the fall, and it was believed by many in the vicinity that there had been a deliberate vengeance upon some of the many murderers contained therein. No damage was done, however.

WOONSOCKET, R. I., June 26.—A severe storm visited this place yesterday afternoon, and did about $10,000 worth of damage. SERIOUS DROUGHT.

May Land Not Yielding Enough for Harvesting.

HARTFORD, Ct., June 26.—Connecticut is suffering from a terrible drought. The hay crop is a failure in most parts of Hartford county, and farmers are hauling water in hogsheads for their cattle. Reports of the drought is telling seriously on crops of all kinds. Land that cost a good crop of hay in the drought of last year has not yielded enough to pay for cutting. The only exception cane land that grew nice herds grass has changed to thin, poor June grass, dried before cutting, and yielding a proper weight. A good deal of it twice. Corn has been planted three times over. Cut-worms are busily at work and all vines suffer. The apple crop is the best in years. In Fairview county is a failure, and potatoes are failing there and in many other parts of the state. Grass is a failure except on the coast. Such a light crop of hay has not been in the upper part of New Haven county for fifty years.

Cyclone Collars in Minnesota.

ST. PAUL, June 26.—Recent threatening storms have led to the construction of cyclone collars over southern Minnesota, and especially in Nicollet county, where the frightful loss of life occurred in August last. The usual plan is to excavate a deep vault to connect with the ordinary cellar, but it is not unlike a well, with a door from the house cellar, and also a door and a flight of steps leading to the outside. It has solid stone walls, with an arched roof, on top of which is built a solid stone wall, and stairher from two to three feet in thickness. The storm this week drove many people in fright to these retreats.

Fire at Germantown, Pa.

THE SAGONET MYSTERY.

Another Letter Received by Mr. Gillig.

LONDON, June 26.—The inquest in honor of the late Count A. E. Sagonet, who was one of the Army and Navy hotel, and was a very enjoyable event. Mr. Henry F. Gillig presided.

Among those present were Mr. Lowell, ex-Minister Phelps, Mr. George Bancroft, John Henry Patterson, M. P., ex-Senator Ferry, Commissioner Hayward, Justice McCarthy, M. P., Count Gleichen, Mr. Arnold Toynbee, Mr. Sergeant Ballantine, Mr. Brandreth Jay, the sculptor, Mr. Brandreth Beaumont, the dramatist, United States District Attorney Tenney, ex-Mayor Hall and Mr. F. F. Moore.

In replying to the principal toast of the evening, Mr. Sargent excused himself from speaking upon political questions, either American or European, saying that in the present state of the temperature he deemed those topics most untimely for a festal gathering. He would gratefully refer them to Indiana him to talk about the Borgia incident, and contented himself with saying that so long as he had the approval of his government and of his own conscience he was perfectly satisfied, and hoped the German chancellor was in an equally happy frame of mind. A large part of Mr. Sargent's speech was devoted to eulogy of the London Press Institution. He said that if England had been, two centuries ago, as free and as beautiful as she is to-day, his ancestor would probably not have been put to such horrors in the wilds of the New World. England was now, he considered, the best country in the world to live in, and after all the United States was the next best to live in.

Mr. Sargent's speech was greeted with frequent bursts of laughter and applause.

Before the dinner was made by Mr. Gillig, Minister Lowell, Mr. Hall and others, and it was considerably after midnight when the banquet terminated.

A BRILLIANT WEDDING.

Marriage of Mr. Hallam Tennyson to Miss Audrey Boyle.

LONDON, June 26.—The marriage of Mr. Hallam Tennyson to Miss Audrey Boyle was solemnized this at Westminster Abbey, and proved the most brilliant social event of the season. The bridegroom is the eldest son of the poet laureate Baron Tennyson D'Eyncourt, and was married to his father's parish church. Lionel Tennyson, brother Hallam, whose untimely death inspired the poem "In Memoriam." The bride is the incarnation of youth, health and beauty, possessing every desirable attribute except a fortune, for she is comparatively portionless. In addition to the poet laureate, and scores of other lords, ladies, gentry and spiritual, there were present Premier Gladstone, Minister Lowell, Mr. Henry Irving and a host of other celebrities.

The bride was charmingly attired in a robe of ivory-colored satin covered with Brussels lace and a rich bridal veil with pearl and diamond ornaments.

The bridesmaids were tastefully uniformly dressed in silk of the palest rose pink India muslin overskirts.

Trains were provided for the Isle of Wight, and the happy pair left for Farringford, the residence of Lord Tennyson.

BOBBING THE MAILS.

Henry Muller, a Jersey City Transfer Clerk, Accused to Grief.

A Paterson Firm Loses Over $10,000 in Checks and Negotiable Paper in One Week—A Conspicuous Brotherly Mate.

NEW YORK, June 26.—Henry Muller, a transfer clerk in the Pennsylvania depot, Jersey City, was arrested for having robbed the mails. He admitted having abstracted checks and papers to the amount of several hundreds of dollars.

Muller had been in the employ of the postoffice department of the Pennsylvania railroad depot, Jersey City, for several years as transfer clerk. His duty was to take letters from what is called the "red box" in that depot to the trains. During the past year a great many letters have been missed, and much talk was there that they passed through Muller's hands. To perfect the system that he conceived to carry out the scheme of pretending that he managed for that period of time to evade detection, despite the strict watch which was kept upon his actions.

Messrs. Lefferts & Co. and other large firms in Jersey City were constantly depositing the loss of considerable sums of money from business firms that were connected with. So daring and skillful was the thief or thieves become that in one week in May, in Paterson, N. J., lost over $50,000 in checks and negotiable paper on a Philadelphia bank. Detectives were employed, and much interested in the case that for detailed to inspector Byrnes and Coster of the Pennsylvania district, to assist the sector Newcomb on the case. It was found in short order by on the track of the thief, and their investigations resulted in the capture of Muller.

It was found that letters were being stolen from the "red box" at the Pennsylvania depot. This included letters from various parts of Pennsylvania, from Washington, from cities west and southwest, from parts of Canada, from Europe and Mexico, and from several points in New York state. This indicated that the stealing was pretty general, and made detection more difficult. It was found that much owing was from Muller had taken four letters from the red box in the Jersey City depot, and he was then arrested. From him it was much reasonable to suppose that he had stolen some hundreds of dollars. He was immediately taken before Commissioner Muirhead in Jersey City, and committed for examination.

Yesterday morning he was brought up and held for the action of the grand jury in default of $2,000 bail.

Henry Muller is a man of about 45 years of age, is married and has five children. He obtained his appointment in the postal department six years ago, and passed the ordinary civil service examination successfully. His brother, Congressman Nicholas Muller, has a railroad ticket office at 285 Broadway.

Pistol Shots at Long Range.

BROOKLYN, June 26.—A number of little boys, among whom were Michael O'Brien, aged 7 years, and his brother Willie, aged 10 years, were playing in front of Thomas Dignan's house at 77 Hicks street. Dignan ordered them several times to go away. The boys paid no attention to him, and he became highly incensed. He appeared at the front window of his house with a couple of eagle barreled pistols in his hands. They were defensive weapons in the Sarsen riot. Fired them among the crowd of boys. Only the two mentioned above were struck. Michael O'Brien, receiving a pellet in the right wrist, which embedded itself there, and Matthew receiving a slight scratch on the arm. Michael was taken to the Long Island College hospital, where, after much suffering, Dignan was arrested on the complaint of the mother of the boys, and was remanded by Judge Bergen. Dignan was once before arrested for a similar offense.

An Alderman Indicted.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., June 26.—A day or two ago the grand jury sitting here returned four indictments against one of their number, and was enjoined as to the parties presented. It transpires that two of the indictments are against Alderman James Miller Kelly, president of the common council, charging him with asking and with agreeing to accept a bribe of $2,000 for his influence in securing the passage of an ordinance granting the Baltimore and Ohio Telegraph company the right to enter this city with their lines.

He was discovered by a stage driver, and a note in his pocket bore the words, "O'Neill, the horse thief." The report reached this city that four more of the gang were pursued north to Moose river, where a fight ensued and one thief was shot and three others hanged. The farmers have been exasperated and rejoice over the news.

Freeman Raisin entered suit in the superior court against the Third National bank of Baltimore for $25,000 damages, alleging that the bank, having obtained three judgments against E. W. I. Raisin & Co., through which it gained 100 shares of Raisin Fertiliser stock, the personal property of the plaintiff, Julia A. Raisin and Joseph J. Johnson also entered suit against the bank for $20,000 and $30,000 damages respectively, the complaint being similar to that of J. Freeman Raisin.

To Our Friends.

The Reform Club of Plainfield having realized generous cash contributions sufficient to pay the rent, taxes and insurance for formerly known as the Second Baptist Church, corner of Second street and Central avenue, this city, and funds being likewise available, chiefly through the noble exertions of the Christian Temperance Ladies, to furnish and equip the purchased building when properly altered and repaired for the practical use of the Club, respectfully though urgently appeal to the liberality and kindly feelings of the citizens of Plainfield and vicinity for additional means to fully complete such needed alterations and repairs.

The good work already accomplished by the Reform Club, under the approving smile of Divine Providence and the still greater work awaiting future efforts, certainly commend it to the favorable consideration and support of every friend of humanity.

The pecuniary demands made upon the public for various laudable objects, cannot lessen our claim of the Club to solicit further aid, but waiving as its members do the all important Temperance reform they are striving to permanently establish, emboldens them to thus ask and induces them to believe, that every and enlightened community will follow the asking.

Donations to the aforesaid purpose to the extent of individual ability and inclination, will be thankfully received and acknowledged by the officers of the Club, or either member of its Executive or Subscription Committees, the names of whom are hereunto subscribed.

BISHOP MATTHEW SIMPSON.

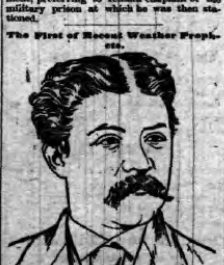
Cadiz, Ohio, gave the eloquent Bishop Simpson to the world, June 21, 1811. At 21 he graduated at Allegany college, Meadville, Pa. A course of medical studies was then pursued for about a year, and in 1835 he started in business as a physician. Soon, however, he abandoned medicine to enter the pulpit, and the same year obtained license to preach in Methodist churches, and since then few preachers have accomplished as much good through their eloquence as Bishop Simpson has. It is somewhat remarkable that he achieved such success as a preacher, when it is known that in early youth he was averse to speaking in public, and at one time did not ever care to make comprehensive the value of hard work as one of the chief lessons of his career. His mastery of English speech and his statements as a scholar were the products of laborious application under the stimulus of an unextinguishable zeal in the cause in which he devoted his life when in 1839, at the age of 18 years, he was received into the Methodist church. After his graduation, his first pastoral work was in the Pittsburg conference, where he was soon recognized as a young man of unusual ability and zeal. He was professor of natural science in Allegheny college from 1837 to 1838, president of the Indiana Asbury university from 1839 to 1848, and editor of The Western Christian Advocate from 1848 to 1852, the latter year being the date of his ordination as a bishop, in Boston. For forty-two years he has performed the work of the bishopric with distinguished efficiency, and his life of seventy-two years has been one of the most useful of the time.

The New Catholic Archbishop of Philadelphia.

RIGHT REV. BISHOP P. J. RYAN.

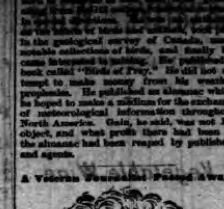
Archbishop Patrick John Ryan, of St. Louis, has been appointed to the vacant Philadelphia see, vice Archbishop Wood, deceased. He is 50 years of age, and was made coadjutor to Archbishop Kendrick April 24, 1872. He ranks decidedly high as a scholar, orator and theologian. Archbishop Ryan is among the most distinguished prelates in the Roman Catholic hierarchy in America. His pulpit utterances are expressed in the choicest language; his rhetoric is of a finished, polished style, and his manner of delivery is most impressive. His bearing is the embodiment of candor; he has a strong and well-modulated voice, and his impressive words are emphasized by forcible gesture. During his long residence as bishop in St. Louis, he has been usually assigned to speak in the cathedral on alternate Sundays, and the occasions to hear him, from what they were always signalized by enormous congregations, among which were many Protestants. The province over which the Archbishop of Philadelphia exercises his functions embraces the Episcopal see of Erie, of which Right, Rev. Tobias Mullen is bishop; Harrisburg, Rev. James F. Shanan, bishop; Pittsburg, Right Rev. S. Tuigg, bishop, and Scranton, Rev. William O'Hara, bishop. The province has a Catholic population of over 600,000. During the war Bishop Ryan was recommended by Gen. Blair as a chaplain in the United States army; he declined the appointment, preferring to remain chaplain of the military prison at which he was then stationed.

The First of Recent Weather Prophets.



HENRY U. VENNOR.

Mr. Vennor, who died on June 6, at Montreal, succeeded but a few years ago in having his name circulated extensively in connection with the weather, a reputation which was his influence that many people would arrange their dates for travelling, moving or any outdoor matters of importance to suit the way he said the signs, on which Mr. Vennor had predicted storms. He was the first of the present group of weather prophets, and the least scientific of them among them. He made a study of the course of storms for many years, and reached his guesses by comparing atmospheric conditions at the time with similar ones in the past. He was most successful in his local predictions, and did not at any time seek to



GEN. JAMES WATSON WEBB.

The death of Gen. Webb, which occurred in New York City on June 7, at the age of 82 years, removes the last of the journalistic leaders of that generation, and recalls some of his personal reminiscences particularly interesting. In 1827 Gen. Webb became editor and proprietor of The New York Morning Courier, and two years later he purchased The Enquirer from Mr. M. Noah, James Gordon Bennett being a reporter on the latter paper at the time. In those days the ship news was the most important matter that it is to-day, was collected by a rowboat. Mr. Webb soon organized a news establishment, with the schooner Eclipse at its head. The other three New York journals then united and also employed a schooner. Webb then built a 180-ton schooner that could outsail any vessel in the harbor. She was named The Courier and Enquirer. She cruised 70 or 75 miles to sea, boarding vessels and sending their news and newspaper files to the city. Webb next directed his attention to improving the facilities for obtaining news by land. The mail arrangements were then such that the proceedings of congress, on Monday, for instance, appeared in the New York papers on the following Thursday. Mr. Webb determined that he could obtain the time by one day. He established a daily horse express between New York and Washington, for which he paid $7,000 per month. It was a great undertaking for those days, but it paid.

"What Are We Here For, If Not the Office?"

WEBSTER FLANAGAN.

Mr. Flanagan was born at Clarksburg, Breckenridge county, Ky., January 9, 1824. His father, J. W. Flanagan, who was a United States senator from Texas from 1870 to 1876, moved to Texas when Webster was 9 years old, and settled in Rusk county. Father and son have since been identified with some of the most important interests of their state. The latter was licensed to practice law when he was 18 years old. Early in life he took an interest in politics, filling various local offices and being an elector on the Bell and Everett ticket. At the outbreak of the war he was commissioned by Gov. Houston as a brigadier-general of volunteers, and in the trying years of strife did what he could to establish a southern confederacy. At the end of the war he went over to the winning side, and in 1865 he was appointed judge of the Fifth judicial district. In 1866 he was elected to the state constitutional convention. In 1869 he was elected to the state senate, and two years after was elected lieutenant governor of the state. In 1875 he was sent to represent his district at another constitutional convention, then assisting in the formation and adoption of two state constitutions. In 1872 he was chairman of the Texas delegation to the Republican national convention, and in 1876 he was one of the Texas members of the Grand Old Party of 306 at the Chicago convention. It was here that he raised the famous question which brought him prominently before the country as a man of great statesmanship with a keen sense of the objects of a political party. Mr. Barbor, a delegate from Connecticut, the morning after the platform had been agreed upon, brought in a civil service plank embodying extreme New England notions of civil service reform, and ingeniously explored the manifestations that the war aroused in him, that everybody had a main eye to the office. Mr. Flannagan lost all patience at this, declaring the resolution was "barmy," and asked, "What are we here for?" the question being hailed with roars of laughter.

Mr. Flannagan is president of the Henriette and Overton railroad, and declares that next to the pride he feels in fighting civil service reform cranks he takes most in possessing the finest herd of Jersey cattle south of the Ohio river.

Washington Territory Resolved.
(San Francisco Alta.)

A gentleman who has just returned from Washington Territory was asked how he liked the country. "Well, sir," he replied, "every bunch of willows is a mighty forest, every frog pond a sylvan lake, every weed is a second Niagara, every ridge of rocks a gold mine, every town a county seat, and every man alive."

EDSALL'S EXTRA!

We take pleasure in making the announcement to the citizens of Plainfield and vicinity, that we have just received a full line of one of the BEST and MOST reliable brands of

BLACK SILKS

Imported. It is of the well-known manufacture that was formerly imported by A. T. Stewart & Co., and sold in their retail department for many years, and has stood the most trying test and proved its unquestionable excellence to thousands who have worn it and can testify of its real worth and beauty.

It is still retailed by the successors of the old Stewart house, and by a special arrangement with the Importing Department we are enabled to offer it at precisely the same figures as their retail department, viz:

Black Silk
No. 2006 at $1.50
No. 2007 at 1.75
No. 2008 at 2.00
No. 2009 at 2.25
Edsall's.

They are by far the handsomest goods we have ever handled, and possess the most intrinsic value, and the fact that we can sell goods which have had such an experience as these at exactly the same prices as one of the largest and most popular houses in New York ought to be a sufficient inducement for Ladies to give Home trade the preference.

Locals.

—A prodigy of a dog is to be at Gerstel's to-night.

—Trotting every Saturday afternoon at the Fair Grounds, as a social pastime.

—A boy, named Frobble Moore, was badly bitten by a dog on Crescent avenue Wednesday.

—The grounds and building recently purchased by the Reform Club are being put in order.

—The Somerset County Teachers' Association will meet at Somerville in the school building to-morrow.

—The Young People's Union, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, will give a social in the lecture room of the church on Monday evening.

—The Blaine and Logan flag recently raised on Fifth street by Mr. Gershom Evans is now a thing of the past, the storm having torn its emblem into shreds.

—Gamble Engine Co., No. 1, have received their new flag, which arrived yesterday. It is of English bunting and about 20 feet long, and will be raised on July 4th.

—The police finally succeeded in arresting Peter Schneiderwind. He was fined $5, which he paid and was released. The charge was interfering with an officer.

—The plow which has been doing such good service lately in cleaning out and deepening the gutters in some of our streets, could be of use on Fifth street—so residents there say.

—It appears that ladies of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union have frequently complained to Mayor Manson of the Bonnworth house, in connection with several others, as places where intoxicants had been sold without a license, and that the Mayor had on each occasion brought the matter to the attention of both the former and the present Chief of Police. The former chief could not secure evidence. The present chief has been more successful, at least in one case.

The Battle of Pants and Petticoats.

There appears to be some misunderstanding between the Ladies' League of the G. A. R. and Veteran Club No. 2. The ladies claim to be a regularly chartered organization. The Veterans claim that they are chartered only as an auxiliary of the Post, and that, at a recent meeting, this connection was by resolution practically revoked, thereby rendering the charter void. The ladies claim that the Post have no power to do this. The case appears to have become aggravated by a notice among the society notices on our fourth page of the Ladies' League, which they requested us to insert. Members of the Post have requested us to omit the notice, but we refused to do so, because the request did not seem a proper one for one organization to expect us to discriminate against another organization.

To-day we received a second request, as per letter hereunto annexed:

Headquarters Whitfield Scott Post, No. 73,
Grand Army of the Republic,
Department of New Jersey.
Plainfield, June 27, 1884.

To the Publisher Daily News:

DEAR SIR:—At the regular encampment of above Post held in Post Rooms, June 26, 1884, the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That the Adjutant be authorized to request the publisher of the EVENING NEWS to remove from his paper the words Auxiliary to Whitfield Scott Post, where they appear under notice of Garfield League.

Respectfully,
GEO. W. MOORE,
Post Adjt.

It seems like small business to be quarreling about, and particularly for members of the Grand Army of the Republic to array themselves against women. We are afraid that the "boys in blue" will find that the girls in petticoats are going to be equal to or not with them were the boys in gray, and that the girls will triumph as they always do, even over veterans. We think the "boys" in this instance have got left, and had better manfully acknowledge their defeat, shake hands with their fair conquerors and "Let us have peace."

While there is such an organization and we publish each notice we cannot discriminate.

Still Another Fire.

The large barn belonging to Mr. D. F. Randolph at the corner of seventh and Liberty streets, together with its contents including three wagons, a lot of harness and hay, was burned this morning. The fire was discovered about one o'clock and the alarm was promptly responded to by the firemen. We understand that a horse belonging to Mr. Randolph died at the barn a few months ago and that since then it has not been used. Fire is said to have been of incendiary origin. The Mr. Randolph referred to has a store in Front street, which has been the scene of several fires within a few months. The loss on the barn is covered by insurance. The stock consisting of several wagons, harness, etc., was a total loss. Mr. Randolph desires to thank the firemen for their prompt endeavors to save his property.

Personal.

Mr. E. M. Fairbern and family, of this city, have gone summering to Muncy, Pa.

Mrs. M. A. Gardner has taken Kenmore Cottage, Asbury Park, for the summer. She started thereto yesterday.

Miss Jones, public school teacher of this city, started yesterday for her home in Pupart, Pa., to spend vacation.

Mr. W. R. Potts and family of West Seventh street, left to-day to occupy their Cottage at Monmouth Beach for the Summer.

The Fourteenth Annual Commencement of the High School took place last evening in the Methodist Episcopal Church. PRESENTATION OF DIPLOMAS.
Class Song
(words by a member.)
Quartette—Rigoletto.....Verdi

Miss Belle Clem warmly espoused the cause of the unfortunate queen, Marie Antoinette, and with skillful hand made clear the various passages in her life of which her calumniators made so much. Miss Clem's bearing was easy and dignified, and, for the first speaker of the evening, exhibited a degree of composure to be commended.

Miss Lena Bass traced the history of the fabled Nautilus as given in Holmes' poem of "The Chambered Nautilus." The poet, said the essayist, in this poem shows many of the similitudes of a Bryant than the gentility of a Holmes. He shows himself a true poet in giving to "airy nothing a local habitation and a name."

Miss Marie Du Bois gave a very original and fairy-like bit of composition in her charming essay on "Dame Nature and her Twelve Children." The changing months glided swiftly by led by her skilful pen, and the last hour of the dying year came but too soon.

In "Marine Views of Tennyson" Miss Florence Clark brought forth some points which might escape the non-critical readers of the Laureate's poems. The essayist showed the life-likeness of several of the poet's descriptions; and the "views," as interpreted by her, had the air of the sea lingering round them.

Miss Madge Sutphen's Owl was a unique production, and very gracefully given. The history of this one "of all the creatures in fur and feathers" which has commanded so much attention from gods and from men, was given from the time of the beginning of the race through the genre of Minerva, great goddess of wisdom, down to the present day, when an owl is an owl pure and simple, with none of its ancient wisdom or power.

A very readable and attractive essay was that made by Miss Ida Spicer from the subject, "William of Orange." His virtues were shown forth in very flowing language. The essay closed with the fine tribute paid him by an American historian. "He went through life bearing a people's sorrows with a smiling face, and when he died the little children cried in the streets."

Miss Florence Stevens' essay on "The Poet's Corner" in Westminster Abbey brought to mind many of the noted names in literature. The opening description of the towers of the Abbey rising in the clouds of a L. index sky was finely given, as was also the thoughts arising from beholding the statue of Milton, "who carved for himself," said the essayist, "a far greater and grander monument."

Miss Alice Holmes' "World without Music" in connection with her Valedictory was one of the finest essays of the evening. We take pleasure in reproducing it.

A WORLD WITHOUT MUSIC, WITH VALEDICTORY.

It is decreed by a "world without music." The sun has burst upon the dark cold earth in all its splendor, sending light and warmth into every crevice. The earth is arrayed in its most exquisite robe; sweet scented flowers adorn beautiful gardens, the fields are dotted with daisies, the trees are laden with foliage, merry birds fly from tree to tree—a beautiful morning picture, yet something is wanting, something for which the ear listens with intense longing. It comes not. Not a music origin sat upon the earth! No happy chirp, no carolling of birds, no maiden's song to make the dreamer, no "merry whistled tune" of the laborer, going to his homely tasks.

In the gardens and between the pleasant sounds of nature are hushed. Quiet reigns supreme as the orchard where the industrious bees are toiling busily. In the meadows the reapers are whetting their scythes, but no ditties arise from them, no singing sound of song, no joyous burst of song.

We pass the village green, a place of perfect happiness, where at the close of day, the merry children frolic in innocent glee. We listen to their voices, but their laughter is but a disturbance sound which grates upon our ear; and their words, though bright and cheery, bear no harmony, no delightful cadence to the passer-by.

It is twilight, and as we wander through the long rural fields and by the leaping brook, all is perfect stillness, which ceases in no some deep longing. Perhaps it is for the the musical murmur of the babbling stream, as it ripples from rock to rock and hastens onward to the sea, perhaps it is for the wind ever whispering as it rustles the green leaves; perhaps it is for the cricket's cheerful chirp; perhaps for the whippoorwill's mournful wail—we feel as an unspeakable desire for some sweet note to awaken Nature from her drowsious sleep.

Another day, and we gaze upon a scene of intense interest. Through the narrow streets of a little village marches a regiment of soldiers. A strange dispiriting influence hovers over that band of men. Their faces bear the marks of fierce struggles and unsuccessful conflicts. Their countenances tell of weary marching through unknown and solitary places under the torrid sun; of intense hunger and thirst. What a wonderful change would be wrought in the hearts by a few strains of martial music! Instantly their step would brighten with hope and courage; and refreshed and strengthened they would resume their toilsome march, strong to suffer for their country.

In one of the churches of a busy metropolis a multitude of waiting, expectant worshippers are seated. The sermon, a masterpiece of thought and eloquence, is delivered in a manner bearing its worth, and after a sincere and prayerful season of congregation the hymns, full of holy thought, and rich with sweet and beautiful language; and how they would receive peace and comfort as they poured forth their voices in harmonious strains.

Through the crowded city streets we hurry, and as the busy populace surges by us, like a wave which owns no resistance, we note the life history, so vividly written on each countenance. Here is a man whose soul is dark, whose life knows no purifying influence. No sweet, uplifting music has been his beneficent angel, restraining him from "strategems and spoils;" no memories of sweet songs recall to him his innocent childhood days, music which might have influenced his life. But now, impure thoughts and deeds have held supreme sway, and at last have left their impression on his dis-ordered face.

Before us looms a massive building, surrounded by a dainty garden, breathing out sweet fragrance upon the passer-by. We enter its portal, and, leaving the corridor behind us, we walk through the long apartments. How pleasant is the quiet of this spot, after the turmoil of the outside world, but we feel a deep pang of sorrow as we gaze upon the sorry cots placed side by side and on the patient sufferers. The breeze sweeps through the room bearing the sound of distant bells as they toll the dying hour. How strange and discordant is their peal. We can almost hear them swinging to and fro with a jangling, clanging sound which seems to say, the world is out of tune and happiness is unknown. How we long to minister some comfort to those weary ones, but the needed grace is wanting, and we turn away with saddened hearts.

Thus do we wend our way through the busy world, finding on every hand a void, an unsatisfied desire. But the night is dying, and as the solemn bells cast forth their discordant notes, a clear sweet chime is heard. Clearer and clearer it grows until it alone echoes and reverberates throughout the land. In ecstatic accord with the joyful bells, the world as it were at instant all nature joins in the triumphal pean, which swells and deepens till, with a burst of harmony it ascends into the sky. Fancy's dream is over, life really has come.

Yes, the reality has indeed come, and we to-night, thankful that the sweet awakening is a possibility, and that harmony has exerted a hidden power which shall rest on our school life, turn in a different glance upon the happy days that are past. Four years ago we entered the High School with light and buoyant hearts; we knew not yet the thoughtful meaning of study-like. Then began a new era. With the guidance of our faithful teachers we walked through the streets of ancient Greece, to the solemn music of the lyre; we talked with the great Roman philosophers and statesmen, while through the air rang the sweet tones of some noted hero chanting his exquisite stanzas; we peered into the hundred mysteries of the great world of physics, trying to catch the music of the "Spheres," and seeking to hear the earth sing for joy at her vast store of knowledge; we learned the secrets of the leaves and flowers hearing the sweet carol of the birds, their lovel essayings; we read the thoughts of others in the beautiful Latin verse, while the musical flow of the rythmical lines bore sweet melody to our ears; and we solved with intense interest the abstruse problems of Geometry, finding in the intricate relations of lines and angles complicated music, yet perfect harmony.

Like an exquisite symphony has our school life been. At first the melody was faint and sweet; at times, it almost seemed as if a discordant note had been struck, but quickly it blended with a passage of most surpassing beauty and the harmony rolled on, twice has it been interrupted by the solemn dirge that we bade farewell to two of our number; many times has it become a parting song, as one by one our school mates glided from our midst, to the busy mart where turmoil and discord reign. But now, to-night the melody deepens and increased as we welcomed new faces to our ranks.

But now to-night a band of fourteen, thirteen maidens and one boy, whose courage and manly perseverance have carried him through the Senior year, the sole representative of his sex, we stand listening to the last notes of the beautiful harmony as in minor it peals forth its farewell.

To you our teachers and Board of Education, who have so kindly aided us in our search for knowledge, and have surrounded us with pleasant and useful helps for acquiring a deeper insight into the great secrets of the world and a nearer association with the bright stars of this lower firmament, we bid a last farewell.

And now, my schoolmates, our parting hour has come. Long has it been the tie between us, and can we wholly loosen it to-night? Surely, hereafter we shall be touched and influenced by the common interests which have affected our school lives. May the future be one continuous melody, delightful all by its brightness and beauty, although a minor chord must enter into the opening harmony to-night as we speak the word, Farewell.

The prizes were awarded by Judge Harper and by Mr. Murray as follows:

First Prize in Penmanship, Maud A. Bowers.

The address to the graduates by the Rev. A. H. Tuttle followed the presentation of prizes, and was one of the most masterly ever heard in this city. He said:

It is well-known that in the Middle Ages when a Knight went forth, his patron bound about his neck an "ear of silence," that no evil sounds might enter to offend his ear, and no harsh discordant tones mar the music of his soul. I have no such charm to give you to-night, and am happy to say that I have something far more potent than an amulet, something that will takes hold of the invisible, and exerts a wonderful influence. It is a simple truth, a commonplace. Things that master are truths. The highest human attainment and that most worthy of your highest endeavor is not that which generally animates youth. Character is the talisman I give you now. It is not merely goodness. It is the development of the best that is in you. All are richly endowed, and there is in the heart of no one proper mental or spiritual possibilities in you. Polished and refined, the Great Book teaches, is the crown of life. You are queens and kings; and you who come here are not finishing your education, but are beginning one that well might occupy a life of three score and ten.

The speaker then mentioned several things which might be useful to the graduates in preventing disappointment to the hopes raised by the occasion, and exhorted upon them in a very masterly manner. In speaking of the fact of their being but one young man among the graduates, the speaker earnestly urged the young man of the lower classes to persevere to the end.

On the conclusion of the address, President Kirkner, of the Board of Trustees, in a neat speech presented the diplomas to the graduates. After receiving their diplomas the class sang the farewell hymn and faced the audience in a semi-circle, preparatory to singing the Class Song. Owing to some misunderstanding with the band the song was not started properly, and for a time it seemed to promise a complete failure, but the rich sweet voice of the valedictorian came to the rescue, and without any accompaniment the song was successfully sung. The words, composed by Miss Marie DuBois, a member of the class, were as follows:

Farewell, ye golden shod days,
So happy and so bright;
Though ye have gone forever,
Still shines your beaming light.
Farewell, farewell, to thee farewell.

But now we've come to sever
The ties that bind us fast;
While memory brings before us
The flowers of the past.
Farewell, farewell, bright days farewell.

In parting from each other,
We send a happy chain;
Yet hoping as we linger
That we shall meet, again.
Farewell, farewell, sweet ones farewell.

The following are the names of the graduates, together with their class motto:

William C. Hubbard, Ida L. Spicer,
Florence A. Stevens, Madge L. Sutphen.

As regards the scholarship of the members of the class, it is but just to say, having also, of course, the valedictorian, that Miss Belle Clem and Miss Ida Spicer deserve honorable mention.

Following the Commencement exercises a Reception was given the graduates in the assembly room of the School by the Classes '82 and '83. The hall was tastefully decorated with oak twigs, flowers, chinese parasols and other articles. The Seventh Regiment Band, which did duty at the Commencement, furnished the music. A number of graduates and former members of the school were present and the occasion was one which will long be remembered by the participants.

Somerville Republicans Organizing.

The meeting of Republicans in Somerset Hall, Somerville, last evening, which a delegation consisting of Messrs. Charles Plass, Daniel Smalley and Charles A. Godown, of North Plainfield attended, resulted in the organization of a campaign Blaine and Logan club.

Mr. Alexander G. Anderson of Somerville was made President of the meeting, and the following, all of Somerville, were elected officers of the club.

President—H. A. Hoyt.
Corresponding Sec'y—Lorne Vredenburg.
Recording Secretary—James L. Griggs.
Treasurer—William H. Long.

Speeches were made by Mr. H. A. Hoyt, who is a son of ex-Gov. Hoyt of Pennsylvania; by Mr. Charles Place of North Plainfield; and by Mr. C. H. Cuadsey of Easton, Pa., who was a delegate to the convention at Chicago.

The meeting was well attended and enthusiastic.

Prior to the meeting there was a public parade, the drum corps of Raritan and of Somerville, furnishing the music, and the populace enlivening the occasion by a display of fireworks along the line of march.

—The weekly Democratic organ of this city covertly slurs Mayor Manson at every opportunity, but shields such a scamp as Policeman Kelly. They are all Democrats but of a very different stripe. Why is this thus? Is it the nature of the beast?

He Narrates the Experience of a Friend to His Assistant.

[New York Sun.]

They All Insisted Their Umbrellas.

[Cincinnati Enquirer.]

Yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock the sun was shining brightly. There was not even an indication of rain. Coroner Mussrud, who is noted for a practical joke, had his silver handled umbrella with him, however. As he turned to Harry Bennett, walking up street, he said: "I'm going to hist this thing just to see what the people will do."

They had been walking half a square, when a woman with a market-basket and a green gingham umbrella, as Robinson's circus tent, raised it and went trudging along. As they passed through the Court street market space every man who met them and had an umbrella held it over his head. Silver handled umbrellas with bird, however. Silver handled umbrellas with bird

THE RIVER.

[Suggested by the Fifteenth Psalm of Cleopha.]

The river flows forever—
The moon upon it shines—
One walks beside the river
With heart that longs and pines.

A breeze moves on the river—
The moon shakes to its flow—
He grieves, and grieves forever,
For days of long ago.

O softly flowing river,
That flowed to the sea,
No more shall she, forever,
Return to walk by thee.

The grieving, moaning river
Speaks of her, to its flow—
Of dear days, gone forever,
The days of long ago.

He whispers to the river,
Of love's long past delight—
He feels she lives forever,
In a kingdom out of sight.

Between the moon and river
Low voices seem to say,
"Forever and forever—
Some day, some blessed day!"

Between the moon and river,
Her spirit seems to glide—
He cries—"To-day, forever,
I'll clasp thee, oh, my bride!"

And there, beside the river,
His heart grows strong and pure—
Since not, indeed, forever
Shall Resistance endure.

And the gleaming, pilgrim river,
As it lapses toward the sea,
Sighs, "Ever and forever,
Together they shall be."

PHILIP BUCKER MARSTON.

The Yankees' Leathery Complexions.

[Chicago Tribune.]

Robert Laird Collier writes to The Boston Herald that, being a brother of waster, he is often told in England that the indigestion of the American nation, and the leathery complexions of the Yankees, are the result of drinking ice water. On the other hand, the blooming countenances of the English come from indulging in something stronger than cold Adam's ale. Mr. Collier writes: "The Church of England temperance society is upon the whole the most promising agency in England in the reform movement. Clergymen and ministers of religion drink pretty much as freely as any other class of persons, and their private and public example in England is probably greater than in any other Protestant country. Within about two years considerable numbers of clergymen and ministers have become total abstainers, and it is for the first time not wholly necessary for one to decline wines at the dinner-table and in public."

Blaine in the South.

PHILADELPHIA, June 27.—A Washington special to The Evening Telegraph says: A feature of the campaign now being marked out at Augusta is to push for several days southern states. It is Blaine's belief that the Republicans can make a fighting chance in the Virginias, North Carolina, Florida, Tennessee and Maryland, and a determined effort will be made to carry these states.

One question now under discussion relates to the part Blaine shall take personally in the canvass. He himself is rather disinclined to take the stump unless there shall be some special necessity, but Logan and others are urging him to do so, feeling that his rare powers as a political speaker will help the party's chances. If Blaine will decide to speak at all he will probably devote his best energies to New York and the south.

In case he goes on the stump it is very likely he may be accompanied by some other speakers, who will do most of the talking, leaving the candidate to simply "meet the people" by his presence and a few friendly and forcible remarks. It is not expected that he will speak in his own state or any where except where the battle is doubtful.

Workingmen Ratify Butler's Nomination.

BOSTON, June 27.—Faneuil hall was two-thirds filled last night at the meeting of workingmen to ratify the nomination of Gen. Butler for president. Addresses were made by Ralph Beaumont, of Elmira, N. Y., and others. The following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That the workingmen of Massachusetts, having implicit confidence in their ability and honesty, Benjamin F. Butler, do congratulate him on the nomination already made and most cordially commend him to the Democratic convention at Chicago for their nomination for president. No other man can unite so effectually all the elements comprising the industrial classes of the entire country, and it is our firm belief that his name is a talisman to lead us on to victory and that the nomination of any other man by the democratic convention will insure defeat to that party.

Resolved, That we take this occasion to again pledge to Gen. Butler our hearty and united and unflinching support for his honesty, integrity and ability in the interests of the workingmen throughout America.

North Carolina Democrats.

RALEIGH, June 27.—The Democratic state convention selected the following ticket: State treasurer, Donald Bain; superintendent of instruction, A. M. Finger; attorney-general, T. F. Davidson; secretary of state, W. H. Saunders; auditor, W. P. Robert; justice supreme court, A. S. Merrimon.

The delegates at large to the national convention are Thomas Ruffin, William P. Bynum, Julian S. Carr and George H. Brown. They lean to the opinion that it is advisable to support Cleveland, while they are in sympathy with Bayard.

The platform favors the unconditional and immediate repeal of the whole internal revenue system, and calls for a reduction of taxes to avoid a surplus in the treasury.

The Florida Democrats.

PENSACOLA, Fla., June 27.—The Democratic state convention reassembled to ballot for governor. Barnes withdrew his name. On the fourth ballot Perry received 156 and Pasco 135 votes. On the fifty Perry received 168, Pasco 122, and on the sixth Perry 177, Pasco 114. Peace appeared in the convention by permission and was allowed to move that the nomination of Perry be made by acclamation, which was carried.

South Carolina for Cleveland.

COLUMBIA, S. C., June 27.—The Democratic state convention assembled at noon. The delegates will not be instructed, but are pledged for Cleveland.

Seven Hundred Liquor Men in Court.

PHILADELPHIA, June 27.—Seven hundred liquor dealers were in court to answer the charge of having violated the law of 1858 in having in their places either liquor-heads, taps or stand pipes and selling less than by the quart measure. It puzzled the court as to how to get at so many cases in a reasonable time, but the district attorney suggested that each defendant be required to file an answer either admitting or denying the allegation. This plan was agreed to and a rule to answer ordered until the first Monday in August.

To Our Friends.

The Reform Club of Plainfield having realized generous cash contributions sufficient to pay for and secure title to the property formerly known as the Second Baptist Church, corner of Second street and Central avenue, this city, and finds the building likewise available, chiefly through the noble exertions of the Christian Temperance Ladies, to furnish and equip the purchased building when prevented, altered and repaired for the practical use of the Club, respectfully though urgently appeal to the liberality and kindly feelings of the citizens of Plainfield and vicinity for additional means to enable such needful alterations and repairs.

"Mos' married folks quarrels more or less," remarked Uncle Mose; "but I knows a man and his wife what hasn't had a fuss for de las' yeahs."

"Am dey libbin togedder?"

"Certainly! Dey lifts in de same house. She goes off cherry mawnin' and washes by de day."

"But p'raps dey quarrels at night. How does you know dey don't?"

"Dey don't lash a bit o' trubble, I tell yer. She am out washin' all day, and her husband, he am night watchman in a big sto' on Amelia avenue. Reasonable Snake Stories.
[Puck.]

Matilda, Rebecca and Josephine, the little 3-year old daughters of Squire Chalmers, of Helena, Ala., play "cat's cradle" with a garter snake. Every day, when they are on the front stoop, the snake comes out from under an evergreen, crawls up on the stoop, and holds its tail in its mouth, that they may play without tying the ends of it together.

While Letitia Grimsby was lying asleep in a hammock on the front porch among the honeysuckles, one day last week a snake came out of an adjoining field, crawled up into the hammock, and braided her hair. When Letitia awoke she was greatly astonished to find her hair braided, but supposed it the act of her sister, as the snake had disappeared.

On the following day the same thing occurred again, and her sister having seen it, aroused the young lady after the snake had gone, and told her what had happened. At present time the girls in the Grimsby family never braid their hair at all. When they want it braided they simply lie in the hammock until it grows lonely here, and the snake does the business for them.

"No cause for alarm."

A Maine Pie Story.
[Waterbury American.]

Blaine used to tell a story to express the feelings of Republicans toward the administration of Mr. Hayes. A party of young men were camping out in the Maine woods. One was selected to cook, and it was agreed that the first man to see an exhibition of the cuisine should assume the duties of cook himself. The fare was simply villainous, but all held their peace. One day some pie was served that was thought more villainous than anything that had gone before it. The man at the head of the table looked around upon the faces of his companions, and it occurred to him that a condition nearer akin to rebellion was pictured upon the face of his vis-a-vis than upon the countenance of any other of the unfortunates. Addressing him severely, he said: "What do you think of this pie?" With the utmost emphasis the reply came: "I think it's about the blamedest blankedest pie that I ever!" And then the recollection of the agreement flashed across the speaker, and, with a beaming countenance and tone of demonstrative delight, he hastened to add: "But I like it."

PARK HOUSE.

The above cut of the Park House, the well-known hotel at the corner of Park avenue and Eight street, opposite the City Park, will be immediately recognized as a faithful representation of one of the best hotels in the country.

Since the assumption of the proprietorship by Mr. C. L. Johnson last season, the Park House has taken a fresh start, and has added greatly to the good reputation it already had. The hope have made it a favorite resort for the young people, who enjoy dancing and social intercourse.

The large and airy halls and piazzas the well ventilated and nicely furnished rooms and the care and attention manifested for the comfort and convenience of the guests and their friends make this hotel as the advertisement states, a favorite Summer resort." Mr. and Mrs. Johnson have many warm friends in this city and vicinity who rejoice at their successful management. The present season promises to be one of the best the house has yet had.

Remarkable.

Thorn, the photographer, of this city, has just returned from a short sojourn among the Catskills. He reports a great deal of damage done by the late frosts in the foothills and valleys, notably the valley of the Kaaterskill. Ice formed a quarter of an inch in thickness, fruits of all kinds were killed, and many of the trees are barren of leaves. A few varieties are putting out new foliage. The forests look as if a fire had passed through them. Mr. Thorn examined what Prof. Guyot states to be the finest evidences of the glacial period on this section of the globe. Large plateaus of striated rocks, granite boulders, and metamorphosed rocks, all distinctive glacial features. The rocks being very hard have retained their striat, many of the markings being over half an inch in depth. He brought home specimens, secured by the aid of a cold chisel.

A Wonderful Dog.

An audience of upwards of 100 persons assembled at Gould's Billiard Parlor to witness an exhibition of a dog named "Bob" last evening. The animal is a very handsome one and displayed a degree of intelligence which probably far surpassed anything of the kind ever before witnessed by the spectators.

The billiard tables in the back part of the room were covered by heavy planks forming a platform, on which were placed a lot of blocks having a letter of the alphabet printed upon each. Other similar blocks had figures. The man in charge called out a word for the dog to spell, which the animal did, by taking each proper block by his teeth by a loop on top, and depositing the block at his master's feet. This was repeated with numerous words, some given by the audience, the trainer in some instances not even repeating them. When the numbers the dog would pick out any figure called for by the audience, or pick out a block having the result by addition or subtraction. The dog also picked out any color from a number of colored blocks. Every test was correctly responded to, and the dog seemingly responded by wagging his tail. All his feats were simply marvelous.

MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE.

One of the soundest articles on that much debated question, "Marriage and Divorce," that has ever appeared in public print may be seen in the North American Review for July over the signature of Judge Noah Davis. Clear, logical, judicial, it voices the sentiment of the law abiding, God-fearing element of the country, and shows the eminent ability of the great jurist to discuss a question of the gravest importance.

That the marital relation is the normal condition of adult mankind is an aphorism that needs little argument to prove its truth. Since such is the case, the subject of marriage is so deeply interwoven with the public interest, that the State, whatever be its form of government, must, as a matter of self preservation, take the institution into its charge by provision of laws enacted for its control and protection. It will be easily seen that society is the most interested in the existence and perpetuity of the marriage relation; so it is that society in most deeply concerned in the principle which perpetuates those conditions of life, because in invades the home, defiles its sanctities, lays open its privacies, dishonors its parentage, pollutes its childhood and arrests the only pure revenues of human life. Therefore in considering the subject of divorce, the interests of society are first and paramount; those of individuals are subordinate and secondary. When people marry, they in reality contract with society to respect and perform all the functions and duties of that relation for the welfare of society; to set up the family, to create a lineage and rear it to good citizenship for heaven and to peace, in order to maintain the State.

Herein lies the fallacy of the notion regarding divorce that prevails to a large extent at the present time. The advocates of free-and-easy divorce ignore the family claims, exaggerate the individual, and wholly discord the claims of the State. Judge Davis takes the ground that divorce should be granted only for one cause; namely, infidelity. He deprecates the prevailing feeling that looks upon divorce without a shock and without a thought of the injury done to public morals, and he says the manifold evils that will unfailingly proceed from the slight regard in which the marital obligation is held—decrease in the growth of families, laxity of morals, illegitimacy and numerous others.

Judge Davis advocates an amendment of two words to the fourth part of section VIII. of the Constitution so that it shall read: "Congress shall have power to establish a rule to naturalization, and uniform laws on the subject of bankruptcy and divorce throughout the United States." He also lays down certain rules that should be observed, such as the time to elapse before divorces are granted, and the manner and proceedings in all such cases.

There is not the least doubt that a uniform divorce law, made by Congress and applicable to all States alike, would do away entirely with the present shameful system.

The Congressman who will successfully carry such a bill through the American cesspool of corruption, Congress, will deserve and receive the undying gratitude of millions of people.

Here is a chance for some of our national law-makers to make a name for themselves, that will be both lasting and the reputation of several millions of dollars to improve a trout stream or studhole. Will they embrace the opportunity? Oh! no, certainly not; better ten thousand shameful jobs engineered through the legislative halls, for private benefit, than one beneficial law, that would recognize society.

Such is the argument of men whom we elect to represent the voice of the—people! no, their own private interests.

Charles Greenleaf, a Newark avenue, Jersey City storekeeper, says that four years ago his son developed that he had swallowed some pins and needles while drinking water, and that he has since complained of distress in the stomach. Last Saturday, the boy dressed early, threw up a lizard. The poles have since ceased and the boy is in much better condition.

LOST IN SIGHT OF LAND.

Vessels Wrecked and Many People Drowned in the Storm.

Thirteen Victims, Including a Woman, Reported—Organizing a Life-Saving Crew—A Lighter Sunk and the Captain Drowned.

BARNEGAT, N. J., June 28.—The effect of Thursday's storm, which was a terrible one, may be seen on the beach, which is strewn for miles with debris of living ships and wood. At 4 o'clock, while the wind was blowing a terrible gale, the schooner Iz and A. Babcock went ashore opposite life saving station No. 2, three miles south of Barnegat Inlet. The schooner hailed from Somers' Point and was commanded by Capt. Henry Babcock. She put out from Philadelphia three days ago, loaded with coal, for Boston. The shipwreck is one of the most thrilling that has been witnessed on this coast for many years. When off the station the schooner sprung a leak. The captain was compelled to run his vessel ahead of the wind all day while the crew worked the pumps.

Toward evening Capt. Babcock sighted station 15, and knowing that his vessel could not stand the strain much longer, decided to beach her in the hope of being relieved by the life-saving crew at that station. Station 15, however, was not at his post, and as the vessel began to go to pieces, Capt. Joe Reed, of station 14, three miles distant, went to the assistance of the wrecked vessel, and arrived there in time to shoot a line over the vessel, but the mariners of the crew were on such a high mountain of the sea that they could not reach the ropes through the surf, and the vessel broke to pieces while they were endeavoring to do so. In one hour after the vessel struck the captain and his drowned lost a lot of broken pieces of timber.

Mrs. Hartshorne, the wife of the first mate, was washed overboard and drowned. She was struck by a falling spar while being held by her husband, and was knocked from his arms into the sea. Her husband immediately sprung into the sea in the mate's to reach her. He was afterward picked up on the beach unconscious. A Swede woman swam ashore and was saved. The captain, the mate's wife and the cook were drowned last.

Capt. Joel Ridgeway, of the Barnegat City station, with a volunteer crew pulled across the inlet in a surf boat directly in the face of the terrible storm, with the wind blowing sixty-four miles an hour, but arrived too late to save the dead and to resuscitate the mate and render any help assistance. The Swede woman could hardly speak English, but said that the wife of the mate had borne up bravely from the time of the springing of the leak until the going to pieces of the vessel, when her shrieks were heartrending. Mate Scarborough was from May's Landing, where he left two motherless children. The vessel's cargo consisted of coal. The wind was about sixty-four miles an hour, but arrived too late to rescue the dead and to resuscitate the mate and render any help assistance. DRIVEN OUT OF TOWN.

Reasons Citizens Threaten an Eloping Couple With Punishment.

BRIDGETON, June 28.—Baltimore Palmer, a well known paper hat manufacturer of the Twenty-first ward, brought an action in the supreme court against Christian Paltzner for absolute divorce. The parties were married in 1887 and had no children. They lived happily together until four years ago, when Mrs. Paltzner made the acquaintance of Christian Gutzell, a married man. Soon afterward they left town with Gutzell. They settled in Greenwich village, Cumberland county. Two months ago they were married by the Catholic priest. As soon as Mr. Paltzner discovered the grounds of his wife he brought the suit for divorce. Depositions were sent to the priest, to whom Gutzell and Mrs. Paltzner represented themselves as single. The good father was very indignant, and insisted that Mrs. Paltzner should return to her husband and Mr. Gutzell to his wife. When they manifested no disposition of doing so, the father denounced them, and the villagers were so incensed at the deception practiced upon the small but decent community that they threatened Gutzell and the woman with condign punishment unless they cleared out. Thereupon they quitted the place secretly, and their present place of residence is unknown.

The case was sent to Gen. Horatio C. King, as referee. After taking abundant testimony fully establishing the charges against the defendant, the referee reported in favor of the plaintiff. Justice Cullen gave judgment of divorce absolute in favor of the plaintiff on the referee's report, and a decree was entered by Lawyer W. W. Butcher.

INDIAN CATTLE THIEVES.

Texas Drovers' Grievances Against the Kiowas and Comanches.

DODGE CITY, Kas., June 26.—A regular system of robbery and extortion having for some time been practiced by the Kiowa and Comanche Indians in the Indian territory on herds of Texas cattle while passing through to the northern states, the Texas drovers, forced to self-defense, held a largely attended meeting here to take action regarding it. In some instances as many as twenty-five head of the finest beef cattle were forcibly taken from one herd, and in many cases large sums of money were demanded and had to be paid before the herds were allowed to proceed northward. Resolutions were adopted condemning in the strongest terms this unlawful system, and asking redress at the hands of the government, as well as assistance in stopping these outrageous marauders from further hindering the great cattle industry carried on between Texas and the states and territories north of it.

Mrs. Kelley's Misfortunes.

NORRISTOWN, Pa., June 28.—A large stone house belonging to the Pennsylvania Schuylkill Valley Railroad company, about two miles west of Norristown, was destroyed by fire, nothing remaining but the walls.

The place was tenanted by Mrs. Margaret Kelley, who boarded a number of laborers employed on the railroad. All the furniture was consumed. There was no insurance on either building or contents.

Mrs. Kelley has been the victim of quite a series of misfortunes within the past few years. In June, 1885, a son was drowned. A few months later her daughter ran away with and married one of the boarders, and last December her husband was killed while at work on the new road. The origin of the fire cannot be ascertained.

The Cholera in France.

PARIS, June 28.—A panic prevails at Marseilles on account of the appearance of cholera there. Two deaths have occurred. The commerce of the city is almost totally suspended, all traffic with Italy and Spanish ports being shut off. There is a general exodus of the Italian residents.

The people who have been obliged to vacate certain quarters of Toulon are encamped on the glacis of the fortification. Twelve deaths occurred in that city yesterday. The naval authorities now admit that the cholera was imported by vessels returning from Tonquin. The public are savage in consequence, and insult naval officers in the streets.

Pardoned by Gov. Cleveland.

ALBANY, June 28.—Gov. Cleveland has granted pardons as follows: To Jennie Shiels, convicted in New York of grand larceny in the second degree, and sentenced September 21, 1885, to two years in the penitentiary, there being grave doubts of her guilt.

Alvarado Shears, sentenced in Steuben county, October 9, 1885, to imprisonment in the Monroe county penitentiary for six months. The prisoner is an honest, industrious man, and the assault was a trifling affair.

Coal Prices for July.

PHILADELPHIA, June 28.—The committee of the Lehigh and Schuylkill Coal exchange met and agreed to recommend that no changes in the line and city and harbor prices of coal be made during the month of July. The ruling basis of sales for hard white ash coal at Port Richmond are $4.2 for lump, steamboat, broken and egg; $4.45 for furnace; $4.30 for chestnut and $4.55 for pea. The line and city prices at Schuylkill Haven are $2.75 for lump, steamboat, broken and egg; $2.85 for chestnut, $2.75 for stove and small stove, and $1.50 for pea.

Should Become a Book Agent.

LITCHFIELD, O., June 28.—Mrs. A. Fritz, a very prominent wealthy lady of this place had a miraculous escape from instant death last evening. She was walking along the street during a heavy storm, when lightning struck her in the cheek, followed a watch chain from her neck to her waist, where the current divided, following each limb, tearing the shoes from her feet. The hose and chain were melted in places, and the lady's body blackened and burned, yet she may recover.

New York's Growth.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Trow's New York City directory, which was published in 1865, has just been issued, being the ninety-eighth annual volume of the series to which it belongs. It contains 300,000 names, representing, on the usual basis of five persons for each name, a total population of 1,500,165. The greatest increase of the population has naturally been in the uptown districts, but there has been a growth in the older parts of the city as well.

Wesleyan University conferred honorary degrees of M. A. on Romeo Lamont Green, of Boston; Geo. M. Rowe, of Cincinnati and Jas. T. Schack, of New Brunswick, N. J.

To Our Friends.

The Reform Club of Plainfield having realized generous cash contributions sufficient to defray the entire debt on the property formerly known as the Second Baptist Church, corner of Second street and Central avenue, this city, and funds being likewise available, chiefly through the noble exertions of the Christian Temperance Ladies, to furnish and equip the premises, building when completed, altered and repaired for the practical use of the Club, respectfully but urgently appeal to the liberality and kindly feelings of the citizens of Plainfield and vicinity for additional means to fully complete such needful alterations and repairs.

The good work already accomplished by the Reform Club, under the favoring auspices and smile of Divine Providence and the still greater work awaiting future efforts, certainly commend it to the favorable consideration and support of every friend of humanity.

The pecuniary demands made upon the public for various laudable objects, cause hesitancy on the part of the Club to solicit further aid, but relying as its members do on all upright and generous readers, they are sure to be responded to by a prompt and liberal donation, and by public subscription, which the interest it has already awakened leads to believe, that early and substantial encouragement will follow the appeal.

Donations to the aforesaid purpose to the extent of individual ability and inclination, will be thankfully received, and acknowledged by the officers of the Club, or collectors selected by the Executive Committee, whose names are hereunto subscribed.

Locals.

—The Methodist Episcopal Sunday School will go to Ocean Grove July 11.

—The Plainfield Cresent Band is going to Bound Brook on the Fourth with the Reform Club.

—The usual Saturday evening dance was enjoyed at the Hotel Netherwood on Saturday evening.

—The Elm Park Hotel, otherwise known as the "Yellow Tavern," at Bound Brook, has been closed.

—A pleasant time is anticipated by the young people of the Methodist Church at their social in the lecture room this evening.

—The Sunday Schools of the Trinity Reformed and the First Presbyterian Churches will give an excursion to Ocean Grove on July 15.

—The delightful weather of yesterday tempted many, who otherwise keeps them confined during the week, to take a ride in the fresh air.

—Two North Plainfield women had a set-to Saturday evening at the center of the settlement. The rules were hit-as-you-please, and the encounter was described as quite lively.

—The Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company will probably settle with Michael Reilly, whose horse was killed at the Prospect avenue crossing at Dunellen recently, without any litigation.

—A policeman could be of service in the vicinity of the Liberty street railroad bridge during the early hours of the evening. A crowd of roughs usually congregate there using all sorts of profane language.

—New Brunswick's post office has been removed from Burnet street to the store in Masonic Hall, corner of George and Albany streets. The interior arrangements seem to have been modeled after the Plainfield post office.

—A horse belonging to Mr. Charles Randolph of this city, was left standing recently to a wagon load of coal, on the bank at Hyde's pond. The horse began nibbling the grass, and eventually getting too near the pond, the wagon pushed him into the water. He made frantic efforts to clear himself, but only succeeded in getting deeper in the channel. Mr. Randolph in great alarm arrived on the scene, took in the situation, and quickly swam to the rescue of the struggling animal, which by this time was well nigh exhausted. After unhitching the horse, it swam ashore, but had become so weak that it twice stretched itself on the grass, as if undecided whether to give up the ghost. After a brief rest the animal went on his way rejoicing, minus a portion of the load of coal, which Mr. Randolph, as he left the pond with the water dripping from his drenched garments, concluded he didn't want anywhere as dog that the fishes and water had engulfed it.

How Bound Brook will Celebrate the Fourth.

The Fourth of July will be observed in Bound Brook under the auspices of the Reform Club, and the occasion, it is estimated, will bring out the largest crowd of people seen in that town since the last flood. The people of Bound Brook have periodical floods varying in time from a few months to several years; the last one occurred a few years ago.

It will be an all day affair, and the red ribbon will flutter prominently in the assemblage. At 10 o'clock a grand parade will form on the places opposite the Philadelphia and Reading railroad station, headed by a brass band. Clubs from Somerville, this city and other places together with the home club will be in line. The parade will pass through the principal streets and at 12 o'clock the Declaration of Independence will be read in Bound Brook Hall, after which Ransom Lamb, Esq., will deliver an address.

In the afternoon the festival will be opened at 1 o'clock, when the oration of the day will be delivered by Rev. A. H. Lewis, D. D., of this city. At 2 o'clock addresses will be given by other prominent speakers.

The evening exercises will commence at 7:30 o'clock. Rev. J. B. Taylor will deliver the oration in Bound Brook Hall, followed by excellent music and addresses. An admission fee of 25 cents will be charged for the evening entertainment, the ticket entitling the holder to a plate of ice cream.

A boat and tub race will be enjoyed on the river front at 6 o'clock, p. m., and refreshments will be served afternoon and evening to the club rooms at reasonable rates.

Yesterday's Grove Meeting.

The meeting held in the grove yesterday afternoon under the auspices of the Howell Division, Sons of Temperance, was largely attended. Addresses were made by the Rev. Mr. Kershaw, of Bound Brook, John H. French, President of the Reform Club, John H. Sayres, Thomas Price, James R. Perrine and a German stranger who was passing through the city on his way to Newark. Mr. Van Aitken's little daughter sang several temperance songs with good effect.

Spilled.

An upset occured Saturday afternoon on Broadway, near the Club House, in which a young gentleman and lady were thrown out on the street. The lady was saved from injury, except a few slight scratches, by the prompt action of her escort in catching her. The cause of the upset was a team of goats attached to a rebus wagon, at which the horse took fright.

A Brilliant Game.

Lovers of base ball had an opportunity last Saturday afternoon of witnessing at Elizabeth, when the Crescents of this city and the Elizabeth Athletic Club crossed bats, one of the finest games that has been played in this vicinity for some time. The Crescents having won the toss, chose the field; and the Elizabeths went to the bat. B Stoutenberger led off with a safe hit, Bligh was put out at first, allowing Stoutenberger to reach second base, and Brokaw went out on a foul tip to McMahon. Gummere got first on called balls and stole his second, Scott making a base hit which was not well fielded by Malone. McMahon allowing the ball to pass him, Stoutenberger and Gummere reached home thus scoring two unearned runs. Downes went out by a grounder to Buckley at first base, leaving Scott on second, thus closing the inning. The Crescents on coming to the bat were retired in 1, 2, 3 order and did not reach home to score during the game. From that time no further runs were scored, the E. A. C. being the victors by a score of 2 to 0. The battery for the E. A. C. composed of Davidson and Bligh worked finely, Davidson compelling 13 men to strike out. Scheffler and McMahon for the Crescents did excellent work. Scheffler compelling 8 men to retire after fanning the air. Scott and Gummere carried off the batting honors for the E. A. C., while Buckley and Malone performed similar service for the Crescents. The following is the score:

The Police Board Meeting.

In response to a call by Mayor Maxson, a private meeting of the Police Board was held at the Mayor's residence Saturday evening.

The meeting was called to order at 8:30 o'clock. Present—Mayor Maxson; B. F. Coriell, President of Council; Frank Marsh, Secretary; and John Ross, chairman of the Police Committee. Absent—C. W. Wadsworth.

The purpose of the meeting having been stated by the Mayor, to be to investigate and take action on the charges of immorality against Policeman Kelly, Chief of Police Dodd, who was also present, was called to make a statement of the facts in the case.

After the statement was finished the Chief, by order of the Board, was directed to have the charges duly prepared by the City Attorney, and preferred against Kelly at the meeting of the Council on next Monday evening.

No Billiards for Minors.

On Friday will go into effect the new state law prohibiting a non-licensed person under eighteen years of age to play billiards or pool in public houses of any kind. The law does not refer merely to places where intoxicants are sold, but to all parlors and rooms kept for the purpose of profit. The proprietor who allows persons under eighteen years of age to play will be liable to a fine of twenty dollars for each offense. This fine is to be sued for in the name of the parent or guardian of the minor, and when recovered goes to the overseer of the poor for the use of the poor in the city, town or township where the violation of the act occurred.

It Might Have Been Murder.

Last evening a peaceable family by the name of Adams living on North avenue near the Terrell road were surprised by receiving a storm of mud and stones against their dwelling. On going to the door to see what caused this unexpected demonstration, they were saluted by pistol shots, and were compelled to keep within doors. The guilty party is suspected, and a complaint will be made before the City Judge to-day.

Grove Meeting on the Fourth.

At ten o'clock on the morning of the Fourth a grove meeting will be held by the Howell Division, Sons of Temperance. There will be an oration, other addresses and music. Further particulars as to the meeting will be announced later.

Auction Sale of Livery Stock.

All the stock and material saved from the Cadmus' livery stable fire will, to-morrow afternoon at one o'clock, be sold at auction at Laing's Hotel by T. J. Gillies. The stock includes a number of fine wagons, buggies, blankets, horses, etc.

In the Courts.

In the case of Wright vs. Bowman before Judge McCormack at Elizabeth, the decision of Justice Nadyne which gave the plaintiff $100 and costs was reversed. The plaintiff was granted $75.54.

The Lincoln Club Organizes.

Pursuant to a call published by John W. Murray, the president of the Lincoln Club during the last campaign, some two dozen men assembled at Association Hall, on Park avenue, Saturday evening to re-organize for the coming campaign.

The meeting was called to order by Vice-President Titsworth at 8:30, in the opening speech of the campaign. Mr. F. A. Dunham was elected Secretary. When after much argument it was decided that the Lincoln Club was not a permanent organization; a motion was made and carried that the persons present organize themselves into a campaign club to be known as the Lincoln Club.

J. R. Coward, C. M. Goddard, G. M. Sidle, E. F. Williams and W. M. Stillman were appointed a committee on permanent organization, and the meeting adjourned till Monday, July 7. The roll of the club was signed by thirty persons.

How to Prosper.

An exchange says if you want a good town:
Talk it up.
Write about it.
Help improve it.
Beautify the streets.
Advertise in its newspapers.
Elect good men to its offices.
Pay your taxes without grumbling.
Patronize its advertising merchants.
Be courteous to strangers that come among you.
If you can think of nothing good to say of it, say nothing.
Never let an opportunity pass to say a good word about it.
Do not go 'round to any other town to buy anything you can get in your own town.
Remember that every dollar you invest in a permanent improvement is that much money at interest.

NEW YORK'S NEGROES.

Devoid of Many of the Usual Characteristics of the Race.

["Uncle Bill" in Chicago Herald.]

The negro population of New York, by the way, is curiously devoid of those characteristics which are popularly supposed inseparable from the race. Sixth avenue is a street thronged by them, especially in the early evening, when they go out for promenade after their day's work is done. I watched this procession for an hour yesterday, and saw only two or three persons who answered tolerably as specimens of the plantation "coon." The majority of pale yellowish shade of in the face to a yellowish white; the flat nose gradually became steeply and the thick lips progressively thin; the shambling gate was scarce in the generally graceful walking, and the most numerously preserved peculiarity observable was extreme loquacity, by which the southern negro dialect was more or less retained. Intuitiveness in the African leads him to copy the manners of the white people about him, and so you will find that New York's dusky denizens have come to have been only for a few years in the city, have pretty thoroughly acquired New York attributes.

A curious fact is that for a quarter of a century they have largely occupied the middle ground between the business and the residence districts of the west side, always holding possession of those streets out of which vice has just been driven. The reason for this is simple. Whenever the authorities are by public clamor compelled to drive disgraceful immorality out of a certain street, the houses are left temporarily ingrained in value, because fastidious persons will not live in them. Then the negroes, thereabouts, are compelled to negroes are accepted as occupants. Notorious Twenty-seventh street, lately cleaned up in deference to the wishes of police authorities by the Roosevelt investigations, has already been filled with negro families.

There are quarters in New York peopled by foreign elements to the exclusion of native communities of Poles, speaking their own language, and ruled entirely by their priests; Italians who reproduce the slums of Rome and Naples; Germans who live a hundred thousand—jolly, thrifty, and beer-drinking after the unimpaired manner of the Fatherland; but the negroes do not preserve most distinctiveness beyond that which nations has immovably fixed in them. They live as nearly like fashionable white folks as they can. They do not even stick to the simpler meats which tend to be considered their own. Negro coachmen, barbers, and house-servants are comparatively scarce here. Our coachmen are English and Irish, as a rule; our barbers are German and Italian; our servants are Irish, German, Norwegian, Swedish and French. Only as cooks are negroes found in New York private households. They are scattered through all kinds of work. The woman do a great deal of laundry-work in their houses, but there is no industry that can now be said to belong distinctively to the men. No; the African is holding his own in the metropolis for less than any other element, and that is his only color! A glance at any multitude of him shows how fast he is losing that.

Swinburne's Fit.

[Lorne Doone in Chicago Herald.]

Swinburne, the poet who sang of the languors and lilies of virtues, the rapturous and pagan love, was at one time an inmate of a retreat in the reading room of the British museum. This unhappy little man, scarcely more than a dwarf in stature, with a great head, swollen, grotesque head and blinking whitelashed eyes, was subject to epileptic fits. One day, reading upon a stepladder and working up to a high climax of fancy, he suddenly seized him. He fell foaming at the mouth to the floor, with terrible confusion of overturned steps and only half-suppressed screams of horror. Naturally, a crowd gathered around the sufferer and a physician was soon in attendance. After a time the poet came to his senses, opened his eyes, sat up and looked about him.

Then proceeded from that poetic mouth such an avalanche of profanity, such a chorus of blasphemy and of the vilest epithets that every body and the mothers of everybody who stood about and had seen him in this situation, as few could never portray. Oaths iced and frozen, oaths to curdle the blood, oaths to be scalded, came from those pinched and pale lips till everybody shrank back from the scene in horror, and "Swinburne's fit" will go down forth to the ages one of the horrible traditions of the place.

A Good Excuse.

[Texas Siftings.]

John Lockwich is a humble citizen of a convivial turn of mind. Not long since he came home from a banquet at a very late hour.

"Want you not the last one to leave?" asked his wife.

"Yeh, I vash the last one to leave," admitted the wretched man.

"It's a shame and a disgrace that you are always the last one to go home," responded the outraged wife.

"Don't my fault," responded the unhappy man, "dish all the result of the grandest lunch before I do. [Count] wasn't two other, can I?

INTO THE JAMES RIVER

Struggling to Escape Drowning in Submerged Cars.

Crashing Through a Bridge Into Ten Feet of Water—Marvelous Rescue of Imprisoned People—A Heroic Woman.

LYNCHBURG, Va., June 30.—A railroad disaster of a thrilling and remarkable character occurred on the Virginia Midland railroad near this city. The Washington and New York day express cars were precipitated from a bridge into the James river, and yet, strange to say, not a single life was lost. The escape of forty or more persons was little short of the most miraculous and the scene while their rescue was being effected from the submerged cars was exciting beyond description. The train was the regular day express, which runs through sleepers from New York and Washington and has been attached and both were well filled with passengers men, women and children. All went well until reaching a point about two miles north of Lynchburg, where there is a heavy down grade. The engineer found that the speed of the train was rapidly increasing and though he had shut off steam and applied the air brakes.

To his surprise, there was no perceptible diminishment of the train's motion, and it at once became apparent that the heavy draft and the brakes they were not operating. The speed of the train increased with each revolution of the wheels and during the run to the river, a distance of nearly two miles, the train swept along at the rate of more than a mile a minute. Some of the passengers realized the peril of the situation. Now for the thrilling episode which was so soon to follow.

Upon reaching the bridge the engine, tender and baggage cars left the track, but the smoker swayed so that it struck the girders, throwing it from the track and causing the cars following to pile up on it. Instead of the smoking car torn the sleepers away for a distance of more than a hundred feet and when the heavy sleepers reached the place the strength of the structure gave way, and port and they went crashing through into the river.

The water into which the cars plunged was ten feet deep, and the terrified passengers were of course imprisoned like dogs in pound. Their stifled screams for aid, as the water rose around them, were pitiable in the extreme, and the scene was apparently little room to hope for their rescue.

Conductor William King was thrown from his platform by the force of the crash which but realizing the peril of the passengers he went promptly and heroically to their aid. Procuring an ax he, with one or two other passengers, swam to the submerged cars and smashed in the elevators at the top of the cars. By this time the water had reached that point, and the struggling passengers were clinging to upper berths in the cars in hope to keep from drowning. The screams of the women and children were heartrending. The heroic conductor and other passengers were dragged through the opening and helped ashore until all were taken out safely.

Among the many thrilling incidents was that experienced while rescuing the child of Mrs. J. S. Farden. The terrified woman, while in an upper berth which was fast being flooded with the rising river, took her child old baby through a window and held it there until it was rescued, all unmindful of her own danger. The heroic woman was then rescued herself.

All the rescued passengers were brought to the city and are being cared for at the hotels. The most remarkable that has ever been recorded in the history of railway disasters. All trains will be delayed for two days.

How Kissling's Heir Was Found.

PHILADELPHIA, June 30.—John C. Kissling, comes into a little fortune in a singular way. He is a son of Wolfgang Kissling, who died in April, 1831, leaving property to the amount of $100. The boy had gone away, and his whereabouts were unknown. It was provided in the will of Kissling's that this $100 should go to the son should he be found within three years after the old man's death. If not, then the money was to go to the son's eldest child in Germany. Counsel for the estate advertised widely for information respecting the missing heir, until a man in the interior of Pennsylvania, gave him a clue. It was of the youth whom he knew, and whose description answered pretty closely to the advertisement, had gone west, but when he left he was rewarded for his pains. The counsel obtained a post office directory, and sent letters of inquiry haphazard to the postmasters of a hundred little western towns. In due time the letter was received from a Ackley, Ia., written by the heir himself, giving a detailed account of his wanderings and a history of his family. The three years of grace allowed by the will had elapsed, but he would certainly be all consumed before he could prove his claim. His counsel asked the orphans' court to extend the time. The prayer was granted.

A Huge Mastodon.

MATTOON, Ill., June 30.—The remains of a mastodon have been discovered near here by Wm. Winnings, living in Dora township, Moultrie county. A tusk brought to Gilletsville a day or two ago measured 12 straight, ten feet, and is about one foot in diameter at the butt. It is so much curved that it is only five feet from point to butt. The teeth in the head are also of immense size, each one nine and one-half inches long and four and one-half inches in diameter, there being two teeth in each jaw. The whole skeleton will be unearthed, but will probably prove to be one of the largest ever found.

No Vows Vengeance.

LONDON, June 30.—The Standard prints a letter from Mr. Long, of Dundee, denouncing the "impious action" of the Oregon railway and Navigation company in refusing to pay rent for the Dundee Presbyterian church, way, which is leased from the Dundee company, of which the writer is a member. He says: "Mr. Villard, who has succeeded to Mr. Villard, and says his presidency means ruin. He vows vengeance and says he will fight to the uttermost to protect his interests.

Results of a Cruel Joke.

CLEVELAND, June 30.—Mrs. Maggie Burns is lying seriously ill as the result of a cruel practical joke by three feminine acquaintances. The women, in the absence of Mrs. Burns from home, prepared what looked like a dead body dressed in Mr. Burns' clothes, and laid it on the bed. Mrs. Burns returning in and seeing the supposed body of her husband, Mrs. Burns went into spasms and was attacked with brain fever, which has left her insane in a precarious condition.

Too Heavy a Load to Carry.

PORTLAND, Ore., June 30.—It leaks out that the Oregon and California railway to the Oregon and Transcontinental has been abrogated. Whether it was brought about by the lessees or the bondholders could not be learned, but it has been understood that the lease was a heavy load for the Transcontinental to carry. It is supposed that the Oregon bondholders will operate the road hereafter.

THE CAMPAIGN OF 1884.

New England Business Men Asking Democratic Aid and Sympathy.

American Politics Criticised — Mr. Blaine's Visitors—Gov. Seymour Speaks—Pinchback to Appeal.

A Boom for McDonald.

BOSTON, June 30.—A petition of the Manufacturers' Tariff Reform league to the Democratic national convention, which bears the signatures of 150 manufacturers and business men, is in circulation. The petition asks that the convention will "adopt in their platform" the resolutions passed at a secret meeting of manufacturers and merchants in New York to give relief to the industries of the country. The resolutions referred to are as follows: The abolition of all duties on raw materials, so quickly that we may continue to hold our own in the markets with other manufacturing nations, not one of which taxes raw materials; the adjustment of the tariff on manufactures, approximating nearly the costs abroad of labor, and to insure the crude state will pay the lower rate and manufactures that have further advanced, requiring more skill and labor, will pay the higher rate; and the reduction of the public revenue to a economical setting forth the reasons why raw materials ought to be free of duty, and stating that the manufacturers command the markets of the world. "Give raw materials," it says, "give cheap subsidiary materials to all manufacturers and will open the world's trade to them."

The Presidential Tidal Wave Meeting.

NEW YORK, June 30.—A week ago Mr. Edward Ireland and several other patriotic citizens issued invitations to Gen. Hancock, Senator Bayard, of Delaware; ex-Senator Morton Bliss, Gen. Dix, Gen. Sickles, of New York; Gov. Hoadly, of Ohio, and other distinguished Democrats to participate in a grand ratification meeting to be held in this city at the corner of Fifth and Fourteenth streets at Chicago. The committee of citizens intrusted with the arrangements of the affair met, and Mr. Ireland promulgated the press the following report of affairs:

The temporary committee having charge of the plan of permanent organization for the meeting to be held by the patriotic citizens of New York to appeal to the nation at Democratic convention to nominate the old ticket of 1876, as a duty due to itself and the country, begs to report as follows: The sub-committee reported that they had addressed the gentlemen who were requested to constitute the permanent organization but deemed it expedient to ask for more time in order to await responses from many of them. The replies received from the gentlemen invited to speak were encouraging and patriotism as far as received. Union square was favorably reported upon as the place where the meeting should be held at this season of the year. Notwithstanding that the permanent organization is delayed unavoidably the preparations for the meeting are being pushed vigorously.

Gov. Seymour Speaks.

NEW YORK, June 30.—The Times says: Gov. Seymour was visited at Deerfield, and had a conversation with reference to Gov. Cleveland. He said: "The contest made by Mr. Flower shows him to be a man of energy and capacity, and that he is well liked by the Democracy of the state of Kings, but it seems from such reports as reach me that Gov. Cleveland is the wise choice of the New York delegation as its candidate for the presidential nomination at Chicago. Regard him as a man of great strength in this state. The elements of opposition to him in the state are not to my judgment such as would fail to support him after his nomination. It will be remembered that Gov. Tilden carried the state in 1876, although a distinguished citizen of Massachusetts from this state opposed his nomination at St. Louis then will oppose Gov. Cleveland at Chicago. Gov. Cleveland's course has been an honorable one. He has been faithful to our state, and commands the approval of all fair-minded men, without regard to party. In the present condition of the Republican party in New York, Cleveland is a strong candidate and would be voted for by many Republicans."

Pinchback to Appeal.

NEW YORK, June 30.—A dispatch from New Orleans to The Tribune states that the Hon. P. B. S. Pinchback is out in a card criticising the address of the Republican State central committee issued several days ago. The committee declares that the following resolution, "Resolved, That the state central committee be and is hereby authorized to appoint after the nomination of president and vice-president at Chicago the presidential electors," was adopted by the committee without debate, which delegates to Chicago, and announces that in accordance with these instructions the central committee has appointed a proper time the names of eight Blaine and Logan presidential electors for the suffrages of the Republican and Conservative voters of Louisiana. Mr. Pinchback declares that the resolution was never passed by and indeed was never submitted to the convention, and intimates that he intends to appeal from the action of the committee to the voters of the party.

Pushing the McDonald Boom.

NEW YORK, June 30.—A special to The World from Indianapolis says Henry Watterson, Gen. Virgil Hendricks, Gen. Meeks, McDonald, Hendricks and English were in conference. Watterson was the prime mover of the conference, and pushed McDonald's claims with great vigor. He is for Chicago. The convention was of course the prime occasion of the conference. Mr. Watterson, it is understood, brought tidings of great encouragement to Virginia and Carolina to fight in support for Indiana's candidate. The unmistakable voice of the state convention on Wednesday has directed attention to Senator McDonald's name. Watterson, it is claimed, was diffident on the question of the presenting to the convention the name of Senator McDonald, but he was urged to do so by Hendricks and is rumored that Watterson gave Mr. Hendricks a telegram to, at the conclusion of which Mr. Hendricks promised that he would, "if physically able," name the great Indianian.

Mr. Blaine's Visitors.

AUGUSTA, Me., June 30.—Two members of the Republican national committee made their appearance on the arrival of the Boston train with a view of conferring with Mr. Blaine. One was J. S. Clarkson, of Iowa, and editor of The State Register, and the other is Dan Manning, of Nebraska. Both gentlemen spent the afternoon over the situation in the west, and according to their advices Blaine and Logan will sweep everything before them. Shortly after their arrival they went to Blaine's residence, and had a long talk of the campaign. H. B. Parsons, of Virginia, also was a caller at the Blaine mansion. Hannibal Hamlin was in town, but did not call.

Criticising American Politics.

LONDON, June 30.—The Standard predicts that the coming political campaign in America will be a stormy one. It refers to the situation and doubts that the party

THE CENTRAL PACIFIC

An Action Against the Road by a Prominent Stockholder.

Mrs. Colton Believes the Corporation is on the Verge of Bankruptcy—Sensational Charges Set Forth.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 30.—A statement has been made in a city paper that Mrs. Colton had applied to the court for a receiver of the Central Pacific railway. The statement is premature and somewhat misleading. The document will be filed in Judge Temple's court, in Santa Rosa, next Tuesday, when Mrs. Colton will make application for a receiver for the stocks and bonds in the custody of the Central Pacific.

The grounds set forth are Mrs. Colton's belief that the railroad corporation is on the verge of bankruptcy; that it has been wrongfully brought there by the reckless conduct of the defendants; that a movement is on foot to shut out the stockholders and creditors from the litigation, and that sinking fund bonds to the Southern Pacific sinking fund bonds have been forwarded to New York, consigned to C. P. Huntington, for the purpose of negotiating. The graveness of the charges made to by Mrs. Colton lies in this last allegation, and although it is quite possible that the application may be denied, it has been filed in other hands or the same face value, the world remain that the only negotiable securities had been removed, and that their proceeds been completed by the corporation, relatively worthless, a condition of affairs that would leave the most sacred fund of the company in the hands of a hopeless condition. The history of the application is rather peculiar, and is as follows:

For some time, so the story goes, Huntington has been steadily buying stock in New York. In his strait he has called upon upon the San Francisco office, and a draft has been the consequence, which is driven Charles Crocker almost to his wits end, and made him anything but a happy millionaire. The heaviest demand of all came at the end of last week. On Saturday, June 21, the private secretary of Charles Crocker, was instructed to telegraph to Huntington that $8,500,000 in Southern Pacific bonds would be forwarded to him the next day, and to launch forthwith. This came to the hearing of the plaintiff and his attorneys in the Colton suit, and they, hearing that the only bonds left to the company which had been pledged and not in the sinking fund, at once saw that the company must be passing through a crisis. Investigations were set on foot, other damaging facts were found, and the result was the decision to file the application that was made public Friday, and plaintiff's counsel visited Judge Temple in his chambers and presented the petition. Judge was not at all surprised at the object of his visit and made no objection to the proposition that it should be served on the defendants next Tuesday. When the petition is filed on that day it will be followed by a counter affidavit from the defendants that they are perfectly solvent, etc. Unless something more than this have a transpired, the petition will be considered satisfactory by the plaintiff, and an order will be prayed for, requiring an examination of the books, etc.

Lo, the Poor Indian.

HELENA, Mont., June 30.—Major Allen, the Flagan Indian agent in Northern Montana, reports that the Indians are in a state of great famine from scant food supply. The agent carpenter has furnished thirty burial boxes in the last month, but it is believed the deaths among the Indians will be much greater. Indians have a great dislike to burying the dead, preferring the old custom of placing the bodies in trees or in stone piles on high hills. Many bodies have been interred for more than about a third that die. The death rate is greatest among the children from 5 to 10 years old. The supplies will be exhausted by July 1, and unless a number of 3,000 Indians on the reservation will be left to starve, or subsist on the cattle of settlers. Trouble is feared.

Koshoski's Record.

CLEVELAND, June 28.—The counterfeiter, Mark Koshoski, arrested in New York, was released on bail in this city a few days and his trail marks still appear. He is the fellow that beat the Weidell house out of a board bill by passing a forged check and then skipping out of town. He also beat some Cleveland firms on guide drafts. He tried to play the long lost brother dodge on Tom King, secretary of the police board, but it did not work. He represented himself as a member of the firm of Koshoski's & Co., in Union square, dealers in cloth and paper supplies. Just before he left he sent to Cleveland a supply of cloth cheap for spot cash. It was only just out of Stag Sing when he arrived here.

Shooting a Wife's Tormentor.

WAVERLY, Tenn., June 30.—For some time past Wilson Larkins has been tormenting Mrs. H. Owens by making insinuations against the latter's wife. Larkins displayed a hostile chief near Owens' store, saying that the boys pointed to him by Owens' wife. Owens overheard him, and came out of the store with a shotgun. Larkins fled, but returned soon afterward with a revolver and fired at Owens, who fell dead. The latter did so, carrying the shotgun, and fired upon Larkins, inflicting wounds from which he died in a few moments. The coroner's jury returned a verdict of justifiable homicide.

CONDENSED NEWS.

Dr. Miltre pronounces the malady at Marseilles and Toulon, France, to be real Asiatic cholera.

The glass works throughout Pennsylvania have nearly all closed for the usual two months' vacation.

Kellogg's government envelope manufactory, at Springfield, Mass., has been discharged $10,000 by fire.

The depression in the coke trade is causing a general exit of the Hungarian laborers from the Connellsville coke region.

William Fonland has been arrested in Mc Culloch county, Tex., for the murder of Lieut. Saffell, of the United States army, twenty years ago.

The Webster estate, at Marshfield, Mass., has been sold to Walton Hill. This is the second time in its history that the estate has passed out of the wheeler family.

At Stryker, O., the boiler in a flour mill exploded Saturday, blowing the mill to stones and killing eleven men, all heads of families. The report was heard fifteen miles away.

Abraham R. Warner, an iron merchant of New York, was taken from a coach door in Sixty-fourth street, that city, on Saturday morning by officials of the driver drove swiftly away, and has not been identified. Warner was said heavy drinker and it is believed death resulted from excessive drinking or poisoning. His friends do not suspect foul play and wish the matter to pass without public investigation.

RELIEF OF IRISH DISTRESS.

Heavy Reduction of Rents by the Land Commission.

LONDON, June 28.—The returns already in show that the total reductions made in the rents of the Irish peasantry by the land commission will amount this year to nearly £5,000,000. It is perhaps nearly impossible for people on the American side of the Atlantic to fully appreciate the magnitude of this gain to the Irish people. It not only leaves for circulation among a people impoverishing less than five millions an increased sum of about fifteen million dollars that otherwise would be drained out of the country and spend elsewhere, but it practically reduces Irish taxation 25 per capita. Americans have probably noticed one result—a lessening of demands for the relief of Irish distress. Throughout Ireland the beneficial result is palpable. Poor people who have for years past seldom had a shilling of money in their possession now occasionally may be seen in the small shops hanging in their ability to expend an occasional half sovereign. The general effect upon the temper of the people is very perceptible. The farmers and the shopkeepers who depend upon them are decidedly better off than they have been for several years past. On the other hand the upper class grow bigoted, when trade complex chiefly in supplying the nobility and landlords, complain bitterly of the dullness of trade. This accounts for the conflicting reports which now get out from Ireland. If you go into a first-class shop you hear that trade was never worse; and if you go into a second class shop it is generally admitted that trade was never better.

SIR PATRICK AROUSED.

He Threatens to Encounter a Namesake at the First Opportunity.

LONDON, June 28.—Sir Patrick O'Brien, a tory member of parliament for Kings county, Ireland, who, being called an "Orange Liar" by William O'Brien, home rule member for Dublin, during the debate in the commons early last Friday morning, challenged the editor of United Ireland to go out and fight a duel with pistols on the parliament terrace, was yesterday in a state of furry because the home ruler publicly excused himself for not following his challenge out on the ground that the latter was drunk. Sir Patrick now declares that William O'Brien is both a coward and a liar, and threatens to encounter him at the first opportunity and "clap his little face for him if he doesn't eat his words." The editor is reported to have exclaimed, when apprised of this threat: "If the blatherskite makes any demonstration against me personally, I'll put out his fire by spitting on him." Each gentleman is being egged on by friends to end the quarrel in a summary manner, and it is feared that a collision between the unrelated namesakes is now unavoidable. Sir Patrick is thoroughly aroused, and is proud of his skill with the trigger.

The Egyptian Conference.

LONDON, June 30.—It is reported that Count Von Munster, the plenipotentiary attending the Egyptian conference as the representative of Germany, has already effected a combination with Count Karolyi, the Austrian representative, and Chevalier Nigra, the Italian plenipotentiary, in opposition to the understood arrangement existing between England and France. It is understood that the Italian, Austrian and German members of the conference are already displeased at the length of the recess secured by the French, Turkish and English members, and will attempt to secure a resumption of the council before the ten days expire. This long recess is considered by British politicians a triumphant achievement for Mr. Gladstone, as it will enable him to keep the proceedings of the conference from influencing the debate on the vote of censure which begins to-day, and, by securing the success in the unaffected debate which he hopes to attain, prevent any loss of prestige in the conference.

Death of William A. Beach.

NEW YORK, June 30.—William A. Beach, the well-known lawyer, died at his home in Tarrytown Saturday afternoon. He had suffered for many years with mitral disease of the heart. He rode in his carriage to his physician's house, and while there was seized with a congestive chill. He was taken to his home at once, and died without suffering or pain.

He Will Die.

PITTSBURG, Pa., June 30.—John Lappan, a young man, a son of the proprietor of the Lappan boiler works, went into an empty oil tank for the purpose of riveting some bolts, when a spark from his hammer ignited the gas remaining in the tank, causing a terrific explosion. When rescued it was found all Lappan's clothing was burned off and his flesh was burned to a crisp. He will die.

Four Million Feet of Lumber Burned

BRAINERD, Minn., June 30.—At Pillager Station, just west of here, on the Northern Pacific railroad, a fire totally destroyed 3,000,000 to 4,000,000 feet of lumber, valued at $50,000. The property was owned jointly by Clough Brothers, of Minneapolis, and Hartley Brothers, of Brainerd, and was partly insured.

Is the Jail Strong Enough?

COMANCHE, Tex., June 30.—One Bussmandon, living in the southeastern portion of this county, was arrested for assaulting his daughter. The sheriff, anticipating lynching, prevailed on the guilty man to waive examination and started with him for Waco. There are many doubts if the jail at Waco will prove strong enough to resist a mob.

Seven Men Drowned.

PORTLAND, Ore., June 30.—Saturday two boats capsized at the mouth of the Columbia river, owing to rough weather. Capt. Olson, a prominent pioneer citizen of Astoria; Sam Blair, James Craig, and four unknown men were drowned. The bodies of Olson and Craig were recovered. All the others were swept out to sea and lost.

To Be a Free Port.

BERLIN, June 30.—The city of Bremen has entered the German Zollverein, and will henceforth be a free port of the empire. Bremen will pay half the cost of erecting all necessary bonded warehouses and other buildings, provided the sum to be expended shall not exceed 12,000,000 marks.

The Bartholdi Statue.

PARIS, June 30.—M. de Lesseps has issued invitations in the name of the Franco-American Union for the official presentation to Minister Morton, on July 4, of the Bartholdi statue. M. Ferry, the premier, will be present.

Bad for the Operatives.

LEWISTON, Me., June 30.—The Lewiston mills have shut down for a week. The Bates and other mills will shut down from Thursday till Monday next. The mills of the city will probably close next week each month for the balance of the season.

The Last Survivor.

CONCORD, N. H., June 30.—Joseph Harriman, aged over 97, was buried to-day. He was born in Amherst, Mass., and is the last surviving soldier of that town who fought in the war of 1812.

To Our Friends.

The Reform Club of Plainfield having realized generous cash contributions sufficient to pay for and secure title to the property formerly known as the Second Baptist Church, corner of Second street and Central avenue, this city, said funds being likewise available, chiefly through the noble exertions of the Christian Temperance Ladies, to furnish and equip the purchased building when properly altered and repaired for the practical use of the Club, respectfully urgently appeal to the liberality and kindly feelings of the citizens of Plainfield and vicinity for additional means to fully complete such needed alterations and repairs.

The good work already accomplished by the Reform Club, under the approving smile of Divine Providence and the still greater work awaiting future efforts, certainly commend it to the favorable consideration and support of every friend of humanity.

The pecuniary demands made upon the public for various laudable objects, causes hesitancy on the part of the Club to solicit further aid, but valuing as its members do the all important Temperance reformation they are striving to permanently establish, emboldens them to thus ask and induces them to believe, that early and substantial encouragement will be forthcoming.

Donations to the aforesaid purpose to the extent of individual ability and inclination, will be thankfully received and acknowledged by the officers of the Club, or either member of the Executive or Subscription Committee, the names of whom are hereunto subscribed.

A Crippled Capitalist.

CORNELIUS K. GARRISON.

Commodore Garrison was born near West Point in 1808. He began life poor, and after obtaining such education as the common schools of his day afforded, he went to work at the agest 18 as a boatman upon a craft plying upon the Hudson. At 18 he went to Canada as a builder. The southwest attracted him, and he constructed boats on the Mississippi until 1848. By that time he had accumulated a considerable fortune which he took to Panama, where he engaged in the banking business during the gold excitement. In 1857 he came to New York to establish a branch of his Panama house, but an offer of $60,000 a year from the Nicaragua Steamship company, and $25,000 from several financial companies tempted him to go to San Francisco. In six months after taking up his residence there he wandered back.

In 1860 he returned to New York a millionaire. He invested largely here in real estate and ships. The latter were, for the most part, turned over to the government at the beginning of the late war. Since then he became interested in a steamship line to Brazil, gas companies in this city, Baltimore, Chicago, St. Louis and New Orleans. He is said to be the largest owner of gas properties in the world. At one time he was largely interested in the elevated roads. He bought the Missouri Pacific railroad and sold it to Jay Gould.

He has been twice married. By his first wife he had two children. He has never fully recovered from a paralytic stroke which he experienced a few years ago, or from grief at the death of his son. His second wife, whom he married a few years ago, was a Miss Rankell, of St. Louis. For years the commodore was reported to be one of the richest men in America, his fortune being estimated as at least $75,000,000. On June the 20th he made an assignment, which caused pronounced surprise.

The Birthplace of James G. Blaine.

THE GILLESPIE HOMESTEAD.

In the town of Brownsville, located on the banks of the Monongahela river, about fifty miles above the city of Pittsburg, Pa., is still to be seen the house in which Mr. Blaine was born. It is just now a point of great interest, and is visited daily by hundreds of persons, many of whom carry away with them a relic of some kind as a memento of their visit. The house, now eighty years old, is still occupied by tenants, though it is very much out of repair. It was built by the Gillespies, the family into which Mr. Blaine's father married. It was here that the candidate for president spent his boyhood until he was ten or twelve years old. Mr. Blaine visited his birthplace about six years ago, spending considerable time at this house, the room in which he was born inviting his greatest attention, and in it he spent several hours alone with his memory.

How Mr. Blaine Received the News of His Nomination.

THE RESIDENCE OF MR. BLAINE ON STATE STREET, AUGUSTA, MAINE.

We present above a view of a spot which is visited daily by distinguished people from all parts of the union. It was here Mr. Blaine received the news of his nomination for the presidency. That he did not appear to be at all excited over the fact is evident from the following press dispatch:

"He spent the afternoon in the lower front of his residence on State street, reclining in a hammock under the shade of an apple tree, white with blossoms, apparently perfectly unconcerned at the fact that the eyes of the nation were upon him. His wife and several members of his family were about him. Maggie, one of Mr. Blaine's daughters, was stationed at the telephone in an upper room in the residence, taking the latest news which was telephoned by James G. Blaine, Jr., from the telegraph office. As the dispatches came in Mr. Blaine opened and read them. When the final news came, and the nomination was considered sure, there was no particular change in the manner of the party. Mr. Blaine did not appear affected in any way, but on the contrary exhibited the utmost equanimity. A few minutes later he betrayed a slight emotion as he casually remarked that he owed much to the devoted men who had stood by him for so many years. In speaking of the result he said that he felt all the more gratified because it was an honor that had come to him unsolicited. He had not lifted a finger to secure the nomination, or had made any endeavor in any direction to get it. He had received over seven thousand letters asking him to be a candidate, and had never answered one of them."

He Had No Scnip to Lose.
(Puck.)

"Ach, mein Gott in Himmel! Don't I vas glad I vas pore pait-headed!"

Bill Nye Pilts a Long Felt Want.
(Detroit Free Press.)

I toyed with a daily once which was incorporated to fill a long felt want. I did not know it was loaded. There was a rival daily that had been running two years, and we entered the arena, hoping to win an easy victory over this paper and become a great power in the west. We thought that our adversary wouldn't last more than a month after election, but Thanksgiving came and went and found the Evening Squawker still on deck. The editor would come and borrow print paper of us, and then use it to call us the slime-bedecked and putrid exponent of a still more baneful political faction. We would borrow a font of brevier of him, and characterize his paper as the wailing foundling, dying in the deadly swamp of political filth, wherein it had chosen its bed, edited by the bitter foe of the laundress and Lindley Murray, a man who had evaded justice for forty years, and, not content with the outrage of all moral sense, had declared war on spelling book.

Thus we kept up a spirited contest for a long time.

One day the little, muddy, measly, long suffering features of the Evening Squawker failed to appear.

We won the day, but at what a sacrifice. The smoke of battle cleared away and showed that the victory was not worthy of the carnage. The Squawker had fought us bravely, and now its still, cold form lay in state in the editorial room, the chief trophy, and the usual notice of attachment was tacked on the door.

The editor and myself met on the following day, and he was the more cheerful of the two. He said he felt sorry for me. "I can see what I get hereafter on my family," said he; "you can't see it. I feel guilty if you buy a barrel of flour for your own use, knowing that it will imperil the next issue of the paper. I have passed all that."

And he was right. The quicker a man decides to cease publishing a daily paper where it is felt needed, just simply through a high moral sense of duty, the sooner he will become light-hearted and joyous. I don't know very much, but if there's anything I do know, and know it hard and know it with one hand tied behind me, it is that.
